American newspaper correspondents in Rome were attempting to get a "big" story past the censors last night, and there was a hint that it might relate to an armistice between England and Italy.

Herbert Matthews, New York Times correspondent, sent the following dispatch:

"It is not permitted to write a word from Rome tonight about the big story (section censored) . . . American newspapermen have already been sanctioned* for writing about (section censored) . . . It is hoped a communique will be issued tomorrow or Thursday (section censored).

The Columbia Broadcasting System's Vichy correspondent reported last night that "the visit of Generalissimo Francisco Franco to France is likely to result tomorrow in an armistice between England and Italy."

Petain Expected to Meet Franco

Quoted by the C. B. S. news commentator Elmer Davis, the Vichy correspondent, Courtenay Terrett, stated:

"This will apparently be accomplished through the mediation of Marshal Petain and the Spanish leader, who are expected to meet British and Italian representatives at Villeneuve in southern France."

A dispatch from Vichy last night said Petain was expected to meet Franco in his villa at Villeneuve Loubet near Cannes, and that the two would proceed to Montpellier.

Vichy, Feb. 11.—Marshal Petain, who left Vichy by train tonight for his villa on the Riviera, will probably meet Gen. Franco after his visit to Italy.

Franco is believed to have crossed through France to the Italian border, today, and after the conference that is expected with Premier Mussolini and possibly Chancellor Hitler, he will be returning, it is thought, by Friday. The marshal will stay in his villa at Villeneuve Loubet near Cannes and in all probability will meet Franco there and the two will proceed together to Montpellier, whence the marshal is expected to return to Vichy and Franco to Madrid.

Admiral Darlan, after summoning the American press to make a communication on the subject after the marshal's departure, thought better of it and sent his aide to say he considered it wiser to say nothing and not even correct the false

Nazis Filtering Into Bulgaria In Civil Garb

Many Directing Road Repairs; Sofia Slowly Mobilizing Troops

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 11.—Hundreds of German men dressed in civilian clothes and carrying light baggage have been filtering into Bulgarian Dobruja in the last 48 hours, according to reliable reports received from Varna.

At the same time, it is quite untrue that uniformed Nazi troops have entered the country at any point.

It is clear that extensive preparations for a possible German military occupation of Bulgaria are proceeding apace, but it is not yet a certainty that such an occupation is coming off, or if so, when.

5,000 Believed Present

The Germans appear to be limiting themselves to widespread technical work of a military nature, while slowly building up the number of their nationals of military age in the country. Some diplomatic sources estimate there are no more than 5,000 in Bulgaria, although such figures are mere guesswork.

British diplomatic circles incline to the belief that a new technique for Nazi occupation is being worked out, whereby the number of non-uniformed soldiers here will constantly increase until a situation is reached similar to that in Rumania last October, when the first sizable contingents of the "military mission" arrived. These circles take pains to emphasize that there is little difference between uniformed and non-uniformed troops and that here no "invitation" was forthcoming, as in Bucharest.

Capital Is Nervous

There are now said to be 23 German divisions in Rumania, including five armored divisions and about 500 airplanes. Troop trains were reported to be crossing Hungary all day and 30 Junkers transport planes were counted over Hungarian terri-

Police to Quiz Mrs. Dobert On Krivitsky

Woman to Be Asked to Account For Time After She Drove Exile to D. C.

Investigation of the Krivitsky case hinged last night on the whereabouts of an attractive 30-year-old Grecian woman at the time that Gen. Walter G. Krivitsky was shot to death in a Washington Hotel early Monday.

The woman, Mrs. Marguerita Dobert, told The Washington Post that she drove Krivitsky to Washington Sunday and dropped him near Union Station about 5:30 p. m. so he could catch a train to New York.

But she would not say where she had spent that night, although she acknowledged registering at 10 a. m. Monday at the International House, 1708 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, and sleeping there Monday night before leaving the city yesterday. Krivitsky's body was found about 9:30 a. m. Monday.

Washington police plan to question her today at her home near Charlottesville, Va., where she was found by newspapermen.

From Mrs. Dobert and her husband, Eitel Wolf Dobert, 33, author, lecturer and former Nazi Army officer, came these disclosures:

1. Krivitsky stayed with them and their 2½-year-old son, Stephen, in their two-room log cabin from Thursday to Sunday.

2. Krivitsky bought an automatic pistol—similar to the one found beside his body Monday morning in Washington's Bellevue Hotel—at Charlottesville Friday.

Believe Him a Suicide

He apparently wrote the three death notes, found in the hotel room, on Saturday night at the farm, as he stayed up until 3 a. m., using the Dobert stationery, notepaper which is identical to that of the death notes.

The Doberts—he is undoubtedly the "Dobertov" mentioned in one of the death notes—are the only close friends of Krivitsky so far reached who are not convinced that the former Soviet general was a victim of the dread Russian OGPU (secret police) and not a suicide.

Washington authorities still maintain Krivitsky killed himself, although they were continuing their investigation last night and Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald had not yet sent his certificate of suicide to the Health Department.

It was established definitely, however, that one of the windows of Krivitsky's fifth-floor room was not locked. It was open six inches, detectives said, but added there still was no way a killer could have reached the window from the outside.

Detective Chief Convinced

Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson said he was "more convinced than ever" that Krivitsky was a suicide.

Ballistics tests, he said, proved the empty cartridge found beside the body came from the gun that lay on the floor. The bullet itself went through Krivitsky's head and entered the wall, where it was lost, he reported. Police do not plan to tear down the walls in an effort to find it, he added.

Pathological examination of Krivitsky's body was begun as a routine procedure to determine if he had been drugged. The tests will take about ten days.

Police also were checking on the origin of the death weapon.

Another angle being checked by local authorities was the origin of

Willkie Urges U. S. to Send More Destroyers to England, Predicts War If Britain Falls

CAUGHT IN A RIPTIDE OF ADMIRATION—With women and men pulling on both arms, Wendell Willkie slid across a table in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee room yesterday to get away from the advancing crowd of autograph-seekers. Capitol police and committee attaches came to his aid. (Other Pictures, Pages 2 and 12.)

Give Roosevelt All Necessary Powers, G. O. P. Leader Advises

A grimly serious Wendell L. Willkie yesterday advised the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to give the man who defeated him for President all necessary authority to aid England immediately and effectively.

The defeated Republican nominee, only just returned from London, testified that in his honest judgment, "the only way America can keep out of war" is by rendering immediate material assistance to England.

Should England go down before a Nazi assault, he said he believed the United States would be forced into the war in from 30 to 60 days.

Destroyers Needed Now

A crowd that jammed every square foot of standing room in the Senate caucus chamber, heard Willkie urge that from 5 to 10 destroyers be sent England every month under authority provided in the bill.

Another thing Britain needs urgently, that can be provided in greater numbers by this country, he said, is long-range and patrol bombers to supplement the work of destroyers off the English coast.

Third on his "immediate aid" list, he said, are merchant ships for England to carry supplies to her northern ports, through which "Britain now breathes."

In a resonant voice, that the furthermost spectators could clearly hear, he testified: "I am forced to the conclusion that the only way to

Doctors Accuse GHA of Being Uncooperative

Pressing their argument that founders of Group Health Association were uncooperative and suspicious in dealings with the District Medical Society, defense counsel in the doctors' trial yesterday wrung two admissions from William F. Penniman, G. H. A.'s first president.

These were: (1) that the medical cooperative association never sent copies of its by-laws to the organized doctors' society and (2) whenever Penniman went to consult with a society official he generally was accompanied by some other GHA representative—a "witness," as the defense puts it.

Willkie Talks With Roosevelt, Denies He Is Offered a Job

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie sat in the second floor White House study last night, and for an hour and a half talked about the international situation and war production in England and the United States.

They also talked about Ireland's dilemma in the European struggle.

Willkie revealed this much as he emerged from the White House at 11:40 p. m., stepped into the President's automobile with the license tag 100, and, escorted by a Secret Service man, drove to the Carlton Hotel.

Willkie, who returned Sunday from a flying trip to London, and who yesterday testified for 2½ hours on the lend-lease bill, looked weary as he talked to newspapermen in his hotel suite.

Asked whether the President had offered him a post, he laughed and said there was "nothing to that at all."

He indicated that most of the "chat" dealt with his findings in England and in Ireland, where he interviewed Prime Minister De Valera. He declined to give any details about the conversation.

Old-timers on Capitol Hill thought long and hard, but they could recall nothing like yesterday's spectacle in the Senate caucus room or the extraordinary role that Willkie enacted.

Amid a blaze of Klieg lights, in a room so jammed that foreign diplomats and Senators' wives were forced to stand up and like it, sat the defeated Crusader of 1940 striking a blow on behalf of the victorious Champ—actually pleading that more power be given to the man he once called a would-be dictator.

Yes, Willkie agreed, the powers that would be given President Roosevelt by the lend-lease bill were extraordinary.

"But in my judgement," he said, "this is an extraordinary situation."

The dramatic highlight came when Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, took over

War in Pacific Won't Cut Aid, President Says

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt said yesterday that if the United States gets into war in the Pacific it would not have to curtain the shipment of war supplies to Great Britain.

His statement, widely interpreted as a warning to the Axis powers, came in response to a question at his press conference. The President was asked:

"If the United States got into war in the Far East, would that affect our help to Britain?"

Describing the question as very "iffy"—the type of query he usually declines to answer—Mr. Roosevelt said he saw no reason for not answering. It is perfectly obvious, he said, that the answer is no, that such a war, if forced upon us, would not affect our aid to Britain.

Replying to another question, the President said he did not believe there was danger of the United States getting into war in the Pacific. Beyond this, however, he refused to go into any elaboration of the subject, saying it would bring up matters too iffy to discuss.

The question regarding a possible Pacific war and its effect on aid to Britain was asked by a representative of the Chicago Daily News, a newspaper published by Secretary

370 Machine Tools Leased to Britain At a Dollar Each

Chicago, Feb. 11 (AP).—Louis E. Emerman, who offered last week to lease $5,000,000 worth of used machine tools to defense industries at the rate of $1 each, said today that he had received contracts from the British Purchasing Commission—and checks totaling $370—covering the leasing of 370 machines.

Shipments of the machines, Emerman said, would be made at once to manufacturers in England and Canada and to some domestic industrial plants which have British contracts. Seven other machines, he added, were shipped yesterday to one manufacturer, under similar arrangements.

House Continues Dies' Inquiry; He Collapses After Speech

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday voted, 353 to 6, to continue the Dies Committee Investigation of un-American Activities and struck from the record a charge that more than 100 Fascist organizations "have the key to the back door of the Dies committee."

Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, collapsed in his office after an impassioned denial on the House floor that his committee has shown more zeal in investigating Communists than in exposing Fascist forces.

The Texan is suffering from "overfatigue," according to Dr. Matthew W. Perry, and experienced "a weak spell" after the House debate. "I am going to urge him to rest for a while," Dr. Perry said.

Striking evidence of a new cordiality in relations between the Dies Committee and the Administration was seen as New Dealers joined Republicans and the conservative Southern Democratic bloc in rolling up the vote of confidence for the committee.

The turbulent debate reached its climax when Representative Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, accused Dies of violating the Bill of Rights and shouted his charge that the committee is open to Fascist influence.

Speaker Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, ruled that the statement "impugned the motives" of the Dies Committee. The House, by a unanimous voice vote, expunged Dickstein's speech from the record.

Two other critics of the Dies Committee received scant attention from the House. Representative Marcan-

Jewish Veterans' Auxiliary Plans 6 Blood Bank Parties

Advancing steadily in its work of good will, the Children's Hospital blood bank program was enhanced yesterday with the announcement of more parties to be held for the benefit of the fund.

Mrs. Mitchell L. Novak, president of the Washington Ladies Auxiliary, No. 58, of the Jewish War Veterans, announced that plans are under way for six parties to be held by members of the organization. One member of the organization, Mrs. David Richman, of 1729 Thirty-fourth Street Northwest, already has held a benefit party.

Members planning parties are Mrs. David Sherman, 7110 Ninth Street Northwest; Mrs. Theresa Goldberg, 124 Webster Street Northwest; Mrs. Lillian Katz, 1441 Manchester Lane Northwest; Mrs. Max Weinstein, 2801 Bellevue Terrace Northwest; Mrs. Falk Harmel, 709 Longfellow Street Northwest, and Mrs. Joseph Barr, 815 Dahlia Street Northwest.

Plans were completed yesterday for the American Legion Government Printing Office Post No. 33 benefit show to be held February 28 and March 1 in Harding Hall. Mickey Rooney in "Babes in Arms" and "The Flag Speaks" will be shown in continuous performances from 7 p. m. until midnight on both evenings.

All benefits of the show, as with all parties given for the blood bank, go to aid the Children's Hospital blood and serum "bank" under the sponsorship of The Post, Station WJSV, the American Legion and the American Contract Bridge League.

William J. Cassiday is chairman of arrangements for the GPO program. Last year this post, through similar parties, was the heaviest

Record Crowd Strains Lines To Hear Willkie

A goodly part of the 22,333,801 Americans who voted for Wendell Willkie last November jammed the Senate Caucus Room yesterday to see him in person—or so it seemed.

The largest crowd at a Senate hearing in recent years—and quite possibly the largest in history—flocked to Capitol Hill, milled about the corridors of the Senate Office Building and vainly attempted to squeeze into the huge marble hall where Willkie was to testify.

Would-be spectators began arriving at 6 a. m., and by 8 o'clock a Capitol policeman reported there were over 100 in line. Presumably under the impression that Willkie would testify at the morning session, men and women kept pouring into the office building in such numbers that the police took the unusual step of setting up wooden barriers and guide ropes at strategic places near the entrance of the hearing room.

When the doors opened a few minutes before 10, only a fraction of the crowd was able to find seats inside. The seating capacity of the great, pillared chamber is 500; but seldom if ever during the day could there have been less than 1,000 persons sitting, standing, kneeling, craning necks and straining eyes within those bursting walls.

The multitude outside the room continued to grow throughout the morning, while James B. Conant, president, of Harvard University, and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York were on the stand. When the morning session ended, the hearing room was cleared; and some of those who had been waiting several hours were admitted when the doors were thrown open again at 1:30 for the stellar attraction. By this time, it was estimated that some 2,000 persons were hopefully seeking admission.

Senators and Representatives had extreme difficulty in forcing their way through; the crowd did not recognize some famous faces.

Early Arrivals Disappointed

Ollon McCool, of 12 Westmoreland Avenue, said he and his wife took their places in line at 7:30 a. m. and were constantly reassured by police that they would be admitted soon—but by midafternoon they gave up the fruitless vigil.

Two young Virginia women arrived at about 7:30, too. They stuck it out—in the corridors—until the hearing adjourned ten hours later. Then, as hundreds poured out of the Caucus Room, they made their way in, "just to have a look at the committee table."

Three or four women in the crowd fainted during the course of the day; but both the Metropolitan police detail under Capt. Robert C. Pearce and the Capitol police reported no disorder.

Inside the caucus room one attractive young woman even sat on top of a ladder she found at the rear of the chamber.

A number of seatless spectators had to listen to Willkie's testimony on their knees—in order not to interfere with the view of the audience behind. One tall, well-dressed woman turned on a mild-mannered policeman in fury, snapping: "The only place I'll get on my knees is in a house of worship. I know Senator —— personally, and if you're not careful, young man, you'll lose your job." Some one found a seat for her and the situation was saved.

House Votes to Let Dies Inquiry Go On

tonio (American Labor), of New York, was allowed one minute to speak. This allocation of time, he declared, was "indicative of the undemocratic attitude and activities of the Dies Committee."

Hook Speech Cut Short

Representative Hook (Democrat), of Michigan, was given the floor for half an hour late in the day, after the vote to prolong the life of the committee had been taken. There were less than a dozen members in the chamber when he began his address, and the House adjourned after Hook had been speaking about three minutes.

Voting against continuation of the committee's activities, besides Hook, Marcantonio and Dickstein, were Representatives Eliot, of Massachusetts; Scanlon, of Pennsylvania, and Tenerowicz, of Michigan, all Democrats.

In authorizing the Dies group to continue its work the House voted $150,000 from its contingent fund to finance further committee investigations. Representative Beam (Democrat), of Illinois, was appointed by Speaker Rayburn to succeed former Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, as a member of the committee.

Dies, in his dramatic defense of the committee and his conduct as chairman, said he makes no distinction "between the various types of un-Americanism" and stated that since the Nazi-Soviet nonaggression pact of 1939 the Fascist and Communist agents in this country must be regarded as fellow-conspirators.

Assails Accuser

Turning toward Dickstein, who is chairman of the House Immigration Committee, Dies suggested that the New Yorker could perform a valuable service if he would study immigration laws with a view to barring "subversive characters" from the country—instead of "demagoging" against fellow members of the House.

The committee chairman heatedly answered what he called "whisperings" as to the proceeds from his lectures and magazine articles on subversive activities. He said he had announced publicly that any fees he received would be devoted to "some patriotic cause," that they were banked in a special account and had not been touched for personal expenses.

He said he took his wife and two sons with him on many of his tours, because "my wife has been frightened by threatening notes."

All but a score of some 300 members in the chamber rose and applauded Dies when he concluded his address. Only a few minutes later he collapsed over his desk in the new House Office Building.

Willkie Drives Home a Point . . .

HIS BIG DAY—Leaning over the committee table, Wendell Willkie talks earnestly to members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee as he tells them that the United States should furnish Great Britain with from five to ten destroyers a month. Senators listening are (from Willkie to right) Tom Connally, Pat Harrison, Chairman Walter F. George, Hiram Johnson, Arthur Capper and Arthur H. Vandenberg the bill in the House, addressed a direct appeal to the Senate's Democratic leadership for "tolerance" and modifying changes in the legislation that would weld the whole Nation behind it."

Citing criticism of the "broad grant of power" in the bill, he asked Democratic leaders to "be as yielding as you can" in eliminating unnecessary powers "if there be any in it." He urged "a tolerant position" toward those who ask changes.

Facing Senate Majority Leader Barkley, he said:

"You of the majority do not need their votes to pass this bill but their approval and the approval of the millions of Americans whom they represent will give us the strength of a united people—a strength greater than that of armament, battleships and airplanes."

Then Willkie submitted his own list of proposed modifying changes. He recommended chiefly:

That the operation of the bill be limited to aid to England and the British Commonwealth, China and Greece, with Congress later passing upon possible aid to other nations "subject to aggression."

If possible, a temporary limit on the amount of aid authorized, although Willkie said he realized "the great difficulty in determining such amount."

In addition, Willkie asked several changes in phraseology to reassure persons "alarmed by the unusual powers granted."

And he asked that the President be required to consult frequently with leaders of both parties in Congress.

Clark Quotes Willkie Speeches

The witness protested repeatedly when Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, quoted from Willkie campaign speeches criticizing the President's conduct of foreign relations. Clark asked if he had altered his views then expressed.

Chairman George ruled any witness had a right not to answer any question propounded, but Willkie refused to claim it. He said he was protesting because he did not "see any value to be gained from pursuing those acrimonies."

"I struggled as hard as I could to beat Franklin D. Roosevelt," he said. "But he was elected President. He's my President now."

Once answering Clark, he said he still thought the President could have shown "a little more candor" in his conduct of foreign affairs and he had regarded some of his acts as "reckless." But he said the voters settled such questions in favor of Roosevelt in November. Since hsi election, he said, "the President has been more temperate."

"Just Campaign Oratory"

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, quoted Willkie as saying last summer America would be at war by April, 1941, if Roosevelt were elected.

"That was just a bit of campaign oratory," Willkie smiled.

Last witness to testify before the committee meets in executive session this morning to consider the bill, he was preceded on the stand in the morning by Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, and Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York—both witnesses for the bill.

Dr. Conant testified that "the Axis powers must be defeated" even if it is ultimately necessary for the United States to enter the war. He said he did not think it would be "necessary" if aid was swiftly given. Failure to pass the bill, he said, might either put the United States into war against "desperate odds" or mean the end of the "American spirit" in the world.

LaGuardia Urges Passage

Mayor LaGuardia urged passage of the bill "from purely selfish American interests." The dynamic mayor said he considered the bill "part of the national defense program, and if members were for defense legislation recently enacted "you should be for this." LaGuardia, chairman of a joint commission coordinating United States and Canadian defense, said "complete plans" for joint defense of this country and Canada are now in existence. He said they were based on the assumption "that equipment and personnel will be available to carry them out."

Willkie told the committee it was his firm belief that given effective aid "England will prevail." But he said no man could confidently predict the outcome of the war and he offered "no promissory note."

It was equally his solemn judgment, he said, that aid, if effective, "offers the best chance for us to keep out of war."

He told the committee his recommendation that destroyers and bombers be immediately sent was based on intimate talks with Winston Churchill, who considered these Britain's chief immediate needs.

He took issue with suggestions that the United States had no destroyers or bombers it can immediately spare.

He said he would send bombers now on hand "to the very limit," excepting only those needed for training. He argued that neither military service had any present use for the bombers available, except for training purposes.

Can Spare Them, He Says

Willkie also insisted the Navy has destroyers it can immediately spare despite a statement by Senator Clark that Secretary of the Navy Knox had testified otherwise. These destroyers, he said, should be conditioned here, as Britain has never had facilities available to put all of the 50 previously traded in fighting trim. He argued that the Navy will have new destroyer replacements flowing off the ways at the rate of 15 to 20 in 1942.

America, he warned, must now make a "fateful" decision between alternatives.

The first, "that America withdraw within herself," he declared would inevitably result "in the destruction of our civil liberties, the loss of our freedom, and, eventually war."

He said he favored the second "more realistic" alternative—a policy of full aid to Britain, recognizing an attack on liberty in one part of the world as an attack on liberty here. He said in his opinion this policy gives Americans "their only chance to defend liberty without themselves going to war."

Doesn't Mean War, He Says

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, opened cross-examination with a query on whether Willkie thought the aid-to-England policy should be followed to the end even if it meant war.

"I don't think we have any chance of keeping out of war if we let Britain fall," reiterated Willkie.

"There is only one body (Congress) that has the power to take us into war. I would never vote for war unless I knew public sentiment was overwhelmingly for it."

Vandenberg said Willkie had not understood his question, then asked: "Does this all-out aid to Britain finally include our entry into the war."

"I would say no," replied Willkie.

Barkley told the witness he had been considering Willkie's suggestion for naming the nations to be aided, but asked how that might affect Turkey, for example, should it be attacked.

Willkie said he thought Congress could later pass legislation to aid future victims of aggression.

"Couple of Mad Men Loose"

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, asked if Willkie thought under present conditions "there is any possibility of the United States becoming involved."

"There are a couple of mad men loose in the world, and you don't know where they will strike," replied Willkie.

"If Germany gets the British navy, I think in a brief period we would be at war, because of German aggression."

But he told Reynolds he thought "this bill will take us much farther away from war."

Reynolds asked if Willkie thought that Finland and other nations occupied by Russia would be restored if Britain wins.

"If America gives effective aid, then America will have the power to determine whether the captured democracies of Europe shall survive," said Willkie. "I believe American public sentiment will require that they survive."

Under questioning by Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, Willkie denied he had said he was willing to go to war to aid Britain or that he favored sending American ships into war zones.

Gillette said Churchill wanted American ships to carry supplies. "I can't sepak for Mr. Churchill," said Willkie.

Told British "No" on Convoys

In answer to another question, Willkie said he told British officials that in his judgment the American people would not support use of convoys.

Clark asked what would happen to America if it sent Britain its bombers and other equipment and Germany won. Willkie said he didn't think Germany would win if effective aid were furnished.

Willkie said he could not say now whether he would favor convoying ships if England were blockaded.

"You will have to ask me that question at that time," he told Clark. "There might be 50 factors."

Compliments Glass

Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, asked Willkie if he believed in Virginia bill of rights declarations against cruel and unusual treatment.

"I believe in everything in the Virginia bill of rights and most of the things Senator Glass is for, who is almost the embodiment to me of the Virginia bill of rights," replied a grateful Willkie.

To questions by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, Willkie said swift passage of the lend-lease bill "would not only encourage the British but would give great discouragement to the Nazis.

Another sympathetic committeeman, Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, took up the questioning.

"What you are saying is, there's no advantage in giving England just enough aid to have them licked," Connally said.

"Absolutely," said Willkie. "If we give them enough to do the job, then the threat of war will be removed. That's the only way we can keep out of war."

Nazis Ignore Testimony

Berlin, Feb. 11 (AP).—A German spokesman said late tonight that "at the moment no notice has been taken" of Wendell L. Willkie's proposal to the United States Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the United States furnish Britain with five or ten destroyers a month.

At the time, neither the official German news agency, DNB, nor the press had made public anything of Willkie's statement, although it had been announced that he was scheduled to speak.

the cross-examination of Willkie. It had been rumored that Clark was all set to "operate" on Willkie, using the Hoosier's own words in the 1940 campaign for the purpose.

At one point, Clark addressed Willkie as "Mr. President," and evoked great merriment among the spectators. The word duel between the two men, however, was a grim one. Turning to the record in Al Smith fashion, Clark set out to take Willkie for a ride over the 1940 campaign ground.

Did Willkie recall saying last summer that he couldn't follow F. D. R.'s foreign policy? Did he recall saying that Roosevelt had made inflammatory statements, that he was inciting to war?

"That's right. That's right," Willkie said after each of his campaign blasts was recalled.

But what good did it do, he asked, to rake over the coals of 1940? As far as he was concerned, he had made his appeal to the jury last November 5, and the jury ruled against him. He still thought that President Roosevelt had been too reckless. He still thought he could have been more candid with the American people. But all that was past.

"He was elected President," said Willkie passionately. "He's my President—"

A burst of applause swept the crowded caucus room, notwithstanding that Chairman George had warned against demonstrations. George now threatened to clear the room if it happened again.

Willkie arrived in Washington at 12:30 p. m. yesterday in characteristic fashion. He came down from New York in an Eastern Airlines transport, thereby adding to the formidable flying record he recently compiled in traveling to London and back for his first-hand inspection of the "front."

He was met at the airport by Miss Christie Kennedy, secretary to Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Mark Trice, assistant sergeant at arms of the Senate.

In the past, Willkie has twice chosen to ride into the city with a news photographer. But yesterday he was escorted through a cheering crowd to a limousine which Trice had waiting for him. From the airport he went to the Carlton Hotel, and thence to the Capitol.

So great was the crowd outside the caucus room that Willkie had to be taken in by a circuitous route, through five different suites.

With two police officers paving the way, he came into the marble hearing room at 2:28 p. m., nearly a half-hour late. "Here he comes!" somebody cried, and spectators jumped on their chairs to get a look.

Willkie was dressed in a blue suit, and wore a dark tie with a wandering stripe. He appeared to be as vital as ever, but his eyes were a bit bloodshot, indicating that he was still behind in his sleep.

Photographers swarmed around the Hoosier, shooting him from the floor and from the tables. As if that were not enough, several of them somehow got up on a ledge near the ceiling and began shooting from there.

"They're coming out of the woodwork!" somebody remarked.

Willkie took his seat at the witness table and asked Chairman George if he might smoke.

"Yes, if you have room enough," George said, laughing, and thereupon Willkie broke out a package of the same brand used by President Roosevelt.

There was another delay of 31 minutes while the mimeograph machine was turning out Willkie's prepared statement, copies of which were to go to members of the committee and to the press.

Willkie chatted with reporters and photographers, with messenger boys and with Senators, telling them about his flying trip to London. He seemed entirely at ease.

In testifying, he was extremely earnest, and this earnestness was reflected in the faces of the Senators and spectators. Some of the men at the press tables who traveled with Willkie last year knew this particular Willkie. It was not the Willkie who harangued the voters in a hoarse, angry voice, but the Willkie who used to walk back to the lounge car of the campaign special and indulge in long, hair-down, off-the-record talks.

Count Jerzy Potocki, Ambassador of a Poland that has been devoured by Germany and Russia, stood on the fringe of the crowd, listening raptly.

U. S. at War in East Won't Stop Aid, President Says of the Navy Frank Knox before he entered the Cabinet last summer.

Mr. Roosevelt's answer was regarded as highly significant, in view of speculation that Japan may take action in the Far East soon in an effort to divert the United States from aiding Britain in its war with the European end of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo Axis.

The three-power pact of last September, officially proclaiming the Axis, has been construed here as a squeeze play to stay American aid to Britain or give Japan a free hand in Asia, by raising the threat of a Japanese-American war. Recent reports frobm abroad have indicated Germany was pressing its Far East colleague to further efforts which migh t involve the latter with the United States.

President Roosevelt's statement, and particularly his rephrasing of the question to emphasize that the United States would be forced into war if it went to war in the Pacific, was regarded as an answer to the reported Axis efforts.

The President's statement came only a few hours after Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, new Japanese Ambassador to the United States, arrived in the city. The President was asked when he would receive the envoy. Mr. Roosevelt said the Ambassador would call today or tomorrow, and added that Nomura was an old friend.

Reporters also asked the President to comment on a statement of former Republican Presidential nominee Alf Landon that Government officials and business leaders serving as dollar a year men were engaged in bitter controversy over the defense program.

Did he specify? the President asked.

When the reporter replied that he didn't think Landon had, Mr. Roosevelt added:

Sounds almost like a columnist.

When reporters asked about reports that Defense Commissioner Leon Henderson, New Deal stalwart, had "run out of Washington" because of such controversies with the "dollar a year group," the President said that Henderson had run out of health. He added that he was worn out.

Landon Sounds Like Columnist, Roosevelt Says

President Roosevelt said yesterday that Alf M. Landon, the 1936 Republican Presidential candidate, sounded almost like a columnist in declaring he had found evidence of a bitter controversy in the handling of the defense program.

Landon said in Topeka, Kans., yesterday that while in Washington to testify before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in opposition to the British aid bill he had found some evidence of "bitter controversy" in management of the national defense program.

Men in control of the program, he said, "are being handicapped by selfish maneuvers of a few," whom he described as "trying to protect the position of their own companies at the expense of defense production."

Somebody Pulled Fast One

The House Military Affairs Committee, which is supposed to pass on all Army legislation presented to Congress, learned with surprise yesterday that there is no legal limit to the size of the Regular Army.

While testifying on a minor bill, Brig. Gen. William E. Shedd, assistant chief of staff, observed that the limit on the Regular Army enlisted strength had been removed last year. Several members immediately challenged his statement, recalling that the committee had put through a bill raising the limit from 280,000 to 400,000 men.

Investigation, however, showed that Shedd was right. Arider to the third supplemental defense appropriation bill, rushed through late in the session, waived the 400,000-man limit, without committee members realizing it.

"Why Don't You See JOHNSON About Your Hair?"

Women place a greater value to their hair than men do, and they have less hair troubles. Yet there are few men who would willingly lose their hair. Much of their hair troubles may be attributed to neglect. A receding hairline, dandruff and scalp itch may indicate an unhealthy scalp condition. The time to find out is before your hair is gone. Alaskan Navy Base Workers Go on Strike

By the United Press

Dutch Harbor, Alaska, Feb. 11.—Carpenters working on the Navy's huge new base here left the job tonight in a demand for higher wages.

Carpenters Local 714 "refuses to work on the base unless receiving the local scale," a statement said.

The statement did not include present wages or demands.

Allis-Chalmers Parley Here

With defense officials urging an early settlement, representatives of company and union conferred in Washington last night in an effort to end a three-week strike which has tied up $45,000,000 of defense orders at the Allis-Chalmers plant in Milwaukee.

The deliberations, directed by John R. Steelman, Federal conciliator, went into a night session after spokesmen for the employer and the strikers had conferred separately with William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, directors of the office of production management.

No decision was reached, however, and a further conference was called for today.

Hillman discussed the defense strike situation with President Roosevelt during the day and said afterward he hoped that a settlement might be reached in a day or two.

The Allis-Chalmers strikers are members of the C. I. O.'s United Auto Workers Union.

Meanwhile, a strike at the Chicago tractor works of the International Harvester Co., threatened to spread to the company's Richmond, Ind., plant. Chicago headquarters of the C. I. O. Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee said that a vote at Richmond had been more than five to one in favor of a strike unless the company met union demands by Thursday afternoon.

The Richmond plant employs approximately 1,200 and the Chicago plant, 6,500. Company officials said that several million dollars worth of defense orders had been held up since the Chicago plant was closed on January 29.

At Niagara Falls, N. Y., 300 C. I. O. employes of the Vanadium Corporation of America went on strike over wage demands. The company makes alloy for steel construction.

Railroad Strike Called

Rutland, Vt., Feb. 11 (AP).—Spokesmen announced tonight that the 1,300 employes of the Rutland Railroad would go on strike at 6 p. m. Friday "in order to resist a wage reduction of 10 to 30 per cent."

Representatives of 15 cooperating railway labor organizations issued a statement that the walkout had been declared by each of the brotherhoods "in accordance with the action taken by employes, as expressed by an overwhelming vote."

2 D. C. Guard Units Ordered To Fort Meade

By Marshall Andrews

Fort George G. Meade Md., Feb. 11.—Washington's 121st Engineers and 104th Ordnance Company were ordered today to report at Camp Meade Friday to begin their year of training in the Army of the United States.

When they leave their armory, the District will be entirely denuded of National Guardsmen, with the exception of Company A, 372d Infantry (colored), which is tentatively scheduled to be inducted in March to train at Fort Dix, N. J.

The Engineer regiment, commanded by Col. John W. Oehmann, will send an advance detachment of 50 men here Thursday to prepare for the outfit's remaining 435 men. Arrival of the 104th Ordnance Company, commanded by Capt. Melvin H. Harris, will complete the division's special troops in camp, with the exception of the Twenty-ninth Signal Company of Norfolk, Va. This company was ordered today to report in camp Monday.

Both Infantry brigades of the division, the Fifty-eighth, of Maryland, commanded by Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock, and the Eighty-eighth, of Virginia, commanded by Brig. Gen. George M. Alexander, of Lynchburg, probably will be in camp by February 19, Col. John A. Cutchins, chief of staff, said tonight. The Fifty-fourth Field Artillery Brigade, commanded by Brig. Gen. William H. Sands, of Norfolk, will be the last to arrive.

However, a school for battery officers will be established here as soon as quarters can be completed. Battery A, 111th Field Artillery, of Pikesville, Md., will be moved into camp to serve as a demonstration unit for the school.

Other regiments in the brigade are the 111th, Virginia, and the 176th, Pennsylvania. The Maryland and Virginia regiments are equipped with 75-millimeter guns, while the 176th has 155 millimeter howitzers.

Private First Cla Harry N. Tucker, of Company A, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, from the District, was ordered today to report to Bolling Field for examination as a flying cadet. Corp. Robert E. Metger, Company G, 115th Infantry, Cumberland, Md., also was ordered to Bolling Field for the same purpose.

Troops in camp today, division headquarters reported, totaled 160 officers and 1,045 men. With arrival of the 121st Engineers and the 104th Ordinance Company, they will be brought to more than 200 officers and 1,750 men by Friday night.

The recruit reception center said 1,037 colored selects would be sent Thursday to Fort Huachuca, Ariz. They will be under commander of Lieut. V. R. Wilson.

Noted Woman Dietitian Plans Still Better 'Chow' for Army

Miss Mary I. Barber Will Begin by Touring Posts to Study Menus

MARY I. BARBER

The Army has drafted the services of a woman, a nationally-famous dietitian and culinary expert raised in the sound cooking traditions of the Pennsylvania Dutch, to plan better meals for its soldiers.

Miss Mary I. Barber, food consultant to the Office of Production Management on loan from the Kellogg Co., of Battle Creek, Mich., the War Department announced yesterday, will undertake a study of Army menus with a view to seeing the boys get their vitamins and calories in proper balance and tastily cooked.

Collaborating with the subsistance branch of the Quartermaster General's office in the endeavor, Miss Barber will soon make a tour of Army posts to study first-hand the menus now in use.

"American soldiers are the best fed troops in the world, but we aim to do even better by them," she said yesterday. "Our aim is to give them the very best quality food in proper quantities for adequate nutrition. Fresh and canned vegetables will be served at every meal. There will be plenty of meat and milk and at least one egg a day for each man."

A graduate of Drexel Institute and Columbia University, Miss Barber has been planning meals and teaching cooking, home economics and dietetics since before the World War. During the war, she demonstrated to the women of the country how to save food.

Miss Barber declined to say whether her Pennsylvania Dutch upbringing meant an emphasis on scrapple and German pot roast in the Army, but declared she was looking forward to the job with enthusiasm.

"The boys we are getting in the Army are the cream of the crop," she said. "We want them to enjoy their food as much as they did at home."

A.F.L. Reduces Defense Work Overtime Pay

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 11.—The building and construction trades of the American Federation of Labor today reported they had reduced overtime requirements on national defense projects.

President John P. Coyne of their council also said the National Carpenters' Union had set a limit of $50 on the initiation fees that any of its local units could charge to workers on defense jobs.

In all the big cities, Coyne said, double-time pay had been required for all overtime beyond eight hours a day, 40 hours a week or for work on holidays or Sundays. The council now has established a general policy that no more than time and one-half be charged for overtime on defense work, although the old established rates will continue on private jobs.

In addition to the new initiation fee maximum for carpenters, he said common laborers now had a top of $25, and that engineers and bricklayers had established limits.

The federation itself today proposed that a national war labor board, similar to the one that operated during the World War, be established to conduct dealings between employers and employes on defense projects.

The federation, in a statement prepared for distribution among the members of Congress, denounced measures pending in Congress which would impose "compulsory arbitration" on labor and industry engaged in defense.

"Opponents of organized labor," the statement said, "see in this emergency an opportunity to tear down rights acquired by organized labor in struggles over the years and which have now become the established policy of the Nation."

New Ensigns From D. C. Get Assignments

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 11.—Ship assignments drawn by members of the Naval Academy graduating class from Maryland and the District were announced today by the Navy Department.

The men, who by lot selected posts on battleships, cruisers and destroyers, were graduated February 7 and are now on leave.

Robert L. Leasure, Silver Spring, was commissioned in the Marine Corps. The assignments of the other ten Marylanders who became ensigns follow:

John W. R. Burwell, Annapolis, U. S. S. Quincy; Robert J. Celustka, Annapolis, U. S. S. North Carolina; Burton L. Parke, Annapolis, U. S. S. Bainbridge; James V. Rowney, Baltimore, U. S. S. Enterprise; Charles W. Smith, jr., Baltimore, U. S. S. Concord; Charles W. Gunnels, jr., Chevy Chase, U. S. S. California; John H. Lohm, Kensington, U. S. S. Wilkes; Charles L. Burbage, Ocean City, U. S. S. Detroit; Lyttleton B. Ensey, Owings Mills, U. S. S. Tracy; Howard H. Montgomery, jr., Silver Spring, U. S. S. Washington.

Assignments drawn by the 16 new ensigns from Washington:

David M. Armstrong, Georgetown, U. S. S. Zane; Lynn F. Barry, U. S. S. Nevada; John W. Beatty, U. S. S. Livermore; Elwood A. Cokey, jr., U. S. S. Breese; Russell S. Crenshaw, jr., U. S. S. Maury; Victor Delano, U. S. S. West Virginia; William F. Heavey, jr., U. S. S. Dickerson; James C. Houghton, U. S. S. Hilary P. Jones; Donald B. Hutchinson, U. S. S. Selfridge; John S. Leidel, U. S. S. Ramsey; Roland Rieve, U. S. S. Quincy; Tully Shelley, jr., U. S. S. Drayton; John Sweeny, U. S. S. Woolsey; Thomas B. Wolfe, U. S. S. Herbert; Clarence C. Wright, U. S. S. California; Joseph C. Zirkle, jr., U. S. S. California.

U. S. Drops Its Case Against Longshoremen

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 11.—A year-old anti-trust indictment against the International Longshoremen's Association (A. F. of L.) has been dismissed at the request of the Government because of the recent Supreme Court decision that disputes between unions did not come within the purview of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

In the indictment, returned by a Federal grand jury on January 23, 1940, the I. L. A., its president, Joseph Ryan, and other A. F. of L. union locals and individuals were accused of conspiring to restrain the flow of lumber into New York City.

The indictment was dismissed by Judge Samuel Mandelbaum, the Department of Justice announced today.

[Officials here said last night there are "one or two" other cases in the same category which, after study, might be dropped.—Editor's note.]

The Government had charged that the defendants, in seeking to compel retailers to employ only members of A. F. L. unions, stopped deliveries of lumber to retailers whose employes belonged to the C. I. O. The defendants, said the indictment, had refused to load lumber at the docks or haul it to the yards of the retailers and had used threats and violence to prevent lumber movement by others.

Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold asserted the longshoremen's case "is an example of union warfare being carried on at the expense of the public and labor itself."

He reviewed the charges, said that since the antitrust laws did not apply, small lumber firms were not protected by any law in the situation disclosed by the indictment, and added:

"It is difficult to see any economic justification for this result. Nevertheless, as we read the case of United States vs. Hutcheson (the Supreme Court case), the facts alleged in the present indictment are insufficient to charge a violation of the antitrust laws, even though interstate commerce is restrained and the property rights and security of the employers are disregarded."

3 Die, 6 Hurt In Chicago Chemical Blast

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 11.—A terrific explosion killed three men, injured six others and wrecked a chemical laboratory of Edwal Laboratories, Inc., on the top floor of a 12-story building near the Loop today.

The blast blew off a section of the roof, punched gaping holes in the 10-inch outer walls of the room where it let go, hurled bricks against structures half block away and rattled windows within half a mile radius.

Quickly, firemen, wearing gas masks and groping through fumes and smoke, labored down 12 flights of stairs with stretchers containing the dead and injured.

The dead were identified at St. Luke's Hospital as Jerome Danek, 22, a chemist; Peter Traynor, 51, a millwright, and Julius Sharpe, 23, a janitor.

Chief Deputy Fire Marshal Anthony Mullaney said that the blast apparently was caused by a keg of hydrogene sulphate, a chemical used in making mustard plasters. He added that he was informed that it dropped to the floor from a truck being wheeled by two workmen.

Five Dead, 26 Hurt

Philadelphia, Feb. 11 (AP).—With at least five persons dead and 26 injured, firemen searched a devastated area in the city's populous Latin quarter tonight for possible additional victims of three terrific gas explosions and fire that wrecked a block-long row of homes.

The blasts—the first at 5 a. m., the second at 5:15 a. m., and the third four hours later—hurled the fronts and roofs from four brick houses in Greenwich Street in south Philadelphia, cracked pavements wide open and sent terrified men, women and children scurrying from their homes.

The dead:

James Clarke, 54-year-old policeman, crushed by falling debris as he rushed into a home to save a family after the first blast.

Frank Ruhl, 56, an insurance patrolman, buried when the wall of a house fell into a street.

A woman and two girls, identified as Mrs. Angelina Trerotala, 49, in whose home the first explosion occurred, and her daughters, Lena, 21, and Marie, 15.

The disaster was described by Herbert M. Packer, chief of the Bureau of Housing and Sanitation, as the "worst in the 29 years I've been with the city."

Britain Will Go Slow in Disposing Of Securities Here

By the Associated Press

Sir Edward Peacock, of the British treasury, said yesterday he would go slow on the marketing of about $900,000,000 of direct British investments in the United States to make sure it is done in "an orderly fashion."

Sir Edward, who came to the United States for the special purpose of handling the sales, told reporters that he had made no sales yet, and would tell any prospective buyers of British assets to "wait a bit."

He explained he wanted time to study the value of the assets and the possible methods of selling them. He declared that he had no stock market prices or similar ready standards to measure the values of the assets he is handling. Another British agency is selling the stock market securities of the British.

Rep. Mansfield's Son Reported Improved

Bruce Mansfield, son of Representative Mansfield (Democrat), of Texas, was reported improved last night, after he had suffered complications resulting from an attack of pneumonia.

He has been in Mount Alto Hospital for two and a half months with pneumonia and was recuperating when infection set in. Mansfield was reported able to walk last night.

U. S. Far East Policy Declared Aid to Facism

Japanese aggression in the Far East can be stopped only if the United States does not enter the European war, and if we support Soviet Russia in defending China, Frederick V. Field, executive secretary of the American Peace Mobilization, said last night.

More than 300 persons in a "Stop Aiding Japan" mass meeting at First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest, heard Field denounce this country's present policy in the Far East as one that "tends to prolong the conflict merely to keep the status quo."

He accussed the Administration, in failing to place an effective embargo on Japan, of "adjusting itself to compete with the fascists on their own terms." Passage of the lend-lease bill by the House bears this out, he said.

The logical result of this policy, Field said, is the prolongation and spreading of the European war, followed by an imperialistic peace and the dominance of Fascist elements in this country.

Owen J. Lattimore, director of Johns Hopkins University's School of International Relations, said that Gallup Polls show an overwhelming majority of United States citizens opposed to Japanese aggression, but that they are evidently unwilling to do anything effective about it.

Red Cross Supplies Sent to Europe Total $19,496,805

Relief supplies sent by the American Red Cross to war victims in Europe and the Orient reached a total value of $19,496,805 up to February 1, with January marking the heaviest shipments since the beginning of the war, it was announced here yesterday.

"Current relief being sent to France with the cooperation of the British ministry of economic welfare which passed the Red Cross mercy ship, the S. S. Cold Harbor through the blockade, will be given only to the children, and sick adults in unoccupied France," the announcement said.

Miss McGeachy Speaks Before Stamp Club

A smiling, blonde Englishwoman from the British Embassy embodied something of her country's spirit last night, as she spoke with matter-of-fact calmness about war's havoc, in an address before the Collectors' Club of Washington.

Miss Mary Craig McGeachy, who arrived in December to serve as press officer for the economic warfare section at the embassy, told the stamp collectors how dealers in the little second-hand bookshops in London have been carrying on in spite of the war.

"The dusty little shops are dustier than ever now. The dealers never know when a window will be blown in. And a window blown in is very dusty business indeed," she said in smiling understatement.

The Collectors Club, meeting at Thomson School, celebrated "Penny Red" Night, the approximate anniversary of the appearance of the Penny Red stamp of Great Britain, 100 years ago on February 10. C. H. Vaughan displayed for the club approximately 500 stamps from his Penny Red collection.

Proceeds of $40 from an auction of stamps, donated by members and by the British Embassy, went to the British War Relief Fund.

Goldsmith Gifts Amount to $3,000

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith have sent the couple gifts of more than $3,000 for their recent golden wedding anniversary.

A typographical error in yesterday's Post made the gifts seem to total $300.

The gifts are to be added to the Goldsmith Educational Fund for the college education of needy boys and girls. A reception was held in honor of the couple Sunday night at the Jewish Community Center.

The John Roosevelts Going to South America

Boston, Feb. 11 (AP).—Mr. and Mrs. John Roosevelt will leave Boston tomorrow for New York to board the S. S. Santa Paula for a two-week cruise to Venezuela by way of Bermuda. The President's youngest son said it was "purely a pleasure trip." Their nine-month-old son, Haven, will live at the White House during their absence.

Judge Not Sorry She Destroyed Nazi Flag

Los Angeles, Feb. 11 (AP).—Municipal Judge Ida May Adams says she has no apology to make for burning a Nazi flag.

Secretary of State Hull requested Gov. Culbert L. Olson yesterday to investigate the incident.

"I shall be glad to give a complete report," said Judge Adams. "I have received 500 letters from all over the country and Canada. All but four complimented the act.

"I like the German people, but I have no respect for Hitler and the Nazi flag. It is not the flag of the German people, and I don't respect the Nazi brand of vandalism."

$775,000 in Cash, Jewelry Vanishes

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 11 (U.P.)—Roe Wells, of New York, late today reported to police that $475,000 in cash and jewelry valued at $300,000 were missing from the winter residence he and his wife maintain on exclusive Star Island.

Wells refused to give details, except to say that $400,000 in cash, which had been kept in a secret drawer in Mrs. Wells' dresser, was found to be missing Monday. He said that later a suitcase containing another $75,000 in cash and the $300,000 worth of jewelry disappeared from the closet in which it had been concealed. Police did not believe robbery was involved, but they would not discuss the case further.

Production Office Names 3 to Help Army Buy Foods

The Office of Production Management announced yesterday that Donald M. Nelson, director of the purchases division, had appointed three special advisers to help the Army Quartermaster Corps form plans for procuring perishable foodstuffs.

The three are William Price, of Buffalo, N. Y., former president of the Jacob Dold Packing Co.; Alec Searle, of Oakland, Calif., former meat buyer for Safeway Stores, and Ralph C. Samsell, Sacramento, Calif., formerly with the American Fruit and Produce Auction Association.

Sidney Hillman, OPM associate director general, announced appointment of Eric Nicol, formerly in the Budget Bureau, as his administrative assistant.

Free French Join in Chase Of Italians

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Feb. 11.—British and "Free French," fighting in the jungles of southern Ethiopia and across the desolate south Libyan desert, reported daring marches today which threatened anew to tear Italy's empire to shreds.

"Free French" headquarters in London announced that a motorized column under Col. Leclerc had completed a march of 600 miles across the desolate Libyan desert and taken several of the oases of the Cufra area which dot southeastern Libya and afford Italian forces their chief means of intercommunication.

The "Free French" thus were in an air base in the area was stormed February 7 after a destructive air attack, and that "our operations are still progressing satisfactorily." The Italians were declared to have suffered heavy losses.

Outposts Destroyed

This was the same French force which in late January made a surprising raid 800 miles from the Lake Chad area in French equatorial Africa to destroy the Italian air base at Murzuch, in southwestern Libya.

The "free French" thus were roaming a great part of the remote interior of Premier Mussolini's Libyan colony, destroying his desert outposts and squeezing his control to the corner about Tripoli.

South African forces, moving on a front of 30 to 40 miles, penetrated southern Ethiopia to a depth of 50 miles.

The South Africans captured several posts dotting the frontier zone northeast of Lake Rudolf, and threatened two important road junctions which link western Ethiopia with Italian Somaliland.

Italian forces, composed mostly of native warriors, first resisted fiercely and then broke and ran, dispatches said. Many prisoners were taken.

For the first time in days the Cairo communique made no mention of Libya, where the force which captured Bengasi is standing about 400 miles from Tripoli.

With all major air bases in Libya except Tripoli now in British hands, the Royal Air Force spent its time pounding the Italians in Eritrea and in their Dodecanese stronghold on the Island of Rhodes, in the eastern Mediterranean.

Heavy bombers, hitting Rhodes for the third time in a week, dropped tons of bombs at Calato airdrome, nad the observers reported ten aircraft destroyed on the ground and airdrome buildings left in flames.

British headquarters said today that Gen. Tellera, commander of the Tenth Italian Army, had died of wounds suffered in fighting south of Bengasi.

Berlin Admits R.A.F. Attacks On Wide Scale

By Percival Knauth

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Feb. 11.—The Royal Air Force yesterday and last night lost 27 planes in a series of day and night raids extending from Norway to the channel coast of France and including attacks on nine different points in northern Germany, according to German reports.

Another midday raid was said to have been launched by British planes against Calais yesterday, with the Germans claiming two attacking planes shot down.

It is apparent from the German reports that the R. A. F. has suddenly increased its activity in the past 36 hours. Last night's raids, so far as the number of objectives attacked is concerned, were on a larger scale than reported here for some time.

The German air force, according to the high command, engaged in reconnaissance over Britain by day and bombed several British airports in the course of the night. Eleven British planes were reported destroyed on the ground during the night's attacks, bringing the total British losses to 38 machines. Several more planes were severely damaged in the raids on the British airports, it is added.

British the More Active

Two German machines were reported missing, making the ratio for the day 1 to 19 in Germany's favor. The greater activity, however, appears to have been manifested by the British.

On the Mediterranean front, the Germans took a hand in the proceedings in Cyrenaica, where, according to the high command, German bombers attacked a seaport. Malta was likewise reported attacked "successfully," while observation planes cruising over Suez reported seeing two freighters "sunk as a result of operations of bombing planes."

Hanover is the only point named by the high command as bombed last night. The British bombers dropped a large number of bombs, mostly incendiary, on this as well as eight other objectives. The Germans say no damage was done to military or industrial objectives, but a number of civilians were killed and wounded.

Attack on Berlin Repelled

An attack on Berlin, it is claimed, was warded off before the British planes reached the alarm zone of the capital.

Yesterday afternoon a German bomber reportedly destroyed three grounded Vickers-Wellington bombers and damaged five other in what is described as a "daring low-altitude attack" on Scampton Airport. The German machine was apparently first taken for a British plane, several of which were landing when the German put in his appearance. The German was able to cruise back and forth over the field several times, it is stated, picking out his target before dropping his bombs in a dive-attack.

Units of the British navy bombarded the coast of Flanders last night, but were driven off soon after the German coastal batteries began returning the fire, the high command says. Further reports state that the British warships were approaching Ostend and opened fire at a range of between 20 and 25 kilometers. The German fire, it is stated, was almost immediately effective, so that the British retired.

Nothing Daunts Terrific Spirit Of British, Actress Declares

Lady Hardwicke Is Optimistic About Outcome of War

By Lucia Giddens.

Post Staff Writer

"The terrific spirit of the British people—nothing seems to daunt them. That's why I'm optimistic about the outcome of the war."

Lady Hardwicke, wife of the English actor, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, and herself an actress, quietly said those two sentences yesterday with more heartfelt fervor than perhaps any lines she ever projected across the footlights.

In Washington for the first time and for only five days, she paused in the midst of a busy day to talk about the cause for which she now is working—funds for hostels for mothers and new babies being evacuated from large cities to the English countryside.

Small and blonde—her nickname is "Pixie"—Lady Hardwicke sat in a corner of the Carlton Hotel lobby and modestly answered a question about her own stakes in the war.

Two Brothers in R. A. F.

"My two brothers are in the R. A. F. The younger one, 24 years old, is flying a Wellington bomber, regularly from England to the continent. My other brother is in Canada now, training other men. My two sisters are driving ambulances in England. One of them, an actress, has been appearing in a play at matinee performances in London and driving the ambulance at night," Lady Hardwicke said simply.

Since she and her son, Edward, 8, came in August to join Sir Cedric in Hollywood, they've had word of a blow at their own hearthside in England.

"Strangely, it wasn't our London house that was hit, but our house in the country about 25 miles away," she said. "We got a message that a land mine had exploded near it." Although it was made uninhabitable at the time, it has now been requisitioned by the military, she added.

Lady Hardwick and her husband have been instrumental in sending several thousand dollars already in donations from this country to the fund for the mother-and-baby hostels, run by Mrs. J. B. Priestley, wife of the English novelist. The money is being sent through the British War Relief Fund of Southern California, she explained.

Met in Play 15 Years Ago

Serious as she talked about the war, her mood lightened as she answered a question about her stage romance with Sir Cedric. They met, some 15 years ago, in a play, "The Farmer's Wife," in which he had a principal role and she was a young girl in the cast.

At that time he was playing old men's roles—complete with whiskers. "I always saw him with the whiskers, so when he asked me to lunch, I didn't recognize him at first at the place where we were to meet," she laughed.

She married him 14 years ago—without the whiskers.

For the last three years, while he has been playing numerous important roles in Hollywood, she has commuted between England and America, and carried on her own stage career in Britain. After war was declared, she turned her career into service for her country and visited many R. A. F. camps to present one-act plays for the men.

Genoa's Guns Replied Feebly To British Fleet, Witness Says

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 11.—The British naval attack on Genoa at dawn Sunday completely surprised the Italians and it took their shore batteries 15 minutes to open up, the Exchange Telegraph Agency's special correspondent with the fleet said in a delayed dispatch received today.

When the shore defenses did open up, the correspondent said in the dispatch written Monday, "their firing was as feeble as it was badly aimed."

"No more than 20 shells were fired at the British ships and not one pitched nearer than 500 yards," the dispatch went on. "As we steamed up the Gulf of Genoa to attack we saw no patrolling ships or aircraft and the much-vaunted E-boats, if any were in the neighborhood, remained in harbor.

"When the big British warships left their base and turned eastward into the Mediterranean only a handful aboard knew Vice Admiral Sir James Somerville's intentions, but the following notice soon appeared in the ships' daily orders: 'There is a possibility that the ship may be in action tomorrow morning.'"

Challenged from Shore

The shadowy monsters steamed up the Gulf of Genoa about dawn and "high snow-capped peaks of a mountain range appeared suddenly out of the thick white mist which blanketed the coastline," the dispatch said.

"The coast looked pleasantly peaceful in the gathering day, and I thought of the tremendous shock which awaited the sleeping fortress as the gray guns in the fore turrets were elevated silently . . .

"A few minutes before the bombardment began we were seen from the shore. White and green lights flickered out the challenge: 'Who are you?'

"In a matter of seconds we sent our reply. A great spurt of red flame shot from the battle cruiser Renown's side and with a terrific roar the first salvo of 15-inch shells screamed toward the distant targets.

"We were steaming parallel to the coast aboard the battleship Malaya. High above the targets our spotter planes were dodging a vicious hail of antiaircraft fire and constantly signaling directions to the guns."

2 Bombers Get to Fleet

When the shore batteries came into action, "their aim was so bad that escorting destroyers abandoned a smoke screen they had started laying," the fleet correspondent said.

As the Malaya's guns blazed away at the objectives in the inner harbor, "choking clouds of smoke and cordit fumes swept over us. Doors were blown off and cabins were wrecked by the concussion."

When the battleships had disgorged their great shells the correspondent said British planes returned to signal the success of the bombardment.

Then the warships turned away at full speed with antiaircraft guns manned to meet the menace of Italian bombers.

"The fighters successfully broke up bomber formations during the day, but in the afternoon two Italian planes got through.

"A terrific barrage greeted them and only three bombs were dropped. They exploded in the sea a half mile away on our port side and the same distance behind the aircraft carrier Ark Royal, which apparently was the target."

War Department's Public Relations Agencies Merged

Secretary Stimson yesterday announced creation of a Bureau of Public Relations in the War Department, to consolidate all agencies handling such matters under his control.

RICHARDSON

Officials said the public relations activities at the department would be considerably expanded. As evidence of the enhanced importance with which public relations are regarded there, a ranking Army officer, Maj. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, jr., was named director of the bureau.

The public relations branch, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff, and the current information section of the Office of the Undersecretary of War will be combined as part of the new bureau.

Gen. Richardson, a native of Charleston, S. C., served at A. E. F. headquarters during much of the World War. He commanded the First Cavalry Division at Fort Bliss, Tex., before coming to Washington recently, and is given much of the credit for the development of horse tactics which have made the Cavalry a potent factor in the present war plans.

R. A. F. Attack Dots Hanover With Flames

By James M. Minifie

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, Feb. 11.—The British navy and the R. A. F. struck hard at Germany and occupied territories last night and this morning, when large forces of heavy bombers hammered at Hanover and Rotterdam during the hours of darkness, while at dawn units of the navy bombarded the German-occupied port of Ostend.

After a six-hour pounding with high explosives and incendiaries, there were "a multitude of fires of every shape and size," in the industrial area of Hanover, returning pilots reported.

At Rotterdam the raid started at 7 in the evening and lasted far into the night, the objective being the important oil storage depots lying along both banks of the River Lek, west of Rotterdam.

Many fires were observed at Ostend as naval guns hurled salvo after salvo of heavy shells onto the harbor works. No casualties or damage was sustained by the British forces, the admiralty reported.

Four British aircraft were reported missing after the widespread operations over Germany and occupied territories. In addition to these main attacks, Britain still had planes to spare to harry targets in northwest Germany, two airdromes in Holland, Boulogne Harbor and Cherbourg.

In contrast to the hammering sustained by the Nazis, Britain passed a quiet day after a night marked only by slight enemy activity. Despite a brilliant moon, Nazi activities were confined to the east and southeast of England last night. Very little damage was done and there were very few casualties, the ministry of home security announced.

Fires "too numerous to be counted" were seen over all the target area in the main and industrial districts of Hanover, as the R. A. F. attack mounted to a crescendo.

Within a few minutes of the arrival of the first aircraft soon after 8:30 in the evening, there were great fires. These lit up the targets for later arrivals.

One returning pilot said:

"There were more fires than I had ever seen before in any town."

"Though we were flying many thousands of feet up," one pilot said, "the inside of our aircraft was lit up almost as though it were on fire itself."

Franco Expected To Visit Petain

impressions that had been spread abroad.

The two most credible theories remained that the meeting is taking place either to announce an enlargement of the Axis or to consider proposals that may have been put forward for a mediation of the European conflict.

It is known that certain circles feel that the time is approaching when peace could be declared between France and Italy and France and Germany and it is thought that the opinion of Vatican circles has been that there is still a possibility for peace between Britain and Italy and even an end to the entire conflict.

Petain's part in the negotiations would be merely an informative one. If mediation is in the air it is possible that he could be very helpful, especially in supporting the role of Gen. Franco, one of his old pupils in the war school, who was closely cooperating when the marshal was Ambassador to Spain.

Petain left his hotel this evening, accompanied by Gen. Laure and other members of his personal staff.

The official voyages have been accompanied by extraordinary police measures. Telephone service in the south of France has been suspended. All conversations in foreign languages have been forbidden. There have been numerous preventive arrests in the region through which the official personages must pass. Among these are Communists and Spanish Loyalists, and even, according to one report received here from Arles, the arrest of two former German Social Democrats now refugees in France.

The precautions are obviously more for the protection of the caudillo than for the marshal—but they are also for reporters who are not in the least welcome on the trip.

Admiral Darlan, Gen. Huntziger and Interior Minister Peyrouton saw the marshal off tonight. Mme. Petain accompanied her husband and their car was decorated with flags and flowers.

There is still no information as to where the meeting that Gen. Franco is bound for will take place or who exactly will take part in it. French officials explain this intense secrecy by the necessity of protecting the safety of those who are to take part in it and they also say that what takes place across the border is none of their affair.

U. S.-Built Plane Outperforms British Hurricane in Test

By Drew Middleton.

Associated Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Feb. 11.—In a 10-minute mock air duel, a Curtiss Tomahawk fighter outmaneuvered and outsped a British Hurricane over this production station where the American-made Tomahawks and Mohawks are assembled for the Royal Air Force.

"That's a dashed fine machine," declared the Tomahawk's pilot as he clambered out.

"I had my legs on the Hurricane and I could even turn inside him."

The "enemy" who piloted the Hurricane, one of Britain's best fighters, came up with sour expression.

"You turned inside me—never thought I'd see a plane that could do that to a Hurricane," said he. "The Tomahawks are faster than I expected. You were fast enough to catch me."

Because the "fight" took place at less than 1,000 feet the Tomahawk, known in the United States as the Curtiss Hawk 81, didn't have a chance to demonstrate the climbing ability of its Allison engine.

"If it had been the real thing he'd have had me at a worse disadvantage," the Hurricane pilot declared. "He would have been able to climb faster and maintain superiority of attacking position."

The Tomahawk pilot said the ship was "a dream to fly." He said he put it through the battle with only 10 minutes of rehearsal.

There is ample indication here of the size of the British purchases of American craft. There were many Mohawks (Curtiss Hawk 75A4) all ready for service. Their resemblance to the Spitfire—the plane that saved England — is striking.

Also here for inspection were the Brewster Buffalo I—(Brewster 339); the Grumann Martlet I (Grumann G36A) and Maryland I (Martin 167) bomber. Pilots and ground crews were enthusiastic about these models. They praised the climbing speed of the pudgy Martlet and the Buffalo's maneuverability.

The Martlet is a fleet air arm fighter. The Brewster is used by the R. A. F. The Maryland, which can be used as a dive-bomber—until now a weak spot in British aerial offense—a night fighter, or a day bomber, was called "better than Blenheims" by a pilot who had flown both types.

In addition to these types, it was learned that the British gave "full marks" to the Boston II (Douglass DB 7) and the Catalina I (Consolidated PBY 28).

The magazine, Aeroplane, lists the speeds of the American planes as follows:

Tomahawks, 330 miles an hour at 15,000 feet; Maryland, 316 at 12,000; the Martlet, 325 at 13,500; the Buffalo, 330 at 15000; the Boston, 325 at 13,000, and the Catalina 190 at 10,500.

Significant of Britain's interest in the all-important race for height was one pilot's plea that "what we want from the United States is greater operational altitude."

Athens and Its Port Undergo First Night Raid of the War

By Ben Ames.

United Press Staff Writer

Athens, Feb. 11.—Italian bombers tonight subjected Athens and its nearby port of Piraeus to their first night aerial attack of the war, shattering workers' homes in the tenement district of Piraeus and burying civilians in wreckage.

The attack, during which no bombs fell on Athens itself, followed 48 hours of intensified Fascist aerial attacks on Greek cities and towns throughout the nation, including six centers said by the high command to have been bombed today.

The air bombings were believed in Greek quarters to be Premier Mussolini's reprisals for recent defeats suffered by his forces on all the Albanian battle fronts and what was described as the "complete failure" of 46 separate Italian counterattacks since he sent Gen. Ugo Cavallero to Albania to assume command.

Tonight's Italian air raiders began dropping parachute flares on Athens about 7:30 p. m. but there were no bombs and the raiders could not be seen from the blacked-out streets of the capital.

Searchlights pierced the sky and tracer bullets criss-crossed overhead.

An official communique told of Italian air bombings during the day of rural districts around Janina in the Western Pindus Mountains to the north, at Preveza on the Ionian seacoast, Larissa, the Corinth region and the Heraclion district on the island of Crete as well as at Piraeus.

An official government spokesman said tonight that Greek infantry had stormed and captured an important 7,000-foot mountain peak after fierce fighting and that Greek guns had inflicted heavy losses on "the retreating Italians."

(The Greek radio heard in Budapest said that an Italian attack in the Progradet sector on the northern front had been repulsed with many Italian casualties and that a Greek counterattack has captured great stores of war booty. British planes were reported to have bombed the road between Elbasani and Valona.)

In the Klisura sector, the government spokesman said, local patrol action took 27 Italian prisoners.

In addition to the four Italian planes shot down yesterday and today three others made forced landings, it was stated.

On the southern front the Greek drive along the Adriatic coast upon Valona was said to have reached a point about 7 miles from the seaport.

THE Strategic MIDDLE ROUTE

WHEN Abraham Lincoln sought a strategic route for a transcontinental railroad to unite East and West, he chose the path first marked by buffalo herds . . . the same Overland Trail followed by the 49ers . . . the direct, middle route across western America.

Today, as our National Defense Program speeds ahead, shippers know how well Lincoln planned. Union Pacific is relied upon for fast, dependable transportation of materials required for both National Defense and industry's normal needs. The Strategic Middle Route offers every advantage of prompt service between the East and the West.

And for travelers to and from the great western states served by Union Pacific, its "strategic route" reaches more of the scenic wonderlands, National Parks and metropolitan cities of the west than any other railroad. Whether you Ship or Travel . . . use Union Pacific.

'Free Italian' Group Formed To Aid Britain

By The Associated Press

London, Feb. 11 (AP).—A "Free Italian" committee appeared in London today bolstered by facilities of the British Ministry of Information and pledged to seek the overthrow of Benito Mussolini and help the British toward victory.

Acting with the blessing of the British government, if not, as yet, with its official recognition, the committee issued a manifesto asking the support of "all who are opposed to dictatorship" and "loyal to the cause for which the Allies are fighting."

The committee said it sought "to reconquer for Italy her civil liberties" and "to redeem her "national honor, so besmirched by the mad-dog politics of the Fascists."

At least two officers of the committee, the secretary, Dr. Carlo Petrone, and the treasurer, Antonio Zanelli, formerly were interned by the British government as enemy aliens.

It is known that the British expect the committee to play an important part in this nation's campaign to achieve internal collapse in Italy by undercover methods similar to those employed by the exiled governments of the Netherlands, Belgium and Norway and the "Free French" group here.

Those behind the movement said there were 10,000,000 Italians living abroad, many of them anti-Fascist.

Anti-Nazi Rumanians in England, under Virgil Tilea, former Rumanian Minister to London, have organized a similar committee.

London, Feb. 11 (INS).—An Athens radio broadcast, picked up in London tonight, said dissident Fascists meeting in Rome on January 15 had decided to send former Ambassador Dino Grandi back to the British capital to "sue for peace" but that the meeting had been broken up by police.

Many persons were arrested and court-martialed, the Athens report stated.

tory en route east.

A German army corps believed to contain four or five divisions is reported established in the Rumanian Dobruja. The Rumanian oil tanker Campina tied up at Burgas on the Black Sea today and, according to some sources, this ship contains refined gasoline ready to supply planes or motor transports.

There is considerable nervousness and not much enthusiasm noticeable in Sofia. A train of German tank cars bearing Russian oil from the Caucasus via Varna to the Reich was wrecked today about a mile from the Yugoslav-Bulgarian frontier on Bulgarian territory.

About 30 tanks and 2 locomotives piled up in complete ruin and an estimated 500 tons of oil was lost and seven persons were killed in the smash-up and accompanying fires and explosion, while puddles of black petroleum formed in the valley below the track. Telephone and telegraph connections were broken. The trunk line to Belgrade was still out of commission late tonight.

The official report states that the accident resulted from excess speed and faulty brakes, but there is much gossip about sabotage.

A jittery atmosphere is evidenced in various ways. Departures of a few Greeks led to untrue reports that the Greek Legation staff was sending its families home, and that all Greek nationals had been ordered to leave.

Raymond Leddy, an American diplomatic courier, was taken off a train at Plovdiv on a false charge of having taken photographs in a forbidden zone, but was later released with apology, although his passport was mislaid in the process.

American Minister George H. Earle made a strong written protest to the foreign minister and profuse apologies were made for the error.

Winston Burdett, American citizen and representative of the Columbia Broadcasting System, and his wife, an Italian citizen, were refused entry into Bulgaria at the frontier, although they had proper visas. But after a legation protest they were permitted to enter for two days.

The impending possibility of absorption by Germany is occupying everyone's mind. Germans in ski clothes can be seen supervising the strengthening of roads and the shoring up of bridges. Quantities of gasoline have been brought to the airports recently. The number of Germans stationed at Balkan mountain range observation posts is reportedly being increased, and there are persistent reports of the presence of mufti-clothed German officers among the tourists present.

Minerva, the Cat With a High I. Q.

door sticks or the paw slips, Minerva merely rings the bell and stalks in like a lady, tail in the air, when someone answers.

This was the report that sent a Post reporter and photographer to the home of W. H. Hantzmon, an Interior Department employe, last night to view Minerva.

But Minerva remembered that a cat can look at a king and she stared right back instead of performing. Her mistress got on the other side of the parlor door and called, "Kitty, kitty, koo," to no avail. Minerva looked at the varnished door, covered with the claw-marks of earlier escapades and sneered.

It took the screened back porch, finally, to put her in the mopd. Minerva arched her back and stepped up an back daintily, like a tight-rope walker warming up. She looked at the door and started to turn away again, when suddenly a blast of cold air came out of the west. Minerva leaped.

She grabbed the door knob in her front paws, grooved one rear claw into the door, the other into the jamb, then wiggled back and forth like a shimmy dancer until the knob turned.

Minerva's other tricks, her mistress explained, are playing with toes exposed by short bed covers and hiding in transoms and leaping on the backs of strange visitors. But it's door opening that creates the greatest problems, especially in winter time.

"You see," Evelyn said, "we can't teach her to close the door behind her."

British Reap Benefits of Sums Duce Spent on Bengasi's Port

By Larry Allen

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Mediterranean Fleet, Feb. 11.—The British navy has taken over the spacious harbor of Bengasi and is turning it swiftly into a base for operations in the central Mediterranean which may play a vital part in attempts to knock Italy out of the war.

The British regard Bengasi as one of the most important prizes to fall into their hands since Italy entered the war. The city has a naturally fine harbor, and the Italians spent large sums in recent years for improvements from which the British are now preparing to reap the benefits.

Possession of Bengasi has enhanced Britain's mastery of the Mediterranean, military circles asserted, by giving her a naval base on the North African mainland relatively close to the midway point along the sea.

Hitherto Britain's only central Mediterranean base has been the island of Malta, isolated between Gibraltar and Alexandria.

Bengasi is 600 miles west of Alexandria, and fleet units based there would be within easy striking distance not only of Tripoli but Italy herself. It is about 400 miles from Bengasi to Tripoli, 425 miles to Sicily and 460 miles to the toe of the Italian "boot."

Fleet Had Stellar Role

Coastal protection for British and Allied shipping in the Mediterranean also can be provided on a broader scale by units based at Bengasi, while communication between Italy and Tripoli will be made correspondingly hazardous, naval experts said.

The Italians lost two destroyers and four small freighters in Bengasi Harbor, the British said. The ships were not identified by the British, who said that essential harbor facilities were intact despite damage inflicted by the Royal Air Force on dock areas, jetties and some naval establishments.

The fleet has played a highly effective role in British successes against the Italians. Battleships, cruisers, destroyers, and little gunboats have aided the ground forces by shelling the retiring Italians all along the coast since the push began at Sidi Barrani in Egypt.

British officers, however, said they were not overlooking the fact that German dive-bombers now operating in the Mediterranean from Italian Sicily could cause them trouble. Hence the British hurried to dig in and consolidate their coastal gains.

Fleet units already have begun the job of transporting Italians captured at Bengasi to internment camps in Egypt.

Fleet Back from Genoa

Madrid, Feb. 11 (AP).—Dispatches from La Linea, Spanish city near Gibraltar, said the British squadron which bombarded Genoa Sunday arrived at the fortress and naval base today.

Italian Press Reflects Anger Stirred by Shelling of Genoa

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Feb. 11.—The indignation which is felt over the shelling of Genoa by the British fleet on Sunday morning comes out in full today in the Italian press.

A marble monument is going to be erected to commemorate what one newspaper calls "this cowardly attack." "Vile, piratical and iniquitous," are some of the other adjectives used.

The Tribuna claims that an Italian naval squadron "which was cruising in Sardinian waters raced at top speed toward the Ligurian Sea as soon as it had learned of the presence of enemy vessels in the hope of engaging them, but they, instead, preferred to withdraw and avoid combat, favored by the presence of a dense fog."

Giovanni Ansaldo, as usual, writes the most frank and clear editorial on the subject. According to him the British aims were primarily psychological and propagandistic, and he admits that "the blow was accurately studied and boldly delivered." From the material viewpoint of shelling Genoa and getting away it succeeded, he continues, but "the moral failure was complete." The calm and firmness of the Genoese were exemplary," Ansaldo continues. The only thing was that "some men could not see how it was possible that an enemy squadron could arrive in front of Genoa in full daylight. It is natural that it should be so."

Ansaldo concludes by warning that every city along the Italian coastlines of the Tyrrhenian and Ionian Seas are "necessarily exposed to the same risks as Genoa."

It is still claimed that not a military objective was hit by the hundreds of shells which poured into the city. Among the civilian objectives listed were houses on the Via Vingti Septembre, Via Galata, Piazza Colombo, which is the main station square; the Dome of San Lorenzo, a wing of a maternity hospital, an elementary school and a nuns' home. The Piccolo adds that an abandoned training ship was sunk and that a trainload of skiiers was hit.

Meanwhile, all foreign diplomats were notified today that they could not leave Rome without written permission. This drastic order was conveyed to United States Ambassador William Phillips orally this morning and will be put formally into writing within a few days.

This is the most drastic part of a general campaign against the way information, as well as foreign people are getting around. It is understood that Italian diplomats and officials in Rome have received orders to see foreigners only when necessary and to be extremely careful about what they say.

A. M. A. Head to Talk At Doctors' Assembly

Richmond, Va., Feb. 11 (AP).—Dr. Frank Lahey, of Boston, president of the American Medical Association, will be a principal speaker at the twelfth annual assembly of the Southeastern Surgical Congress here March 10-12.

Dr. Frank Johns, of the Johnston-Willis Hospital here, is general chairman for the assembly.

Gift to Smithsonian

The comb of a wasp nest 80,000,000 years old has been given to Smithsonian Institution, it was announced yesterday.

The earliest known relic of the social insects, the fossil marks an important turning point in the earth's plant history. The wasp, a pollen-carrying insect, developed at the same time as a sudden outburst of flowering plants. The blossoms presumably would have vanished, scientists say, if the wasps did not happen to come along at the same time.

a set of new automobile keys found among the dead man's belongings. Some friends said Krivitsky had bought an automobile recently, others said he hadn't.

From Krivitsky's acquaintances over the country came more stories to refute the police theory of suicide.

Murder Kerensky Says

Alexander Kerensky, pre-Soviet premier of Russia, told The Washington Post by telephone from New York:

"I am sure it was a murder . . . if it was not a murder, then it was a suicide provoked by a direct menace. I understand that they had been menacing his son, whom he loved dearly."

Krivitsky's wife Tanya, and 7-year-old son, Alek, have been hiding in a New York apartment. One of the death notes, addressed to them, said "I want to live very badly but it is impossible."

Kerensky, who headed the short-lived Menshevist regime between the downfall of czarism and before the rise of bolshevism, once was Krivitsky's mortal enemy. That was when Krivitsky was a high official in Russia's international spy organization, and Kerensky was a refugee from the Lenin regime. They became friends after Krivitsky broke with Stalin in 1937—the year of the "blood purge"—fled to France and then to the United States.

Miss Suzanne LaFollette, New York writer and second cousin of the LaFollettes of Wisconsin, told the Associated Press in New York:

"If it is a suicide, then it is a murder—he was hounded and hounded."

It was Miss LaFollette to whom one of the three death notes was written, and she said Krivitsky had "told at least two persons he would be murdered and it would be made to look like suicide."

Says He Was Warned

At one time, she said, Krivitsky "was approached by three agents of the OGPU." She added: "One of them told Krivitsky to stay out of the midtown area of New York if he didn't want to get into trouble. The man said, 'we work in threes—we've been on the lookout for you constantly.'"

Isaac Don Levine, who collaborated with Krivitsky on a series of Saturday Evening Post articles purporting to divulge secrets of Bolshevist international intrigue, told the Associated Press in West Palm Beach, Fla., that he know of no reason why Krivitsky would take his own like.

Krivitsky was "terribly disturbed," Levine reported, by the assassination of Leon Trotsky in Mexico last summer and believed the plot was organized in the United States.

Albert Goldman, attorney for Trotsky, said in Chicago that he and his associates had been negotiating with Krivitsky for an investigation of the exiled Bolshevist leader's death and declared "that might have been a factor in what, according to my opinion, was the assassination of Krivitsky."

Dies Fears Other Killings

To the testimony of Krivitsky's acquaintance, Chairman Martin Dies of the House Committee on un-American Activities added a declaration that "what happened to Krivitsky may happen to a lot of others."

Dies, whose committee in 1939 heard Krivitsky's account of Soviet espionage in the United States and elsewhere, then closeted himself with aides.

Later he announced "the question of murder or suicide" was "for the District authorities to determine after a thorough investigation of all facts."

Investigation of the movements of Mrs. Dobert after leaving Krivitsky in Washington revolved on her explanation that she spent Sunday night with "friends" she did not want to involve.

First Washington person known to have seen her was Mrs. Raymond B. Morgan, a friend, of 1749 Corcoran Street Northwest. Mrs. Morgan, who met the Doberts in Switzerland several years ago, said Mrs. Dobert first appeared at her home about 9 a. m. Monday and the two of them attended a movie Monday night.

After spending that night at the International House, Mrs. Dobert went to the Morgan home, according to Mrs. Morgan, to pick up a rug she owned, and left for Charlottesville about noon.

Mrs. Dobert told International House employes and Mrs. Morgan that she had received a telegram from her husband calling her home because he was leaving unexpectedly on a lecture tour.

On reaching the farm, 12 miles northeast of Charlottesville, last night, Mrs. Dobert explained she had invented the telegram as an excuse to return to avoid further questioning.

She told a Post reporter that she was so shocked on learning of Krivitsky's death through newspapers that she left immediately to see her husband and confer on what they should do regarding the police investigation.

She said she felt worried because she did not communicate with police before leaving Washington, but she thought it her duty to return home.

While police planned to investigate the Dobert angle, Attorney Waldman announced the Federal Bureau of Investigation had declined to enter the case.

"But," he added, "I will go to President Roosevelt, if necessary," to obtain a Federal investigation.

Waldman said he still believed that his client may have been murdered by Russian agents.

Lieut. George Darnall, chief of the Washington police homicide bureau, left for Charlottesville shortly before 1 a. m. today. It was understood he would spend the rest of the night in a Charlottesville hotel and go to the Dobert farm this morning.

Krivitsky's body, meanwhile, remains in the city morgue as pathological tests are made.

Cabin Krivitsky Stayed In

RUSSIAN VISITED FORMER NAZI OFFICER—Eitel Wolf Dobert—the "Dobertov" mentioned in Gen. Walter Krivitsky's death note—is shown with his son, Stephen, 2½, in the cabin (top) 12 miles outside Charlottesville, Va., where the former Russian OGPU agent stayed for three days before he was shot to death in a Washington hotel. Dobert, a former Nazi army officer, broke with the Hitler regime in 1933. His wife drove Krivitsky to Washington Sunday

Friend Tells How Krivitsky Tried to Break With Past

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 11.—In the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains, 12 miles from here, Walter Krivitsky, once one of the dominating figures of the Communist revolution in Russia, prepared himself for death in a log cabin where Gen. Thomas Sumpter, an American revolutionary hero, lived as a boy.

The story was told today by the man through whom Gen. Krivitsky, Western European chief of the Soviet military intelligence, hoped to make a break with his Stalinist past.

His name is Eitel Wolf Dobert, a German trained in a Prussian military academy who became a Nazi and then dropped the tenets of Adolf Hitler for those of democracy.

Dobert today said he fled Germany on the night the German Reichstag was burned in 1933 and "seeking only peace and freedom" came to his remote cabin in the Virginia woods via Switzerland and France.

Dobert, lecturer at the University of Virginia and author of "Convert to Freedom," related today how he had met Krivitsky at the New York home of a writer friend two years ago, how the Russian had become imbued with his preference for the rural life and how, when he had decided to move to Virginia, Krivitsky had proposed that they undertake the back-to-the-farm movement together.

He revealed also that the gun that killed Krivitsky was purchased in Charlottesville after both of them had agreed that they needed "protection" in a place so remote.

Dobert and his attractive brunette Greek wife, Marguerita, 30, whom he maried at Geneva during his flight from Germany, agreed that Krivitsky was a suicide, though judging from his actions during the last four days of his life his self-extermination was "unthinkable." They told this story:

Krivitsky came to their cabin last Thursday for the purpose of making final arrangements for moving from New York his family—Tonia, his wife, and Alex, his son, aged 7.

Soon after his arrival Krivitsky, who had mentioned to Dobert the need for firearms during Dobert's visit to New York last January, observed a pistol in the log cabin and was informed a similar weapon could be purchased in Virginia without the formality of a license.

Practiced Shooting

Dobert and Krivitsky went to Charlottesville and bought the automatic pistol found with Krivitsky's body in the Bellevue Hotel in Washington. Back at the cabin Dobert and Krivitsky engaged in target practice. Dobert said he then noticed that the ammunition Krivitsky had bought for his gun was "dum-dum" with the lead split so as to make a gaping wound.

Dobert recalled observing to Krivitsky after the target practice: "What a terrible wound a bullet like that would make if a man should put that gun against his head and pull the trigger."

Krivitsky, Dobert said, sat up until after 3 a. m. Sunday writing letters on Dobert's stationery. The "letters"—it developed later—were the notes found in Krivitsky's room at the Bellevue.

Dobert said he was convinced Krivitsky was a suicide because of the "letters." He recalled, also, that his friend on that fateful Sunday morning had walked alone for nearly an hour about the farm in the moonlight.

Mrs. Dobert, mother of Dobert's son, Stephen, 2½, said she would believe Krivitsky's death as assassination save that she considered it impossible for an assassin to have followed Krivitsky on the journey from the remote Virginia farm to Washington.

Mrs. Dobert revealed that while driving from the farm to see friends in Washington Sunday afternoon she had taken the wrong road and had come by a circuitous route.

Dobert said that his only contact with Krivitsky had been "human contacts." He explained that there was no political alliance between them. Both, he said, had taken out their first papers for American citizenship and wished only for a new life together, a democratic and peaceful life on a Virginia farm.

Dobert said he had become converted to democracy while lecturing on National Socialism in France and other countries before 1933.

Dobert and his wife both related that Krivitsky during his stay at their farm cabin and during the ride to Washington had appeared in the best of spirits, told many anecdotes and seemed cheered by the prospect of a "new life." Only once or twice, they said, he turned gloomy and asked them both to take good care of his wife and son "after I'm gone."

Fears Neighbors' Opinions

Dobert was fearful that revelation of his existence through Krivitsky's death should lead his neighbors to consider him a Fifth Columnist.

He explained his "Convert to Freedom"—one of several books he has written both in German and English—as the story of a Nazi's learning that "not all of national socialism is gangsterism and that at one phase of its development the German revolution contemplated demorcacy." He said he was trying to sell "Americanism to Americans."

When Mrs. Dobert dropped Krivitsky near Union Station in Washington Sunday night she asked him, she says, referring to his new gun: "Do you have your artillery?"

She said he replied somewhat grimly:

Bank system and president of G. H. A. during 1937, its first year of organization, highlighted the fifth day of the trial in District Court of four medical groups and 20 individual physicians on charges of violating the Sherman Act by conspiring to restrain the Federal workers' health cooperative.

A Government witness, taking the stand shortly after noon and undergoing examination and cross-examination the remainder of the day, Penniman will give further testimony today. He will be followed by Dr. Michael J. Davis, of New York, an expert on medical economics.

Turn Back Calendar

Seeking to prove to the jury that the District Medical Society, one of the four groups under indictment, was the offended party, rather than GHA as charged by the Government, Defense Counsel William E. Leahy elicited testimony by Penniman to the effect that:

Neither the GHA by-laws, its contract with Home Owners' Loan Corporation, membership forms nor any other comparable forms were ever supplied to the District Medical Society for inspection and advice.

Only the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, parent of HOLC, had authority to divulge terms of the HOLC-GHA contract to the medical society.

Although he was a trustee of the cooperative, Penniman did not know from what fund came the salary of its business administrator.

Both sides—Leahy on the one hand and, for the prosecution, John Henry Lewin and Grant W. Kelleher—turned back the calendar to 1937 in trying to prove their cases. This was the year of Group Health Association's founding for the purpose of enabling Federal employes to contract for medical care on a pre-payment, group practice basis.

Tells Story of Conferences

Their questioning of Penniman and Raymond R. Zimmerman, HOLC personnel director in 1937, brought out for the first time intimate details of conferences among GHA, HOLC and medical society officials preliminary to the launching of the medical cooperative in November of that year.

These discussions included one in which Dr. Thomas E. Neill, one of the 20 individual defendants, was offered the medical directorship of the cooperative.

Vague on many dates and incidents, Zimmerman said he was present on the occasion Dr. Neill was sounded out on the idea of his heading GHA. The doctor said he could not accept without taking the matter up first with the society, Zimmerman testified.

The witness declared that he could not remember Dr. Neill's having said that "if it is legal, ethical and economically sound it's the job for me."

Penniman testified the offer was made at the home of John W. Childress, assistant to John H. Fahey, chairman of HOLC. Previously, he said, Dr. Glenn I. Jones had declined an invitation to assume the GHA medical directorship.

Questioned on Data

The group health enterprise was described to Dr. Neill in the presence of Horace Russell, then the general counsel of HOLC, Zimmerman and himself, said Penniman, Dr. Neill at this time, in the early spring of 1937, was president-elect of the District Medical Society, scheduled to take office the following July.

Describing a meeting of GHA officials, including Zimmerman, Dr. Henry Rolf Brown and himself, with the medical society's executive committee on June 24, 1937, Penniman told the jury:

"We wanted them to have full information concerning Group Health Association."

When Leahy, in cross-examination, demanded to know why, in that case, GHA did not accede to requests for copies of by-laws and contract forms, Penniman said he was sure that many society members already had these data.

The witness admitted, however, that he saw no doctors in possession of by-law copies at either of the joint meetings, one on June 24 at the society's headquarters and the other a month later in the HOLC Building.

Of the latter meeting, Elsie Sadler took the stand to testify that she and another stenographer took down the proceedings in shorthand. Penniman said the medical society officials, when they were hosts at the June meeting, also had stenographic notes taken.

Opening Snubbed, He Says

At the joint meeting in July in the HOLC Building, Penniman said he got the impression the doctors would be favorable to the GHA scheme if the association functioned simply as a "collection agency," with the physicians themselves doing the work and having the authority.

Under direct examination by Kelleher, Penniman said that a GHA-sponsored dinner at the Hotel Mayflower on October 31, 1937—the eve of the clinic's opening—was snubbed—in a polite way—by Dr. Neill, as well as by all but one of the hospital superintendents who were invited.

The witness told further how a GHA employe, Mary Frances Steuart, was brought to Garfield Hospital seriously ill only a few days after the clinic opened its doors, only to lie uncared for in a hospital room while a surgeon hesitated to operate because she was a member of the group plan.

Only when Dr. Allen Lee, the patient's physician and a member of the GHA staff, assured Dr. Herbert H. Schoenfeld, the surgeon involved, that the patient would be registered as his (Dr. Lee's) private patient, rather than as a GHA case, did the operation take place, said Penniman.

Dr. Schoenfeld had been summoned to the hospital by Dr. Lee who, while having courtesy privileges at Garfield to practice medicine, was not admitted to perform surgery.

Penniman said that, as a result of this incident, he and a number of group health trustees called at the office of Dr Neill, president of the District Medical Society, to protest.

This visit was followed up by a letter, in which Penniman reminded Dr. Neill, in 1-2-3-4 order that: (1) no hospital is "justified in refusing admission to any patient in need of hospital care; (2) that membership in the society is "not a condition precedent to being accepted and placed on the courtesy list of local hospitals;" (3) granting by hospitals of courtesy privileges to doctors is based on merit and competence, and (4) "that to falsely charge a physician with incompetence subjects the accuser or accusers to suit for libel."

Col. J. C. Northcott Recovering in Florida

Miami, Fla., Feb. 11 (AP).—T. C. Northcott, 96, Luray, Va., cavern owner and philanthropist, was said today to be much improved after a siege of influenza and kidney complications.

Col. Northcott owns the Luray Caverns. He presented the Northcott memorial carillon to the town of Luray as a memorial to his wife.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

MARCH OF MUSIC. March will come in like a perfect lamb of a lion—in the night spots. Here are some topflight prospects . . . Ida Mae Clark, Washington's best known and most popular accordionist, will arrive in the Lounge Riviera on Monday, March 3. Loads of folks will be glad to see Ida back in the after-dark picture. She played interludes in the Shoreham for eight seasons, has entertained at numberless private and organization parties, is now playing organ at WOL for "The Government Clerk" serial. Ida's career was nearly cut short in the great Knickerbocker Theater disaster. She was the Knickerbocker organist at the time . . . On Saturday, March 1, the famous Dalton Boys of the radio will open in the Neptune Room. They have more than 500 characteristic songs. Ben and Gertrude Hellman, billed as the "Two Pianos From Vienna" will also open in Neptune on the same date. When Herth leaves Neptune on February 28, he'll go to Florida and Bermuda on his first vacation since 1934. It's what the doctor ordered.

Castaine and Barry, now at the Shoreham, are the first dancers to appear in Jimmy Roosevelt's nickel-in-the-slot movies. They've just finished two of these midget movies in conjunction with Tony Pastor's band. One is a melodic version of "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

PAUL YOUNG'S will open just after this column goes to press. But here's a prophetic prevue. Maestro Jo Lombardi and maestroette Eileen Ritter of the Earle Theater will be ringsiding. Also Harry Krivitt, show producer at the Capitol Theater. And it's ten to one that a flock of the Earle and Capitol stage show stars will be on hand. There'll also be Herbie Sachs taking time out from his planning of a new Del Rio, and Eddie Sherwood, divisional ASCAP boss. Reservations for the opening party poured in at such a rate that every table was taken by Monday afternoon.

LIKE MOTHER, LIKE SON, When Bob Brewer, Pall Mall Room pianist, recently played at one of Mrs. Roosevelt's White House recitals, he was sustained by the thought that his mother, then 5-year-old Florence MacGibeny, had played in the same room more than 50 years ago for President and Mrs. Cleveland. Little Miss MacGibeny was a notable child prodigy of her day.

CAN'T CARP AT CARPER. The Cafe Caprice contract of Don Carper and his foursome has just been extended to May 28. This adds up to a six-month engagement, a record for Caprice and a fine compliment to the shining quality of the Carper music . . . Don is elated over the new BMI hits, "High on a Windy Hill" and "It All Comes Back To Me Now," both written by his former sidekick in Jimmy Carr's band, Alex Kramer. Said Don, "I'll bet Alex had those tunes in his trunk for years before this BMI break came along."

JOHN FRASER,
who combines diversion with science in psychoanalyzing Cafe Caprice patrons

There's a "master mechanic" in Carmen Cavallaro's dance band in the Cosmos Room. He's Stan Grubb, who spends his days repairing the maracas, ghords and other Cuban instruments that take such a terrible nightly beating.

MARVIN'S METRONOME VALENTINE. The Metronome Room's annual Valentine Party and the incoming of Tommy Marvin's orchestra will both decorate Friday night at Wardman. The powerful Music Corporation of America is boosting the Marvin Band as the nearest thing to Glenn Miller's, in nine-musician size. Stars of the orchestra are singers Marion Stanfield and Andy Blane, trumpetist "King" Cole . . . The Valentine-Marvin party will be a glossy one with favors, balloons and novelties.

CASINO ROYAL VIEWS. Jack Schafer stirring up jive numbers until they boil like hot apple butter . . . Pretty Peggy Wood ringsiding. She had to give up singing at the Silver Fox because of tonsilitis, hopes she won't have to give up her tonsils, too. . . . Emcee Bob Preble comes by and confesses that his favorite movies are still the silent version of "The Sheik" and "Mark of Zorro."

HAND KISSING TECHNIC. Maestro Sasha Lukas of the Troika thrills the ladies with his elegantly continental way of kissing their hands. If he likes a lass very much, he kisses both hands . . . Barnes of the Shoreham is pretty courtly about kissing hands, too . . . When Manager George Osmolovski of the Anchor Room kisses a feminine hand, he does it in the White Russian manner . . . Durward Bowersox of the Rainbow Room, doesn't kiss the hands of his favorite femme friends. He throws 'em kisses from the bandstand.

Remember that great picture, "The Road Back," from the Eric Remarque book? John Gaunt, who played so splendidly as the maddened boy, has given up acting, is with NBC in Washington as producer of its radio shows. We met him in Burt's Trans-Lux—but, of course.

ABOUT THE GIRLS. That beautiful ring of rose-cut diamonds and yellow gold worn by Jane Marlow of Restaurant "823" belonged to her mother . . . Evelyn Knight who's been at the King Cole Room for around three years, with a couple of vacations out, holds the long-time nightingaling engagement for our town . . . The velvety voice of Mayfair's Adele Van represents the finest increase in singing ability in the last year . . . Madrillon's Anne Patricia is the most smartly ciggie lass in town. You'll love her frock of silver striped white silk with red velvet beading at the shoulders and hem.

"AVALON" has been made into a swing symphony by Rodd Raffell's Nightingale band. It's hard to describe, but the tempo gets faster and more tempestuous every second. Broken chords are used and it all climaxes in a rush of solo arpeggios by different instruments. The Gale fans stop dancing and listen entrancingly.

IMPORTANT SHORT STORIES. Lotus will offer another all-new and glittering revue next week . . . Oscar of the Hi Hat is wearing a Greek relief pin and his assistant, Dennis, is sporting a British relief badge . . . The real first names of Buddy Harmon of the Mayflower Lounge are John Bernard . . . Never an evening goes by in Ciro's Famous Village that some customer doesn't step up to the mike and blossom out as an entertainer . . . The Countess de Bourmat of El Patio has so much electricity in her system that it stops her wrist watch if she tries to wear one . . . If you miss tonight's "Piggy Party" at River Bend, console yourself with the thought that "Harvest Night" (with prizes) is coming on Friday . . . Kavakos' Grill was founded in 1906, has been in its present location since 1928.

Leaders of 3 Faiths to Pay Lincoln Tribute

The spirit of Abraham Lincoln, born 132 years ago today in a Kentucky bottomland cabin, will be honored today by leaders of faiths and political parties at a time akin to the troubled period through which he led his people.

The perpetual influence of Lincoln's spirit in the National Capital will be marked when spokesmen of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths join in a broadcast discussion on the theme of "The Spirit of Lincoln for the Solution of Today's Problems."

Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University; the Rev. Charles A. Hart, associate professor of philosophy at Catholic University and the founder and director of the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild, and Dr. Hugo Schiff, rabbi of the Congregation Beth El of Alexandria, Va., will speak in the broadcast over Stations WRC and WMAL at 12:45 p. m.

"Y" Chorus to Sing

The Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, an organization working for a closer understanding among all faiths, is sponsoring today's broadcast. The Rev. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church and chairman of the committee, will act as chairman.

The Synthic Male Chorus of the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A. will sing "America," "Balm in Gilead" and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

President Roosevelt plans to pay tribute to Lincoln in the marbled memorial erected to his name when the District Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion and 35 other patriotic organizations lay wreaths before his statue.

Ceremonies will begin at 12:30 p. m., with the President scheduled to arrive shortly after. At 1:30 p. m. the Military Order will hold a luncheon at the Army and Navy Club.

Dewey to Broadcast

Leading Republicans mounting rostrums from coast to coast today:

Thomas E. Dewey, New York district attorney, will address the Lincoln Day Dinner in Washington at 7 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel. His speech will be broadcast over WOL and a Nation-wide network from 9:30 to 10 p. m. Republican Congressional leaders and the District League of Republican Women are sponsoring the dinner.

Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, will speak at Harrisonburg, Va., and Wendell Willkie will deliver the principal address at the annual Lincoln Day Dinner of the National Republican Club in New York.

Also speaking at the Mayflower dinner will be Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Senator C. Wayland Brooks, of Illinois. Representative U. S. Guyer, of Kansas, will serve as chairman.

Representative Albert Vreeland, of New Jersey, will address a Cumberland, Md., gathering, while Representative Karl Mundt, of South Dakota, will address a similar gathering at Hagerstown, Md.

Representative Maas to Speak

Representative Melvin J. Maas, of Minnesota, and Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, will speak at the all-Masonic Lincoln's Birthday celebration to be held at 8 p. m. today by Harmony Lodge at the Masonic Temple.

The day will be celebrated by the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, with an address on his life by Harry B. Fleharty, special assistant to the Attorney General.

The program will be held at 8 p. m. at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest. Sons of Unions Veterans of the Civil War, Department of Maryland, will join in sponsoring the program. William B. Wells, of William B. Cushing Camp, will preside. The Marine Band will play. Numerous patriotic organizations will take part in the presentation of the colors, led by Percy Parker, color sergeant of the Potomac G. A. R.

Organizations Listed

Organizations taking part in the Lincoln Memorial ceremonies President Roosevelt is expected to attend will include:

Third Division, A. E. F.; Navy League of the United States; Daughters of the Union Veterans of the Civil War; Society of the Army of Santiago; Bi-Centennial Chapter of American War Mothers; Women's Overseas Service League; William Beck Circle, Ladies of the G. A. R.

R.; Daughters of the Union Veterans of the Civil War; Ellen Spencer Mussey Society, Children of the American 30, United States Veterans; District of Columbia Chapter, American Red Cross; Aztec Club of 1847; State Chapter, American War Mothers of the District; American Legion Auxiliary; Grand Army of the Republic.

American War Mothers; Children of the American Revolution; Sons of the Revolution; Auxiliary United Spanish War Veterans; Military Order of the World War; Ladies of the G. A. R., Circle No. 1; Dames of the Loyal Legion; Girl Scouts of the District; Ladies Department of Vetearns of Foreign Wars; Capital Society, Children of the American Revolution; Auxiliary to the G. A. R. Woman's Relief Corps.

Mexican Envoy Urges Modern Emancipation

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 11 (AP).—The "emancipation" of vast numbers of underprivileged residents of Latin America was advocated tonight by Mexico's Ambassador to the United States to attain "a living and dynamic Pan Americanism."

Ambassador Francisco Castillo Najera spoke at exercises observing the 132d birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln.

"The overwhelming majority of the people of Latin America live today in a state of slavery just as inhuman and unnecessary as that which Lincoln denounced and endeavored to destroy within the boundaries of his own United States," he said.

Lincoln Used Secret Mark in Signing Papers

Put 2 Dots After A In Name on Items Regarded Important

A hidden mark was placed by Abraham Lincoln in his signature to all documents he considered important, it has been concluded by Capt. John T. Clemens, of the Lincoln Museum staff here, following lengthy research.

The conclusion was thought to answer the riddle of the two tiny dots which appear after the initial "A" in some—but not all—of the signatures Lincoln affixed.

A comparison of signatures on obviously important documents with those on obviously unimportant documents shows the two dots to be consistently on the important ones and one dot after the others.

Occasionally, on important documents there appears at first sight to be only one dot, but a magnifying glass discloses the Civil War President as having struck that one dot a second sharp touch of his pen, Capt. Clemens said.

Why he did so probably never will be known. But it opens to conjecture the possibility of a mistrust of perhaps some of the many persons empowered to sign Lincoln's name for him during his long career as a surveyor, circuit-riding attorney in the West, and as President. When he was in the White House certainly three of his 12 secretaries were authorized to sign his name.

Captain Clemens has found the two dots after the initial "A" on a document signed by Lincoln in 1832. The two dots are also on his signature to a check signed when he was Chief Executive and which, in the circumstances, the President obviously had considered important. They persist, again, on a letter of moment to General Grant. On his personal letters to friends there is one dot after the "A", as though he considered a time would not arise when his signature might have to be proved.

Many persons, Captain Clemens emphasized, signed Lincoln's name and these persons, investigation showed, consistently used the one dot after the "A". The hidden mark on important documents appeared too consistently to be accepted as coincidence, he said. Captain Clemens, who did the research in his spare time, was aided in investigations by Mrs. Mary Louis Davis and Harper Garrett, both also working in spare time from Government duties.

140 More District CCC Boys To Be Put on Defense Projects

A plan to assign 140 more of the District's CCC workers to aid nearby defense projects, and still keep local park development work going, was approved yesterday by CCC officials.

One company of 140 CCC men stationed at Fort Hunt, Va., has been working at Fort Belvoir since November, and now this crew will be bolstered by 35 men drawn from each of four other camps in the Washington area, officials said.

The decision to draw men from several camps was adopted as preferable to transferring all the men from one camp to Fort Belvoir and closing a District camp entirely.

Farm Work at Annapolis

Meanwhile, it was learned, the CCC has turned down a proposal that would have stripped Fort Dupont Park of its CCC crew and assigned the men to Annapolis to help in developing a farm to supply the Naval Academy.

Reason for refusing the academy's bid for CCC help, officials said, is that the farm is not on Government-owned property, and as a result could not fill the legal requirement that all CCC projects be on Government property.

Both in CCC headquarters and in the National Park Service officials denied reports that all of the CCC camps in the Washington area were likely to be transferred from park and recreation areas to defense projects.

A spokesman for James J. McEntee, CCC director, said that there are no immediate plans for closing any of the camps in or near the District. These include, besides the Fort Hunt and Fort Dupont Park camps, two camps along the C. & O. Canal, one at Fort Washington, Md., one in Rock Creek Park and one in the Chopawamsic recreational demonstration area near Quantico.

The Chopawamsic CCC workers are assigned regularly to work on the five summer camps used by Washington social agencies for underprivileged children. Under an arrangement with the Quantico Marine command, these workers have helped projects at the Marine base.

As an example of the Quantico CCC work, it was pointed out that Marine officials had supplied some materials, including water tanks, which could not be used at the Marine base, but which came in handy for the summer camps. In return, CCC workers have done planting and other work for the Marines.

In another trade, the Marines supplied permission to run trails through some of their land for use of the summer camps, and the CCC workers paid back by helping develop a reservoir for the Marine base.

D. C. Projects to Go On

Approval of the plan to aid defense and at the same time continue Washington park improvement, was announced by McEntee, following a meeting of the CCC advisory council.

McEntee said that the 35-man detachments would be taken from the Fort Dupont Park, Rock Creek Park, Fort Washington and Chopawamsic Camps. The Fort Belvoir projects include development of a recreation area, a rifle range, and conservation work.

Each of the four camps will be left with about 165 men, officials said, enough to continue their local projects. The plan approved yesterday called for returning the men assigned to work with the Fort Hunt company to their own camps when the Fort Belvoir projects are completed.

Msgr. Thomas Rites Are Set For Friday

Msgr. Thomas

Requiem high mass will be pontificated at 10:30 a. m. Friday at St. Patrick's Catholic Church for the Right Rev. Msgr. Cornelius E. Thomas, 82, pastor of the church since 1917, who died yesterday in Georgetown University Hospital.

The former secretary to the late James Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, Msgr. Thomas was taken to the hospital two weeks ago, suffering from a severe cold. Despite his age he had been able to say mass at his church until his final illness.

Msgr. Thomas was the oldest priest in the Archdioceses of Baltimore and Washington at his death. He was a native of Baltimore.

He came here first after his ordination in 1872 at the Baltimore Cathedral. He was assistant pastor at St. Patrick's for three years, then served at St. Stephens Church, at Twenty-fifth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Returning to Baltimore, he became Cardinal Gibbons' secretary, then in succession chancellor of the Archdiocese of Baltimore, rector of the Cathedral and pastor of St. Ann's Church there. In 1914 he was made a monsignor, as a domestic prelate to the Pope, and three years later he came to St. Patrick's here.

While at St. Ann's, Msgr. Thomas founded the Catholic Review, a weekly publication which circulates here and in Baltimore. In 1922 he was elevated to a protonotary apostolic, with power to pontificate on certain specified occasions.

He is survived by no immediate relatives. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Aurie-Belle Allen, Treasury Worker, Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Aurie-Belle Allen, 65, widow of Judge Lawrence Allen, of Youngstown, Ohio, and a Treasury Department employe for more than 30 years, will be at 3 p. m. tomorrow at Hines funeral home.

Mrs. Allen came to Washington in 1906 after the death of her husband in Youngstown. She was employed in the redemption division of the Treasury Department as a clerk.

She became ill a week ago and died Monday at her home, 5212 Forty-fifth Street Northwest.

She is survived by a daughter, Mary Isabel Allen, of Washington. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Auxiliary Girls Guests at Party At G St. Y. M. C. A.

More than 60 members of the Girls Auxiliary of the Central Young Men's Christian Association last night attended a Valentine party in the building at 1732 G Street Northwest.

Amateur singing, dancing and recitation contests; folk dancing, directed by Miss T. Griffith; tap dancing, under direction of Miss June Chamberlain and Miss Ann Livingston, tudents of the Marjorie Webster Schools and serving refreshments were included in last night's program. The party was under the leadership of 11 women volunteers, directed by Mrs. T. J. Gardella.

VITAMIN B
NEURITIS

Repeated scientific tests have shown that vitamin B, is most beneficial in many conditions of neuritis, such as those due to anemia, pregnancy, pellagra and even chronic alcoholism and peripheral neuritis. But vitamin B, is only one factor of the vitamin B complex. Numa-Aid, the important vitamin B remedy, contains not only a rich quantity of vitamin B, but vitamin G and the whole vitamin B complex as well. Vitamin B has been known for many cases of loss of appetite due to vitamin B deficiency and scientists everywhere agree that an abundant supply of vitamin B is an important factor in growth and good health. Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

The Ice Revues Prove Box-Office Bonanzas

Skating Spectacles Soar to Top in Earnings; The Roxyettes to Present Favorite Routine; This, That and the Other About the Theater

HAVING ENJOYED more than one taste of a form of mass entertainment that is comparatively new as such things are viewed in the long perspective of "show business," Washington should be interested to know that it has played an important part in elevating the musical, ice-skating revues to a position of dominance that is commanding the attention of all branches of the amusement industry.

BELL

Because Sonja Henie, an erstwhile screen star, has played a vital role in the glorification of this latest type of spectacular pastime, the February 8 issue of Martin Quigley's Motion Picture Herald devotes a page to the sudden emergence and high earnings of the foremost of the frozen fetes. It estimates that the arenic spectacles this winter will yield a net income of something more than $2,000,000. The horrendous Miss Henie, former Olympic skating champion, leads the pack in the volume of patronage she is able to attract to the ticket windows, with her "Hollywood Ice Revue." Playing a schedule of only nine cities, Miss Henie will have gathered something in the neighborhood of $1,220,000 when her show closes in Omaha tomorrow.

The "Ice Follies," which the Capital has seen twice, comes next with a probable gross on the winter season that should be extremely edifying to its backers. The recent "Ice-Capades" completes the trilogy of leaders, with a probable "take" of $500,000 as against an initial investment of $80,000.

There is obviously a new significance attaching itself to the old, familiar term of "gay blades"—especially in the minds of those who were courageous enough to toss in the bankroll on a venture that still is something less than five years old.

There are several whose names deserved better than to be crowded out of yesterday's review of William Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," currently causing stresses on the walls of the National Theater. Foremost among them is Edward Andrews, who brings Lennie over into the Saroyan play from Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men." Mr. Andrews' Tom, Joe's love-struck errand boy, is a sizable character. So is William Bendix' Krupp, the rebellious cop, and so are Houseley Stevens' Arab, Charles Cane's idealistic longshoreman and Eva Leonard Boyne's society dame on a slumming party. As we attempted to indicate, in the face of the rush occasioned by a late curtain, there isn't much the matter with any member of the cast, or with Mr. Saroyan's play, either.

By some inexplicable circumstance, we were right in our recent guess that Joe Howard, headlining the current stage bill at Loew's Capitol, wrote the tune for the late Philander Johnson's First World War ballad, "Somewhere in France Grows the Lily." In a cordial note, Joe has this to say: "You are right about the 'France' song. I wrote the music for same in the orchestra pit of the theater in 20 minutes and sang it that night. It became a big hit and still has a little royalty coming in from this and other countries." Not that it matters.

Add society notes: Joe Kaliski, for many years Washington manager for Gaumont-British Pictures and more recently affiliated with other interests, has taken up new duties as city sales manager for Warner Brothers in Cleveland, effective today. And Carroll Dikeman, former showman turned boniface, is back from a Miami vacation, wearing what his ribber-in-chief, Dr. Archie Engel, describes as "the finest coating of night club pallor that ever came out of Florida."

If you are one who voted it among the most popular of their routines, there should be something of the thrill of the triumphant ballot in the announcement that the "Valentines" stage revue, opening Friday at the Earle, will include as one of its four divisions the Roxyettes in their colorful "Scotch Number." The other three sections will be "Comic Valentine," with the Calgary Brothers; "Musical Valentine," featuring The Pitchmen, and "Sweetheart Valentine"—which, of course, would be the Roxyettes again.

"Arizona," Wesley Ruggles' epic of the Southwest, starring Jean Arthur, with William Holden, Warren William and Porter Hall, will be given a special preview screening for the drama desks and officials of the Arizona State Society, according to a magnificently ambiguous tip just to hand. Now if we only knew where, what day and what time . . .

Voice-From-the-Back-of-the-Hall Note

Listen, lamebrain, do you have to know everything?

WILLIAM HOLDEN, JEAN ARTHUR AND AN UNNAMED FRIEND
in one of the more jovial moments in Columbia's widely heralded production of "Arizona," opening its first Washington engagement Friday on the screen at the Earle Theater. Warren William and Porter Hall are among the others most prominent in a large and able cast

Louella O. Parsons' Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 11 (INS).—Two minutes before this column went on the teletype came the flash from New York that Paramount had planked down $285,000 for "Lady in the Dark," for Claudette Colbert, That, my friends, is the highest price ever paid for a New York show and is plenty of do-ri-me, even for Gertie Lawrence's sensational hit. Claudette Colbert certainly seems to be inheriting all the Lawrence successes. Right now she is doing "Skylark" which starred Gertie last season.

PARSONS

Merian Cooper, believe it or not, is on the high seas bound for England to get material for "Eagle Squadron." The Coopers left Hollywood without divulging their destination. Mrs. Cooper (Dorothy Jordan) is in New York, having put her husband on the boat. The story of "Eagle Squadron" is that of American fliers who join the R. A. F. and Cooper, who was a flier in the World War, was determined to get his material first hand—the first American producer to do a war story from a front seat. Merian is making the picture for the Argosy-Walter Wanger Co.

Fred Astaire seems to have cast his lot in with Columbia for keeps. After he finishes "But Beautiful," he'll do "He's My Uncle." That's the Navy story I told you about a long time ago, but what I didn't tell you is Sidney Lanfield has been engaged to direct and Cole Porter will furnish the music, so you can see Sam Bischoff is plenty busy getting this one in readiness. Fred has never liked to have one set partner to dance with, but Rita Hayworth, who was one of the dancing Casinos, will dance with him in "But Beautiful." He could certainly do worse.

Had a long talk with Jock Whitney at the Lewis Milestone party. He has given up practically all of his business, his interest in horse racing and all else, to concentrate on his work for the Government in South America. I have never seen him so enthusiastic about anything and he is very eager to have the motion picture industry do its share to cement a better relationship between the two continents, but he emphasizes the importance of going about it the right way. He talked of how much South America loves the Hollywood stars. Guess I will have to study Spanish, for Jock suggested I do a personal appearance tour with the same type of talented young people I have exploited the last two years.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: John Barrymore weekending with Death Valley Scotty. Wouldn't you like to be in on that conversation; Betty Avery, one of the six beauteous models at Twentieth, announced her engagement to Orin Lehman, nephew of Gov. Lehman; Doris Hauck, N. T. G. favorite, and John Carroll at the La Conga; couldn't help but notice at the Feldman party how much Michele Morgan looks like Luise Rainer. She was completely surrounded by admirers; seemed we had only left everyone a few hours earlier at the Feldman's when we saw them again at Kendall and Milly's cocktail party for Joan Whitney Payson.

Marlene Dietrich came into the Feldman's and stayed only a few moments; Carole Lombard and Clark Gable, who had been night clubbing, arrived very late; Louise Macy, who loves her job on Harpers Bazaar, was studying our Hollywood fashions at both parties: Joan Payson told about her 6-month-old redhead, the only red-head in her brood of five; Donald Ogden Stewart, who has become a veritable recluse, at the Milestones with his bride; Mrs. Richard Barthelmess looked like a fashion plate. She and Dick gave a very small party after the theater for Ruth Chatterton, whose many friends are so happy to see her; Countess di Frasso and Jessie Barthelmess wore the same (and very expensive) gowns, but they laughed over it with great glee; Dorothy Parker and I talked over our dogs—a hobby we have in common.

I must say Miriam Hopkins looked very beautiful in a new and striking evening gown.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Familiar Play and New Films Mark New Amusement Week

"TOBACCO ROAD." With John Barton giving his 1,361st performance as Jeeter Lester, the record-breaking drama opens Monday evening at the National Theater in what is announced as "postively the farewell tour" of the Jack Kirkland adaptation of the Erskine Caldwell novel. From last season's cast, Sara Perry will play the sharecropper's wife, while Sheila Brent, Eugenia Wilson, Dick Lee, Lillian Ardell and Walter Ayers also will return. Newcomers to the company include Walt Draper, Florence Dunlap and William Robertson. William Dorme, who played Lov two seasons ago, rejoins the cast. Popular prices prevail. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Earle

"ARIZONA." Jean Arthur plays the lone white woman in a brawling fortress city known as Tucson in this new film of the early Southwest. A farseeing and ambitious young woman, she becomes a tender, romantic young girl when she meets Peter Muncie, played by young William Holden. Warren William and Porter Hall have the chief supporting roles. "Valentines," the stage revue, offers four Valentines, Sweethearts', Musical, Comic and Scotch. The Calgary Brothers, the Pitchman, Loper and Barrett, Geen Marvey and the resourceful Roxyettes in new routines are the performers. Opens Friday morning.

Capitol

"THE SON OF MONTE CRISTO." Louis Hayward, in the title role, costars with Joan Bennett in Roland V. Lee's United Artists release, a sequel to the popular film of several seasons ago. Cristo's son strives to prove himself a gallant heir to his father's adventurous repute. George Sanders, Florence Bates and Montague Love head the supporting company. "Funzafire," on the stage, stars Benny Meroff and his orchestra, with a group of 35 entertainers, who promise to roam the theater with a parade of gags. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"BACK STREET." Margaret Sullavan and Charles Boyer continue for a second week in this Universal remake of the Fannie Hurst novel. The story concerns the love of a woman for a married man and her decision to share but a corner of his life in a back street apartment while he goes on to world fame with his legal wife and family. An "Information Please," with Ruth Gordon, also is on the bill.

Palace

"THE PHILADELPHIA STORY." Katharine Hepburn's triumphal screen version of her notable stage success continues for a second week, with Cary Grant and James Stewart in the costarring roles. Miss Hepburn plays a Philadelphia heiress who changes her mind about whom she is going to marry on her second wedding day. Ruth Hussey, Roland Young and John Howard are featured.

Metropolitan

"VIRGINIA." Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray, Stirling Hayden and Carolyn Lee have the leading roles in this modern story of the Old Dominion, filmed in Technicolor at Charlottesville. Returns to the downtown sector after a week at the Earle. Opens Friday morning.

Columbia

"GONE WITH THE WIND." The prize-winning film continues its popular-priced return engagement on F Street with Vivien Leigh, Clark Gable, Olivia de Havilland and Leslie Howard in the leads. The three-hour, forty-minute film is unspooled four times daily, beginning at 9:30 a. m.

Little

"NIGHT TRAIN." The surprise mystery thriller of the year stars Rex Harrison, Margaret Lockwood and Paul von Hernreid in a story of the early days of the present war. It is a spy melodrama in which two countries battle for the services of the citizen of a third, a great inventor. Also in the cast are Basil Radford and Naunton Wayne, the two cricketeers of "The Lady Vanishes." Opens this morning.

Trans-Lux

"THE POWER AND THE LAND." The newsreel theater alters its policy somewhat to present this thirty-five minute short subject released by the Rural Electrification Administration of the Department of Agriculture. Joris Ivans directed and Stephen Vincent Benet wrote the commentary. Second short subject will be Walt Disney's Pluto the Pup in "Pantry Pirate." Opens Friday morning.

Gayety

"ROCKIN' THE TOWN." Pat Paree headlines this new burlesque production opening Sunday afternoon at the Ninth Street theater. Irving Selig, Mike Sachs and Alice Kennedy are the other featured performers. This week's production, starring Jean Mode with Stinky and Shorty, continues through the Saturday midnight performance.

Pierce Hall

"ACCENT ON YOUTH." Samson Raphaelson's comedy is the third play of the Pierce Hall Players' current season, opening at Sixteenth and Harvard Streets, to run through Saturday evening.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Feb. 11.

Joan Crawford saw a paunchy little man with a bald head and a goatee wandering around the set for "A Woman's Face" the first day of shooting, and said to Director George Cukor, "What a cute little plastic surgeon! Where did you find him?"

HOPPER

"Oh, just a minute," said Cukor, bringing the gentleman over—"this is Elliott Paul, who wrote the screenplay of our picture." Joan's face would have been plenty red if it hadn't been for that horrible scar that covers half her face in the first part of the picture. And she's using the Lon Chaney technique of torture by wearing an enormous plate in the back of her mouth, to make the scar stand out more realistically.

Joan said, "It's so horrible I practically frighten myself." She displayed a swollen black-and-blue knuckle which she got from hitting Osa Massen in the face. "How dreadful!" "Well, if you think this is bad, you ought to see Osa's face," said Joan.

Gene Lester, one of our ace photographers, will make his debut on the air February 22. He's been training with Rudy Vallee, who will introduce him. If he clicks, he may find himself at the other end of the camera before long.

Constance Collier's friends will be delighted to hear Alfred Hitchcock is trying to arrange to bring her on from New York to test for Mrs. Fortnum, an important character in "Before the Fact."

Rosemary Lane tells of her most embarrassing moment. It was in Chicago, while she was doing a personal appearance. At the theater next door, her sister, Lola, was appearing with Wendy Barrie, Arline Judge and Lou Holtz. But over Rosemary's theater they had painted a huge sign which read: "We have only one star—Rosemary Lane—but she's a real one."

Arthur Murray spotted the following marquee in Ventura: "Brigham Young"—"I Want a Divorce."

It looks as though Merle Oberon was getting as much physical maltreatment in "Affectionately Yours" as Carole Lombard got in "Nothing Sacred." She's tossed bodily into the seat of a roadster, and bounces half way out again. Dennis Morgan carries her over his shoulder like a sack of meal, then she's tied up with a rope to a post, after which she falls into an ocean that hasn't been purified, and finally is dragged up a flight of stairs by energetic George Tobias. Maybe they're just trying to find out if she can take it. Well, now they know she can.

The Greek benefit at the Chinese Theater will be your first chance to see Carmen Miranda in person. When you get a look at her, you'll probably think a slight convulsion of nature has hit Hollywood. But don't worry—it will be the undulation of Carmen. She's that hot.

Also, you may have the pleasure of hearing Jan Kiepura, Europe's pet tenor, who, when he arrived here six years ago to do a picture for Paramount, was one of the world's richest actors—owned a beautiful hotel in Poland, which Hitler has long since taken over. "Kewpie" no longer carries an autographed photo of Hitler. If you don't know what Hitler is, ask him. He'll tell you in six languages.

Although Walter Wanger dined at the White House, his visit to Washington had no political significance. He spent three days with Carl Sandburg, who wrote "The Life of Abraham Lincoln."

Edgar Selwyn had a letter from a Denver woman, suggesting he make a picture from the Bible, and in order to avoid delay, sent a copy of the book of Genesis, written in longhand on 200 pages. Guess she didn't know we have a Bible in Hollywood.

Curt Bois' definition of the dinosaur in "Fantasia:" "A docile fossil with a colossal schnozzle."

HELD OVER! 2nd ROMANTIC WEEK!
BEFORE! AFTER!
The whole town's talking about this story of girl before and AFTER love! Look what the love-bug did to "Ninotchka," that pale, proud and stand-offish proletarian; one kiss, then another, and she melted! Now it's happened to Katie (Katharine Hepburn). Before that intoxicating adventure in the summer house, Katie wouldn't let her own husband get close enough for a kiss! But that night the wine, the moonlight, and three handsome suitors (Cary Grant, Jimmy Stewart and John Howard) went to her head and her heart.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Feb. 11.

PRESIDENT VARGAS: John Roosevelt, youngest of the President's children, will leave shortly—probably this week—for a tour of South America. He'll see you in Brazil. His wife will accompany him . . . Metropolitan Opera Company: Kirsten Flagstad has declared that she will return to Norway at the beginning of April, to try to see her family. The only thing which will deter her would be $25,000, raised quickly . . . William Green: Phil Murray, head of the C. I. O., will announce the amendments he wants made to the lend-lease bill—amendments which practically mean he's against it . . . Dramatists Guild: On Thursday Paramount bought the movie rights to "Lady in the Dark" for $285,000—the highest price ever paid for a movie story. The entire production cost thereby is repaid.

LYONS

DISTRICT ATTORNEY O'DWYER: Do you plan to link Murder, Inc., with the disappearance of Judge Crater? . . . Cordell Hull: The Norwegian Consul was invited to attend Saturday's reception for Leland Stowe, the correspondent who was the first to reveal the fifth columning in Norway. The invitation was declined, with uncomplimentary descriptives about Stowe . . . Jack Kirkland: Saturday night, before Art Smith heard that your production of "Tanyard Street" would continue, the actor stepped up to the bar at Sardi's and ordered: "Give me some of that stuff which I'm off of" . . . Gov. Olson: Ed Flynn, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, is leaving for California—to reunite the Democratic factions there, disrupted because of McAdoo's death.

COUNT JERZY POTOCKI: Paderewski made a special recording at the Victor studios on Twenty-fourth Street last week. It is a speech of gratitude for the help of the American people. The recordings will be distributed throughout the country . . . In the meantime Paderewski has left for Palm Beach . . . John G. Winant: One of your co-passengers on the Clipper will be Margaret Bourke-White, the photographer, who is going to London.

LEWIS MILESTONE: John Steinbeck revealed this story about "Of Mice and Men." Before you bought the story for movie production, Mervyn LeRoy discussed it with Steinbeck. "I've been thinking about it a lot," said LeRoy. "Y'know what's wrong with it? I'll tell you. That scene where George kills Lennie—well, that should be out. He doesn't have to do it" . . . "Mr. LeRoy," said the author, "It took me almost 200 pages to show inevitability—and now you destroy that with one phrase" . . . "Yeah," said Mervyn LeRoy. "Wonderful, isn't it?"

WILL HAYS: Walter Wanger had four conferences at the White House concerning his designation as liaison man between Washington and Hollywood—but nothing definite was arranged . . . Stephen Vincent Benet: Ogden Nash, whose books of poetry include "The Primrose Path," et al., will entrain next week for Johns Hopkins Hospital et al. . . . Deems Taylor: Carleton Smith, the music critic, is going to Chicago and Detroit for Walt Disney to lecture about "Fantasia" before the premieres are held there. Koussevitsky, the conductor, accompanied Smith to a showing of "Fantasia," watched Stokowski in ten different poses, halo after halo, then asked: "But where is Disney?"

WILLIAM A. KNUDSEN: One American inventor, who refused to wait his turn at the National Inventors Council—which is the Federal agency for all defense inventions—sought quick action by writing "If I don't hear from you within the next five days I shall immediately take my invention to the German Embassy."

DICK FORAN: Your former wife, Ruth Hollingsworth, was introduced to Mary Jean Kempner, of Vogue, at El Morocco. They discovered that, only a few years ago, they had been classmates at the Oguntz School. "No wonder I didn't recognize you," said your former wife, now a platinum blonde, "you haven't even dyed your hair" . . . Arturo Toscanini: Bishop Noli, the former regent of Albania—who was exiled by King Zog—has completed a tone-poem called "Scanderbeg" and is sending it to you.

DRAMA CRITICS CIRCLE: The members of the New York Drama League and their husbands held a dinner last night at the Pierre, Maurice Maeterlinck, who addressed them, spoke in French—which few of them understood. That was fortunate, for Maeterlinck addressed them as "colleagues" and told of the excellent work "you playwrights" were doing to help a chaotic world. He thought he was addressing the Dramatists Guild! . . . Henry Bernstein, who sat next to Maeterlinck on the dais, wagered one of the women present that he could make a 15-minute extemporaneous speech. He spoke, extemporaneously, for 25 minutes—for the lady, unwilling to lose the $5 bet, kept signaling to him: "One minute more."

To relieve headache, body discomfort and aches, take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

2.

For sore throat from cold, dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in ½ glass of water and gargle. Pain, rawness are eased in a remarkably short time.

3.
Check temperature. If you have a fever, and temperature does not go down — if throat is not quickly relieved, call your doctor.

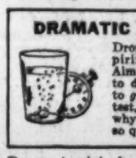
Starts acting in a short time to ease painful symptoms and sore throat from colds

Don't wait if you even suspect you are catching a cold. At the first sign, follow the directions in the pictures above—the simplest and among the most effective methods of relief known to modern science.

See Your Doctor. Even though he may wholeheartedly approve using Bayer Aspirin to relieve painful symptoms, you should not fail to see your family physician, because many colds may lead to serious consequences. Largely with medical approval, this simple, scientific procedure has taken the place of old-fashioned strong medicine for colds, which may upset the system. Literally millions have adopted it.

Try this way. You will say it is unequalled, we are sure. When you buy be sure you get the fast-acting Bayer product you want. Ask for Bayer Aspirin by the full name, not for just "aspirin" when you buy. And see that you get it.

DRAMATIC SPEED TEST



Drop a genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablet in water. Almost instantly it starts to disintegrate—is ready to go to work. Make this test, and see for yourself why Bayer Aspirin acts so quickly!

Contract Bridge

Walter Malowan, Gotham bridge expert, gives a commentary on bridge comedy, citing this experience.

North was playing a contract of four spades and Malowan, seated west, and his partner had taken three tricks. The cards left in each hand were:

	♠ 10 9 ♡ Q ◇ None ♣ None
♠ 4 ♡ J ◇ Q ♣ None	WEST / NORTH / EAST / SOUTH	♠ None ♡ K ◇ K ♣ Q
	♠ None ♡ 10 ◇ 10 9 ♣ None

North, trying desperately to squeeze, laid down both trumps and East obligingly discarded first the king of diamonds and then the king of hearts.

As the declarer was checking up the rubber, Malowan, perplexed and inquisitive, asked his fair partner why she had retained the thirteenth club.

"Why, partner," she responded, an injured note in her voice, "I wanted to show you every card I had."

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer.

Russia just gave Bulgaria the back of its neck and England picked up its marbles in Rumania. Churchill counted the Germans in Bucharest and decided there were too many chauffeurs for a one-car garage.

They're using the nutcracker system over there and every night is Hallowe'en. That war is spreading like butter in the summer time.

There was a fellow in the Middle West named Veliva who thought the world was flat because his heels wore out evenly. It is going to be a lot flatter before the bombing is over.

I'll have to get my spies together, order grapefruit, and give 'em a pep talk between halves. I know that's a bad gag but have you listened to the radio recently?

That argument in Congress proves that a democracy is the highest type of family quarrel. You caucus a delegation of two rabbits today and you will find that one of them is opposed to cabbage leaves.

If Wendell Willkie makes one more visit to the White House he will rate a toothbrush.

● "Yes, sir, I'm only ten years old but I've done an awful lot of traveling. That is, Mother and I have. We've ridden trains all over the east, but we always have the nicest times on Chessie's railroad. Mother says she feels so at home on 'our railroad', and that the way you all treat her makes her feel like a queen . . . so that makes me a princess!"

When letters to Chessie tell us such pleasant things about this railroad, we feel that our effort to welcome you has really succeeded. Certainly that's what we all aim at . . . we ticket agents and conductors and porters and Tavern Car stewards and waiters. You expect efficiency and courtesy. But we want to add the extra something that makes your trip happy on THE GEORGE WASHINGTON, THE SPORTSMAN and THE F.F.V.—that something which turns all little girls into "princesses" . . . and makes all travelers glad they chose to go by Chesapeake and Ohio.

Picketing Limited

Sharp division among the Roosevelt appointees on the Supreme Court may overshadow in public interest the clarification of the right to picket which came out of Monday's decisions. In one case Justices Frankfurter and Murphy found themselves ranged against Justices Black, Douglas and Reed. The difference turned on a question of emphasis. A dairy using the vendor system was picketed by an opposing union; some of its drivers were beaten, its trucks were wrecked and store windows smashed. The Illinois courts sustained an injunction on the ground that these acts of violence would necessarily have the effect of intimidating the vendors' retail customers. It was the violence that most concerned Justice Frankfurter, who read the majority opinion upholding the Illinois decision, and his concurring brethren; for the minority Justice Black clung to the right of free speech.

The majority seems to be on firmer ground. It is important from the standpoint of law and order that the right to strike should be regarded basically as a mere withholding of labor. Any accompanying demonstration is intended chiefly to show that the employer can't get along without the striker. Labor, to its credit, has so regarded the right to strike. In the process, of course, the right to peaceful communication with the public in furtherance of the interest of both employers and employes is plainly guaranteed by the Bill or Rights. But picketing is tolerable only when it is not an integral part of what the Court calls a "coercive thrust." Whether the picketing does take place in a "context of violence," as Justice Frankfurter puts it, must always be determined from the facts of the case.

Of course, this decision should not be interpreted as placing the Supreme Court's stamp of approval upon the injunction in question. It merely held that the courts of Illinois did not transgress their constitutional powers. The people of Illinois can deny their courts the authority to issue injunctions in labor disputes if they so desire, but they have not done so. In these circumstances the Supreme Court has shown wise judicial restraint in not trying to inflate the Bill of Rights to a point where it would leave the States powerless to cope with intimidation under the guise of free speech.

While permitting restraints upon picketing associated with violence, however, the Court refused to narrow this right in another field. It upset an Illinois injunction against picketers who were not employes of the establishment picketed. The State courts had concluded that an employer's shop could not be picketed as part of a drive to organize his employes. Justice Frankfurter again delivered the opinion of the Supreme Court. Since this opinion was not influenced by a record of violence, it rests entirely upon the right of peaceful communication. States cannot deny workingmen this right, the Court decided, "by drawing the circle of economic competition between employers and workers so small as to contain only an employer and those directly employed by him." Together these opinions go a long way toward separating legitimate picketing from coercion and violence, and manifest a fine sense of discrimination.

Cultural Bottleneck

There was welcome news yesterday that the Department of Justice once more was approaching an agreement with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. Since the breakdown of negotiations last December and again this month, the Government has filed a criminal information against ASCAP charging that certain of its practices in control of music performance rights constituted violations of the antitrust law. Broadcast Music, Inc., the new supply house of the broadcasters, averted a similar suit by agreeing to refrain from these practices—if ASCAP would do the same. It is high time that this dispute be settled. When broadcasting chains declined before January 1 to sign a new contract under the terms proposed by ASCAP, much of the best known and best loved music went off the air. The accusations and counter-accusations which have been bandied about since that time are responsible for what in due course would make, in the language of the moment, a bottleneck in the country's entertainment. And, as with other bottlenecks, the public is entitled to demand action. It would be highly desirable if ASCAP could act now to dispose of legal issues, so that the chief remaining question—that of price—might be settled with the broadcasters.

The Man Lincoln

The habit of hero worship grows with the uncertainty of the times. We are turning to the eternal verities for guidance, and it is human to clothe those verities in flesh. That is why Lincoln has knit himself so impressively into the American psyche. In his life and words he embodies a sureness in the midst of unsureness which makes him tower out of the past like a rock of ages. Jane Addams used to say that when she was distressed she used to go and stand in front of the Saint-Gaudens statue in Chicago. Some of our legislators probably make their decisions within our own Lincoln Memorial.

And yet this man whom our Nation honors again today was a man who was always confessing he didn't know all the answers. He once likened himself to those pilots on the Mississippi who merely go from point to point. Why, then, do we seek in him a guide to ultimates? Perhaps the reason is that Lincoln seems at once to share all the common man's perplexities and to inspire him with the simple faith that in the end those perplexities will be resolved. The travail that most heroes went through looks like the travail of an Atlas or a man of destiny in whom there is more light than warmth. But there is Lincoln in everybody. His decisions happened to be more fateful than those of ordinary folk, but Lincoln's processes had an intimacy we all recognize.

Lincoln coming to decisions in opinion as well as in action was the same. He makes one realize why the Greeks made meditation the highest virtue. Where others found hot convictions, he found the tolerance that comes from understanding. There were always two sides to problems upon which he thought so deeply. He was, in fact, the true liberal; that is to say, a pragmatist who doesn't inquire whether his idea fits a general yardstick or harmonizes with preconceived theories. So that was nothing ready-made in the Lincoln make-up; no theories, no solutions.

Yet out of this unsureness came a great strength! The secret was very simple. He was led on not by specific ends but by the rapture of his vision of America. Lincoln, when assailed by his travails, gathered a triumphant urge from a constant renewal of his faith. It was this faith in his fellow man, in the Union, in the future, that fused all those crosscurrents in Lincoln, and made of him the noblest American of them all.

Krivitsky

Whether Samuel Ginsberg, alias Walter Krivitsky, killed himself or whether, as his friends insist, he was slain by a macabre and mysterious hand, is something of which we shall never be absolutely certain. On the evidence thus far made public all the probabilities point to suicide. Still the evidence is altogether circumstantial and the gap in it is just wide enough to admit a doubt.

No writer of mystery stories would have much difficulty in imagining how a supposed international spy could have been murdered under all the circumstances described in the police report. The police, however, know that the murders that happen in books are rarely the kind that happen in reality. At the same time it has been well established that agents of the OGPU are actively at work in many countries besides Russia. There was the kidnaping some years ago under the very eyes of the Paris Surete of the White Russian Gen. Eugene Miller, whose relation to the Red Army purges Krivitsky himself undertook to explain in one of the sensational articles that first brought his name to the attention of American readers. Krivitsky has also described the efforts made, after his own break with Stalin, to kill or kidnap him in his refuge in France. It all sounds fantastic, but there is no particular reason to believe that the OGPU always draws the line at melodrama.

The Stalinist faction in America has always insisted that Krivitsky was an impostor, but, if so, he was a singularly well-informed one. There is no special reason why the OGPU, who have important fish to fry, should have thought it worth while to hound a mere impostor to death. On the other hand an impostor would have no good reason for believing himself hounded.

All in all, it would seem that the Washington police and coroner disposed of this case in rather summary fashion. Evidently several hours elapsed between the closing of the case and the writing of the suicide certificate, and the moment when it was realized that they might be dealing with something more than an ordinary hotel room suicide. And yet the name "Krivitsky" was signed to one of the three notes found near the body. By virtue of the publicity given to the magazine articles and to the testimony before the Dies Committee, the name was, or should have been, well known to them. The whole thing looks like a pretty careless piece of work.

Unanswerable Willkie

It is plain from Mr. Willkie's testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that his trip to Britain served to strengthen his aid-to-Britain views. Doubtless he wanted to be sure of Britain's determination to fight to the end. There is no doubt that he got such a conviction from his observations. Armed with this knowledge, he now seeks to shore up the courage of our British friends with the only aid they want, namely, fighting tools. These he would lend-lease to the British through the medium of the measure which is shortly to go to the Senate, and he would begin with destroyers at the rate of five to ten a month.

The "blind opposition" which was Senator Austin's target the other day will get no comfort from Mr. Willkie's testimony. The reason is that he is consistent. He doesn't say with one breath that he is for aid to Britain and then with another breath that he wonders whether the British have anything left to pay for it. Nor does he wish to stint our aid by any arbitrary limitation. All-out aid means effective aid, or, more bluntly, enough aid to make as certain as we can that the cause for which Britain took up arms shall prevail.

This is a consistency which squares with the interests of our national defense. If, as a result of our ineffective or limited aid, Britain goes down, the result in America needs little effort from the imagination to envisage. Hitler would then fill the vacuum of world power. Since we have never been neutral in thought toward Hitler, we should be faced at once with a potential enemy. Nor does this enemy stand alone. On our Pacific flank, as we were reminded by the Nazi greeting in Washington to Admiral Nomura, stands Hitler's ally, waiting for a signal in Britain's destruction to go off on a Pacific rampage. An entire world turned hostile would require our own transformation into an armed camp. How is there any possibility in such circumstances that we could retain our democratic institutions? Aside from the effect upon them of our militarization, we should be living in daily fear of that Fifth Column activity which has become the characteristic feature of Hitler conquest.

All these results from the downfall of Britain are patent even to the "yet-buts" in Congress. But they say, in Senator Lodge's words, that those results wouldn't be "fatal" to our country, meaning, presumably, that we wouldn't go under. Nobody thinks that, but the penultimate stage to fatality is the condition that Mr. Willkie envisaged. He said a British failure would be disastrous, and the American people, only 22 per cent of whom are unqualifiedly against the lend-lease bill, agree with him. Now they and their fathers did not build this country by waiting around for disasters, even though such disasters might not prove fatal. They took action to stave them off. They acted then and they want to act now.

The nonaction on the part of the "blind opposition" is of a piece with the nonaction of a community toward the spread of flu. Flu isn't fatal, but that is no reason for not seeking to take preventive measures, to isolate it, and eventually to stamp it out. Mr. Willkie's testimony was a refreshing breeze of the commonsense which has made this country great, and it added to his own stature as a great American.

Back To Taxation

The board investigating privately owned tax-free properties in the District is achieving a high early-season average. In the first fourteen cases five properties have been put on the rolls for taxation, with an expected gain of $13,257 to the District treasury. Similar success with all 2,000 items to be examined might reasonably be expected to show a profit approaching a million dollars for the District. Another way to look at the gain is as a spreading of the burden among real estate available to the District for taxation. In any city where the Federal Government owns large amounts of property, the problem of finding something to tax becomes difficult. The $111,794,179 worth of privately owned property here exempt from taxation seems small when compared with United States real estate valued at $668,071,457 on which no taxes are paid. The investigation of private property will, however, clear the picture so that Senator Overton may go ahead once more with his fair proposal to make Federal property the basis for the annual Federal payment to the District.

PRAYER OF THE HUNTED.

God, I came from Thee
and I was part of Thy touch and Thy sight.
I was of the tree;
I was of the night;
I was of the river and the sky.
God, I flowed from Thy hands and I wish to die
upon mine own lands.
I was of the wind and the rain;
I was of Thy faith and Thy right;
I was of Thy pain
and I am of Thy light.
God, I blew from Thy breath;
I was of Thy soul.
If they give me death,
O God, leave me whole.

Churchill's Speech

I listened to Winston Churchill's message to the world February 9. In conclusion, he voiced the plea of a strong nation facing insuperable odds, asking of us, not for lives in defending a democracy of which we are a part, but only that we gird Britain with the sinews of that defense. England deems it a privilege to sacrifice its lives in the vanguard of that war against destruction of democracy, asking only that the United States reload empty guns behind the lines. I wonder why such a plea is necessary.

We have promised that aid. In a mental kaleidoscope I see the Wheelers and the Lindberghs, the Holts and the Fishes, the strikes and the red tape all following a pattern that meets Hitler's approval. I see our dilatory Congress taking weeks on end to make a five-minute face-saving decision. And I needs must wonder if, under our present turtle-like rate of speed on national defense, Mr. Churchill is not asking and praying for aid that we will dole out too late. And I can't help but wonder when some action of this Nation will bring proud tears to American eyes as the closing lines of undaunted Churchill brought to mine.

L. W. M.

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 8.

Winston Churchill says, "We do not need the gallant armies which are forming throughout the American union." He does not say, however, that he would not at least welcome the proffered aid of the American Navy. Be that as it may, it may be that the British people, in this their hour of direct extremity, are too proud or, it may be, too hurt to ask for armed assistance from men largely of their own race and ideals.

It is possible they may take the view of why ask for something which they would have freely given had the situation been reversed. When criminals are running amuck do relatives, friends, neighbors, or members of a community have to be asked to go to one another's assistance?

One thing seems clear—whether or not unaided Britain goes down carrying with her most of the civilized world, the name American, in the ages to come, will bear the stigma of mankind's utmost scorn and contempt.

Tin Conservation

Nearly every day one reads about conservation of metals. The country needs tin, aluminum, sheet iron and many more metals of which there is an actual shortage or an expected shortage.

Many brands of coffee are still packed in tins, more than 100,000,000 yearly. Large chain stores sell many hundred million pounds of coffee packed in paper bags. Why cannot all coffee be packed in paper bags or paper boxes? A 10-cent tin of tobacco costs the smoker 12 cents—two cents extra for the can. More than 200,000,000 of these tins are used each year and thrown away. At least another 300,000,000 10-cent packs of tobacco are sold in paper wrappers and are satisfactory to the smoker. Why cannot all tobacco be packed in paper boxes or paper wrappers? Why are fifty cigarettes packed in tins when paper boxes are used by some cigarette manufacturers and seem perfectly satisfactory? Why should three tennis balls be packed in tin cans? Why beer in cans? Why glue in tins? Is not a paper box or a glass container just as efficient for these and many other products now packed in tins?

Law Of Intelligence

Mr. Sperry's letter On Fundamentals in The Post of February 6 is one of the most intelligent I have yet read. It comes from the rank and file, not an unimportant niche in our democracy. Truly, intelligence only can save the world, and it is not found in hatred, fear and selfishness. Law is a result of inteHigence. It is a fundamental force, operating omnipresently regardless of human opinion about it. Neither can a statesman or potentate make it or enforce it: he can only follow his concept of it. No statesmen, president, king or potentate can intelligently influence his people or wield his power unless he realizes his inability even to govern himself without first knowing that God governs all, that God makes law and enforces it.

Also a willingness to abide by this fact must be had. Only as we retain a high conception of law can we remain a powerful people. We don't need to know all the intrigues of past ages, nor how they have intrigued, but it is necessary to know that they have brought their own destruction. This is where Hitler has fallen and is still falling—down, down in his own horrible network of destruction for others.

But where is our intelligence, Mr. Sperry? While England in her agony patiently awaits our aid (I should think we would now be ashamed to look the word in the face and England, too), while our statesmen indulge in wasting time via recriminations with the President, while the eternal salvation of two of the best governments on earth hang in the balance—where is our intelligence?

Transportation Problem

Transportation downtown from many sections of the District, Northwest, is still an unusual problem. Most everyone who analyzes the situation feels that the Capital Transit Company is trying to do its best to accommodate the increasing number of people who ride to work. If a certain number of cab drivers, however, who have been making it a practice of ignoring the signals of people who live in the sections below the Florida Avenue fare zone, passing them by on Sixteenth Street and on Connecticut Avenue, in order to proceed above Florida Avenue, where the "pick-up" is more lucrative, would give half as good service on rainy days as the Capital Transit Company does on other days there would be less complaining of cab drivers.

These drivers should be made to realize that they are in the business to serve the public. If zones do not pay well, they should complain to the District government. Taking it out on the 20-cent-zone rider who stands in the rain and snow awaiting but not getting a passing unoccupied taxicab, is a disservice that will not long be countenanced. This writer hopes it will not become necessary for riders to take the license plate numbers of taxicabs whose inconsiderate drivers pass them by because of selfish reasoning. A list of such numbers wouldn't make a pretty picture for a cab driver who is trying to make a living. RIDER.

Miss Keller's Resignation

In your editorial, "Communist Technique," February 9, you have published a direct misquotation of Miss Helen Keller, alleging that her reason for resigning from the American Rescue Ship Mission was that there were other groups serving the same purpose with which she "would be happier to be affiliated."

We demand that you publish a retraction of this misquotation, and that together with this retraction you publish her full satement which is as follows:

"The past few weeks I have made many careful inquiries about the American Rescue Ship Mission because I have been troubled by newspaper charges and private accusations connected with its activities. As the result of this investigation I conclude that I am not equal to keeping track of the endless happenings, complications and rivalries which surround the mission.

"On account of my handicap I am a slow worker. It was because my heart was pierced by the plight of the Spanish refugees that I tried to help them. But now I find the extra effort for the mission too heavy a burden in addition to my life's work under the American Foundation for the Blind. Therefore I am resigning from the American Rescue Ship Mission altogether.

"My affectionate interest in the refugees remains. It grieves me deeply that circumstances did not leave me free to do what I should like to for them, but I shall rejoice at whatever is accomplished in the rescue and rehabilitation of those heroic champions of Spanish freedom."

In the last paragraph of your editorial you state: "Citizens realize more fully that they must not only inquire into the need for funds and services they are asked to contribute; they must also make certain that those resources will not be used to undermine the foundation on which our democratic society rests." By this, do you mean to imply that the rescue of the Spanish refugees will "undermine the foundations on which our democratic society rests"?

MARIE COLEMAN,
Executive Secretary, Washington Chapter, American Rescue Ship Mission.

Washington, Feb. 10.

[Editor's note: The Post regrets an error in the editorial appearing on this page on Sunday, February 9, under the caption "Communist Technique." It was Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and not Miss Helen Keller who resigned from the American Rescue Ship Mission because "there are other groups serving the same purpose with which I would be happier to be affiliated." Miss Keller resigned because she wishes to give more time to the American Foundation for the Blind and an investigation convinced her that she is "not equal to keeping track of the endless happenings, complications and rivalries which surround the mission."]

A True American

If Wendell Willkie, the gentleman who really lost the Presidency, can be such a good sport about losing, why then do the ones who merely supported him—the so-called isolationists—have to take it so hard? More than ever what we really need right now in this country is cooperation.

As for the assertion that many of his voters have deserted him, I don't believe it. I personally know a lot of them (including myself) who fully approve of his support of President Roosevelt. I admire Wendell Willkie greatly for his courage, independence and patriotism. He is really a true American.

The Post Impressionist

Uncle Ed

MY UNCLE ED had the reputation of being the tightest man who ever claimed Rhode Island as his native State, and for the benefit of my non-Yank friends, I would state that in little Rhode Island there are no spendthrifts.

There were a lot of stories about Uncle Ed which I did not believe. For instance, I did not believe the one about his owing old man Butman $1.12½ and cutting a cent in half in order that he might have the exact change. Neither did I quite swallow the one about his dividing the fire-bed of his parlor stove (we had them in Rhode Island in those days) in two halves so that he might save coal by having half a fire when it was above zero.

But there were some things that I knew were true, because I had seen them many times. For instance, Uncle Ed loved tobacco in any and every form, including snuff, and was never without it. Many times I have seen him buy a big nickel plug of chewing tobacco at old man Butman's store. And when he got through with that plug of tobacco he usually had gotten his nickel's worth. First he would cut off a hunk and chew on it until it had no more flavor. Then he would put it on the nearest stove to dry out. When it was sufficiently dry, Uncle Ed would rub it a while and then put it into his clay pipe and smoke it. The ashes he would dump into a can which he always carried and use for snuff. Carrying on in this way, Uncle Ed would usually get several days' wear out of his nickel's worth of tobacco.

It would be a masterpiece of understatement to say that Uncle Ed was economical in the matter of clothing. During the time that I remembered him he was a surfman in the Life Saving Station at Point Judith and even he recognized his habits in these matters, as is evidenced by the fact that when he took his socks (which he washed himself) out to dry, he would invariably say to me: "Well, Johnnie, I guess I'll take my 'legs' out and dry them." And his uniform pants were patched until one could hardly see a square of the original pants.

Uncle Ed loved the life of a surfman, particularly when he had an opportunity for active service in saving the lives of seamen and passengers on a wrecked or stranded vessel. But his secret sorrow was that he did not have enough time off to cultivate a little plot of land and thus save money by raising his own vegetables.

However, he did do the next best thing by "mining" his own coal and salvaging his own wood. Over the years he made a study of the tides around Point Judith and was able to tell, almost to the furlong, just where the cargo of a wrecked vessel, when heavier than water, would reach shore.

With this knowledge Uncle Ed was able, after a heavy surf, to proceed to the proper spot along the coast, always within sight of the station, and bring back at least one bucket full of coal which had been washed ashore from some barge which had been wrecked near there in the past.

Seldom did he come back from his patrol without either a bucket of coal or as much wood as he could carry and never, in 20 years, did he spend money for either of these necessities. As a usual thing he always had his next winter's supply in his cellar by midsummer.

I never could understand Uncle Ed being this way, because all of his brothers were very free-handed and generous and spent their money as fast as they made it. There came a time, however, when I did understand.

In 1913 my mother died, and I was without a home. I had reached the age where I was able and willing to work but needed a springboard in order to be able to dive into the new way of life. All of my uncles except Uncle Ed had always spent their incomes up to the hilt, so I didn't give them a thought in the matter of a place to stay until I was able to be on my own. And, of course, Uncle Ed because of his known "tightness" was impossible of consideration.

Somehow I managed, but, of course, not very happily. Then—it seemed like a long time afterward but it was only a few days—I met Uncle Ed on the street, and he said: "Johnnie, I've been looking for you for several days. Come on home to dinner."

We went home, and I had the first real meal I had eaten in several days, and then Uncle Ed took me upstairs and ushered me into one of the cosiest rooms I had ever seen.

"I hope you like this room, Johnnie," said Uncle Ed, "because this is your home from now on if you are willing to stay."

I guess he must have been able to read my thoughts because he finally said: "You know, Johnnie, it must be a lot of fun to spend money as fast, or faster, than you can make it. But it's a more satisfying fun to go without a little and know that you have a place for your kin when the place they had sinks away from under them."

I think that Uncle Ed was a very happy man and I know that I had a better understanding of why some folks are tight.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Hitler's Lost War

COL. LINDBERGH'S conviction that Hitler is going to win the war is apparently shared by a number of people, whose views indicate that wishful thinking is not all on one side in this struggle.

THOMPSON

But there is one person who does not share their confidence. His name is Adolf Hitler.

Are not the negotiations between Hitler and Vichy interesting? Why is Hitler negotiating? He did not negotiate with Dr. Schuschnigg, the chancellor of Austria, nor with Dr. Benes, the President of Czecho-Slovakia, nor with the President of Poland, when all three of these countries had armies and institutions intact. He attacked, destroyed and has not negotiated since.

Seven months have passed since Hitler defeated France in the worst military disaster in modern history. Two-thirds of the country is occupied, and it all could be. Two million French prisoners are in Hitler's hands. The country is weaponless at home. Why then does Hitler attempt to make another Munich in Vichy after defeat? If he wants the Mediterranean ports why does he not take them? Could anyone stop him?

Is there not something comic in the spectacle of Hitler tossing Laval to Petain, and Petain tossing him back to Hitler, and Hitler tossing him back to Petain as though Laval were the flamingo who served as a live croquet ball in "Alice in Wonderland?"

Why does Hitler carry on like this?

IN HIS LAST SPEECH Hitler said that in the last year he had made 724 mistakes and the British 1,824,000. The number of mistakes on either side, however, is not what is important. The political and strategical nature of the mistakes is what is important. Britain underestimated the military strength and inner morale of Germany. Britain overestimated the military strength of France. But Hitler completely misestimated Britain, but completely! And he also overestimated the military strength of France. And these two mistakes have cost Hitler his war.

IN APRIL LAST YEAR I had a talk with an important neutral European statesman. The talk was confidential, and only the fact that the gentleman has died since releases me from the confidence. He told me that he had had a talk with Hitler only a few days before the attack on Poland. Hitler had assured him that the British were bluffing. He confided in him that the Nazi intelligence service had interrupted the reports of Sir William Edmund Ironside to both the Polish and British governments and staffs, from which he had learned that in Ironside's opinion the Poles could only hold out for a matter of weeks. Arguing from this, Hitler concluded, first, that the Poles would not offer effective resistance, and, second, that the British, once Poland fell, would withdraw from the war.

In the course of the conversation, Hitler said, "I do not want war with Britain. To avoid it is the very basis of my policy. Even if I won, it would be a world catastrophe. Germany is in no position to take over the role of Britain and neither is the United States. It would mean world chaos, in which Germany would suffer as well as everybody else. My representatives all assure me that Britain will not really fight."

WHEN COL. LINDBERGH, in the recent cross-examination before the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee said, "after all, it was France and Britain who declared war," he made a most misleading statement. France and Britain were urging Hitler to settle his affairs by negotiation with Poland—with whom he had a nonaggression pact that he himself had signed. They said privately to Hitler and publicly to the world that suspension of negotiations and armed aggression would automatically produce war with both of them.

Having once tried to save peace by giving in to Hitler, over Czecho-Slovakia, they now tried to save it by resisting him and making the consequences perfectly clear.

Hitler did not believe them and opened war by a lightning attack from all frontiers on Poland. For two days afterward the Chamberlain government hesitated, and there were scenes in the House of Commons, and Englishmen cried, "Speak for England! We have given our word of honor!"

Chamberlain did not declare war. He took account of the fact that a state of war had been created by Hitler's aggression.

Why does Col. Lindbergh attempt to mislead America by inferring that France and Britain were guilty?

Why did Hitler not turn from the short successful war on Poland, directly against France and Britain? Why did he wait from fall until spring?

He still wanted to separate France from Britain!

WHY, HAVING knocked France down in the space of a few weeks, did he hastily conclude an armistice without demanding the surrender of the fleet or the capitulation of the colonial army?

Because he thought Britain would withdraw.

Why did he not push right through and attack England at that moment, when the British Isles were completely undefended, and the army, escaped from Dunkirk, still disorganized for home defense?

Because he does not want Britain as an enemy. He wants Britain as an ally. That has been the basis of his whole miscalculated policy!

Ludendorff would not have waged such a war. And Hitler, were he perfectly sure of himself, would not have waged such a war. For Hitler has said, "the slightest sign of vacillation is suicidal."

Fantastic as it may seem, the sudden collapse of France further set Hitler's plans awry. History may yet record that the disastrous defeat of France, plus the miraculous steadiness of Britain, was the moment of Hitler's Armageddon. For Hitler had counted on luring the whole British army into France and pounding it slowly to pieces on French soil. Then he would not have to invade England, but England, deprived of her army and all her trained forces, would have had to capitulate. But neither the armies of Britain nor of France were pounded to pieces. For the French army simply collapsed—and the British escaped.

Hitler's haste to conclude an armistice was still made in the hope of getting England out of the war. Then he could make a "deal" with her. He misestimated England, therefore, before the attack on Poland, after the victory over Poland, and after the collapse of France!

MEANWHILE, his hastily concluded armistice with France plagues him. His hope for a Nazi revolution in France is a dud. The rock upon which he must found his Nazi church in France is Peter, to be sure, but Pete (Pierre) Laval, a discredited old gambler of a politician, full of cynicism and personal ambition, and without a shred of a mass following, he has no weapon with which he can bludgeon France into relinquishing her navy. For France has Hitler already, so has nothing worse to fear; if he promises to release the prisoners—which he is really afraid to do—the French have no faith that his promises will be kept. Why should they? If he gets the Mediterranean ports, he has no ships with which to use them. And he negotiates because he needs France!

For meanwhile Britain, defending her own shores and at the same time fighting a brilliant campaign hundreds of miles from home, has, with the aid of Greece, knocked out Italy in Africa. There are no Germans or Italians in Africa for Weygand to surrender to even if his government so ordered.

Two armies and two navies escaped from Hitler as the result of his sudden victory over France, and as the result of the third repetition of his mistake about Britain.

Does Col. Lindbergh think that this behavior is either political or military genius? It is crass stupidity. It is a moral moron misestimating the strength of resolution and a word of honor.

BUT HITLER has another card to play. He is playing it. And his offensive during the last few weeks has been a political offensive—concentrated in Washington! There his friends, whatever kind words they may be saying about Britain, are playing his game as vigorously as they can. Stop aid to Britain! Force Britain to give in by reversing the American foreign policy! Save Germany the awful task of having to defeat a Britain supplied by the United States!

This is Hitler's fourth attempt since the war began to defeat Churchill without having really to fight him. For Hitler knows that even if he should win, it would be a world catastrophe. He would have a situation on his hands with which he knows he is unable to cope.

IF COL. LINDBERGH loves peace so much, why is he not advising a defeated Italy to make peace with a victorious Britain? Why is he advising a completely undefeated Britain to make peace with Hitler instead?

Since the Colonel has again elected to court the publicity that he pretends to loathe by playing high politics, it is the right of the American people to ask him a few straightforward questions.

Congress' New Role

THERE IS AN almost comic disparity between the common conception of the lease-lend fight and the simple reality. According to popular myth, the lease-lend bill is a vast grant of powers, conceived in the dictatorial seclusion of the President's study, foisted without consultation on the Congressional leadership, and now being driven through with all the whips and scorpions of Administration pressure.

Unfortunately for its eager disseminators, the myth is sadly lacking in support from the facts. Your correspondents have already reported that the President, far from playing the dictator in the lease-lend fight, was quietly restoring the traditional legislative-executive relationship, which he himself suspended years before. New evidence of the truth of this assertion was easily discoverable in the management of the bill in the House.

Two striking facts tell the story. First, during the entire debate on the bill in the House, Speaker Rayburn and his lieutenants prepared, approved or rejected amendments on their own hook. Their reliance on their own judgement was so complete that they assert they never once followed the old rule of "telephoning the White House when in doubt." This, in itself, was an astonishing innovation.

Then, second, no real effort was made at any time to herd House members into line with the usual threats of political punishment and promises of political reward. The White House has always been very free with these in the past, and a good many men around the President, unprepared for the passive abandonment of such useful weapons, were rather laughably disturbed by it. Their reaction was nicely expressed by an over-excitable New Dealer, who asked, somewhat plaintively, "Why in God's name don't they trot out the judgeships?" Even now, while people not in the Government should be rejoiced by the President's altered ways, there are plenty of influential Administration personages who are frankly depressed.

THE MOST IMPORTANT episode preceding the lease-lend fight in the House was the bipartisan conference on the bill called by the President some weeks ago, at the suggestion of Speaker Rayburn. During this conference, House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., asked the President what the aims of the bill were. The President replied simply, "The aim is to help the British to whip Hitler." He added that if Congress would give him sufficient authority for this purpose, he was "perfectly willing" to accept any amendments the members of Congress thought desirable.

It was this response of the President's that so deeply impressed the wise chieftain of the Senate Republicans, Charles L. McNary, who subsequently used all his powerful influence to prevent the fight from becoming too embittered. It was also this response that Rayburn and his lieutenants took as their charter of action in the House.

Before the President's bipartisan conference, Rayburn had worked out with Secretary of State Cordell Hull the three amendments proposed and generally approved by the conferees. These amendments, to avoid any authorization of convoys, to put a time limit on the bill and to require trimonthly reports to Congress, were adopted in the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Then when the bill came to the floor, a sort of special steering committee was formed, including Rayburn and the House Democratic leader, John W. McCormack; the chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, Sol Bloom; the committee member who did most of the real work, Representative Luther A. Johnson, and several others. This committee met every morning to consider the program for the day's session.

As has been said already, the committee reached its decisions on its own hook, so far as the President was concerned. Liaisons were maintained, however, with Representative James Wadsworth and the other House Republicans in favor of aid to Britain, and with Senator Walter F. George and the other Senate managers of the bill. The most controversial amendments approved by the steering committee, to limit the value of existing war materiels to be transferred under the bill to $1,300,000,000, originated simultaneously in both House and Senate. There was feeling for something of the sort in the House. At the other end of the Capitol, the Senate managers became aware that Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg and several other isolationists proposed to charge the President with asking power "to give away the Navy." The amendment cheating the Michigan Senator of his oration was a joint House and Senate product.

ALTHOUGH THE leadership slipped on the Dirksen amendment, permitting repeal of the bill by concurrent resolution, the results of the House debate and voting were eminently satisfactory. The bill was passed by a large majority, in effective form. The President was delighted, and telephoned Rayburn and his coworkers to offer his hearty congratulations. And the House members themselves, having been encouraged to shape the bill to their own desires, were as pleased as the President. Had they been dragooned and restricted, the vote might have been even larger, and the amendments even more slight. But as it is, the Congressional atmosphere is pleasant and healthy. In short, the President obliged the Congressional leaders by changing his ways. He has also served his own interests.

Clearing The Air

Churchill Outlines British Expectations

CHURCHILL'S latest speech gears British policy to the President's policy of aid to Britain short of fighting.

Churchill sees no need for the aid of an American army—neither this year nor any year "that I can foresee." He asks only for "an immense and continuous supply of war materials and technical apparatus of all kinds." He asks for help in carrying them to Great Britain, specifically by the provision of a great mass of new merchant shipping.

Churchill spoke not only to us but to the British Empire and the whole world. He has put indelibly on the record, for his own people as well as for us, the limits of the aid he expects from us. He has told the British and the Allies not to expect intervention by American troops. He has told them, in effect, that they must accept our role, outlined by President Roosevelt, as an "arsenal" for the democracies.

LINDLEY

Churchill's speech unquestionably reflects, in some degree, the success of the mission of Harry Hopkins, the President's most trusted adviser.

CHURCHILL did not say that the British did not desire a declaration of war by the United States. He, and all true Englishmen, must desire such an irrevocable and unlimited commitment. But he evidently has been brought to believe that he cannot expect, and that the British people and the world should not be led to expect, such a commitment from us. All they have a right to expect is a growing and continuous supply of weapons and of the ships to carry them in. The question of naval aid from us in protecting these shipments is left open.

Senator Wheeler has made a point of discrepancy between this speech of Churchill's and the implications of his statement a few weeks ago that the British did not need American troops during 1941.

Not knowing the inside of Churchill's mind, but having access to other well-informed Englishmen, I venture this explanation: Churchill originally specified 1941 because, being realistic, he wished to make no promises beyond that period. Who can say with confidence what aid the British ultimately will need for victory?

Roughly, there are two theories as to how the British can destroy the Nazi regime. By the first theory, they must invade the European continent and defeat the German armies in the field. This would be an immense undertaking, even from a base so close to Europe as England is, if the morale of the German army had not been undermined.

BY THE SECOND THEORY, the Nazis will begin to wane when the British become able to punish severely from the air military targets in Germany. When the British become able to do this, the Nazis will know the British are on the upgrade, from a military viewpoint. The Germans have nothing to fall back on. The British will have our immense resources to rely upon, and justifiably it will be supposed that their strength will continue to increase. Somewhere on this rising scale of British strength, it is supposed, German morale will begin to crack. This is especially likely to happen if the British assert convincingly that their aim is the destruction of the Nazi regime, not of the German people.

By this second theory, the British will not need to invade the continent at all, or at least until the morale of the German army has been sapped.

There are variations of these theories. For example, one is that if Hitler attempts to invade England and fails, at heavy cost in life, there may be a revolution in Germany, engineered by leaders in the army who openly or covertly were against the attempt at invasion.

ANYONE WHO attempts to forecast the course of the war is only guessing. But Churchill's speech shows that he realizes the British must not rely upon us for more than weapons and ships. In turn, he is making the British people and their Allies realize this.

From Churchill's speech it stands to reason that an American expeditionary force would be superfluous. Even through 1942, he says, large numbers of new ships will be needed to carry supplies to Great Britain. There will be no shipping space left to transport and supply American troops.

In a sense, Churchill's speech is a diplomatic triumph for the United States. It renounces all expectation of aid from an American expeditionary force. It accepts, with all outward cheerfulness and satisfaction, our role as a nonbelligerent friend of and base for, Great Britain and her Allies. It asks for no more, and it tells the British people that that is enough to insure victory. It clears the air of many misgivings and much nonsense. It should aid the union of our own people behind a policy in which an overwhelmingly large majority of them thoroughly believe—all aid short of fighting to the resolute British and their Allies.

Japan's New Envoy Bows To Orient, Begins Duties Here

Japan's new Ambassador to the United States, Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, arrived here yesterday and began his mission by turning his face toward the Pacific and making a long, low bow in the general direction of his Emperor, Hirohito.

Also noted by diplomatic circles was the fact that Nomura was met at Union Station by representatives of Germany and Italy, Japan's Axis partners, as well as by State Department officials.

The bow took place because Nomura arrived here on the day that Japanese celebrate as the 2061st anniversary of their empire.

More than 200 Japanese, including members of the embassy staff, members of the local Nipponese colony and Japanese business men from New York participated in the morning at commemorative services. The new Ambassador presided.

The simple ceremonies, lasting about five minutes, began with the entire company making a full bow in the general direction of the Emperor. Following that they sang the national anthem and finished off by giving three banzais, or cheers, for the Empire of the Rising Sun.

Nomura closed the exercises with brief remarks of greeting.

Tall for a Japanese (he is 6 feet) and gray-haired, Nomura is an old friend of President Roosevelt and the Chief Executive said as much at his press conference yesterday.

During the World War when Mr. Roosevelt was Assistant Secretary of the Navy Nomura wsa the Japanese naval attache here.

The President said yesterday that Nomura would visit the White House to present his credentials probably today or tomorrow.

Protocol decreed that the new envoy could not discuss political questions for publication until he presents his credentials.

He was met at the station by Col. George Summerlin, State Department chief of protocol; Maxwell Hamilton, chief of the Far Eastern division, and his assistant, Joseph W. Ballantine.

First to shake hands with the Ambassador after the State Department officials was Hans Thomsen, German Charge d'Affairs. The German naval attacher, Vice Admiral Robert Witthoeft-Emden, also was on hand.

Representing the Italian Embassy was the Counselor-Minister, Alberto Rossi Longhi.

Son of Uruguayan President Invited To Warm Springs

By the United Press

President Roosevelt has invited President Gen. Higinio Morinigo of Paraguay to send his 10-year-old son to Warm Springs, Ga., for treatment for infantile paralysis, it was disclosed last night.

His invitation to the South American executive was contained in a personal letter to Morinigo which also urged that Mrs. Morinigo accompany the youth. He wrote it immediately after learning that the lad, Higinio, jr., had been stricken.

Paraguayan Minister Juan Soler said he was greatly impressed by the President's "noble gesture." He did not know whether the invitation would be accepted.

Empire Day In Japan

By Otto D. Tolischus

2,601st Anniversary

Copyright by New York Times

TOKYO, Feb. 11.—Facing, in the words of Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye, "the most dangerous situation since its foundation" when the issues of war or peace are held here to be in balance, Japan today celebrated her 2,601st anniversary of the founding of the Japanese Empire.

In keeping with wartime economy it was explained the traditional imperial banquet in Homei Hall at the Imperial Palace which marked the high point of Empire Day celebrations in previous years was dispensed with this time. But in line with the tension of the times the turnout in the parades to the imperial palace was larger than ever.

It exceeded even that of the twenty-sixth centennial celebration last year. And though traditional Japanese decorum governed both the paraders and the onlooking crowds there was an unmistakable seriousness of determination in the faces of all.

The day, which commemorates the first imperial ceremonies in honor of the sun goddess, celebrated on the legendary date of February 11, 660 B. C. by her mythological descendant Emperor Jimmu after his conquest of central Japan, was opened by his lineal descendant, Emperor Hirohito, this morning when surrounded by the imperial princes and officials at the imperial sanctuary.

THE CEREMONY began with a message of felicitation by Prince Kimiteru Sanjo, chief court ritualist, to the Emperor, whereupon his imperial majesty clad in ancient ceremonial dress, entered the innermost sanctuary to worship his divine ancestress.

Then the imperial princes and the representative of the Dowager Empress paid homage to the Emperor and privileged persons offered their felicitations at the imperial palace.

Simultaneously thousands of Japanese men, women and children pilgrimaged to sacred Shinto shrines throughout the country in a strong revival of the national religion which representing "the way of the gods" is an expression both of Japanese patriotism and national unity in faith in the common divine ancestry.

But largest number of pilgrims collected before the Shinto shrine in Tokyo dedicated to the war dead. Throughout the day persons of all ages and classes, wearing both "foreign" and traditional Japanese clothes, purified themselves by washing their mouths at the shrine pools. Then they worshiped in the open before the outer shrine, ending by throwing sens (Japanese pennies) before it as tokens of their devotion.

OUTSIDE the gates women offered white girdles for worshiping women to put stitches of red into them which, together with the stitchers' prayers, are supposed to insure the invulnerability of the soldier wearing such a girdle.

In the afternoon some 120,000 representatives of all sorts of organizations, including army schools, youth organizations, and the new National Industrial Service Federation, assembled before various shrines in the city's parks, then marched waving flags and blaring bands to the open space before the Emperor's palace to salute their temporal spiritual head.

Nearly all of them in uniform—green, blue or khaki—including the tiniest tots from primary schools and some of the older youth organizations, marched with their rifles across their shoulders.

The paraders sang as they marched, but in contrast to Western affairs of kindred nature, the crowds watched silently without cheers.

TONIGHT was devoted to both public and private festivities in keeping with tradition. There was sacred music and dancing in Korei Hall at the the Imperial Palace, and in private homes.

The only public festival held tonight under the joint auspices of the city and the prefectures Tokyo was in the Hibiya Public Hall, where 5,000 primary school teachers and ward officials were addressed by Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, home minister.

"The Japan national policy is unique in the world," he said. "Heaven sent down Niniginomikoto to Kashihara Yamato Province with the message that his posterity shall reign over and govern Japan for ages eternal. It was on this happy day 2,601 years ago that our first Emperor Jimmu ascended the throne. Dynasties in foreign countries were created by man. Foreign kings, emperors and presidents are all created by men, while Japan has a sacred throne inherited from imperial ancestors. Japan's imperial rule is, therefore, the extension of Heaven.

"Dynasties created by men may collapse but the Heaven-created throne is beyond men's power."

Hitler's Balkan Moves

THE BALKAN barometer is falling rapidly. On Sunday, Winston Churchill revealed that the "forward tentacles" of the large military and air force which Germany has assembled in Rumania have already penetrated Bulgaria. He warned the latter nation not to embark once again "on a needless and disastrous war."

NOVER

The next day Great Britain broke off diplomatic relations with the Rumanian kingdom now ruled by a "dictator" who is no more than clay in Hitler's hands. The departure of the British Minister from Bucharest may be the prelude to attack on Rumanian oil fields and airdromes by the R. A. F.

Yesterday, Turkish newspapers told of 200 truckloads of German soldiers wearing civilian overcoats passing through a Dobrudja village while Belgrade heard that fleets of German troop transport planes were sighted over Hungary speeding southward. In the meantime a nightly blackout of Rumanian cities has been ordered by the Bucharest authorities.

IS HITLER now about to carry out his long-postponed drive to Salonika and the Dardanelles, using Bulgaria as a corridor? The indications certainly point in that direction. There can be no disguising the fact that a development of that kind has ominous possibilities for the British.

Nevertheless, the fact must be borne in mind that a German drive to the southeast at this time would occur in a very different setting from that which existed last fall when such a Nazi offensive first loomed menacingly on the horizon.

Four months ago a seemingly formidable Italian army was still in the field in northern Africa, with outposts extending as far east as Sidi Barrani. This compelled the British to allocate the largest part of their Middle Eastern command to the defense of Egypt. At the same time, they had to reckon with the danger of a German or a German-Italian drive across the Balkans and Anatolia to the Near East.

Since then, however, the situation in the eastern Mediterranean has undergone a fundamental transformation.

THE FIRST CHANGE occurred at the time of the Italian invasion of Greece, which enabled the British to occupy valuable bases on the Greek islands, particularly Crete. This helped clinch their control on the eastern Mediterranean and in that way simplified the task facing Gen. Wavell when he gave the order to attack the Italians at Sidi Barrani last December. For the role played by the British navy in the Libyan fighting was as vital to the outcome as that of the Army of the Nile or the R. A. F.

Another important change is now taking place. The debacle of the Italian military effort in Egypt and Libya has made possible the release of a considerable number of British troops and planes that soon may no longer be needed in Africa. These surplus troops and planes can be sent to the British Isles to help in the defense of that vital bastion. They can also be used to reinforce the Greeks in Albania or as a nucleus of a force which, operating out of Salonika, may ultimately serve as the spearhead for an offensive against German outposts in the Balkans.

HITLER CANNOT ignore this latter possibility, remote as it may seem at the moment. He certainly cannot ignore it if his plans call for an all-out attack on Great Britain in the not too distant future. It might be fatal to his chances if, in the midst of such a venture he found himself compelled to move troops and planes from western Europe to the Balkans and fight what he regards as the most nightmarish of all wars—a war on two fronts.

From the German point of view the essential prelude to the attack on Great Britain must be the elimination, or at least the minimizing, of all possibilities of such a two-front war. To that end, the Balkans must not only be brought into line but brought into line quickly while Italy is still in the field, while the British forces are still strung along a line extending all the way from Alexandria to Bengasi and beyond, while Great Britain is still compelled to maintain in the Mediterranean Sea power that might be transferred to the Atlantic.

CLIMATIC conditions in Bulgaria are still unpropitious for a large scale German military drive to the south. Yet from Bulgarian airfields Salonika could be made untenable for the British and thus the possibility removed of Great Britain using the Aegean area as a base of military operations. But the British have not been caught napping.

They are no longer waiting on events, as they did before the German attack on Norway, and later the assault on the Low Countries. Having taken the initiative in Africa and the Mediterranean, and finding that it pays dividends to do so, they are not likely to stand by with arms folded while Hitler repeats in the Balkans the strategy of presenting his enemies with a succession of accomplished facts.

Error Gets Briton 2,000-Foot Ride On Balloon Cable

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 11.—An antiaircraft gunner, J. Griffiths, while walking along some waste ground in the west country today suddenly saw a barrage balloon appear over a ridge in the ground. Thinking the balloon had broken away, Griffiths grabbed a guy rope and was instantly swept 40 feet into the air.

Too late, Griffiths realized the balloon was not a "runaway," but was being sent up by its crew.

Griffiths had the presence of mind to wind one guy rope around his body, hang up with both hands and to grip the fabric of the balloon with his teeth to lessen the danger of being swung wildly about.

Griffiths went up 2,000 feet before the ground crew noticed him. The balloon was quickly hauled down. He was found suffering only from shock and grazed hands.

Willkie Makes Final Plea in Support of British Aid Bill

Text of His Statement

The text of Wendell L. Willkie's statement before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in behalf of the British-aid bill follows:

I am appearing before your committee today in response to the invitation of your chairman and the suggestion of some of your members. I am glad to be here to make whatever contribution I can to the discussion of the important measure before you. I come not as an expert but as one tremendously interested, as each of you is, in the vital issues involved

Owing to my absence from the country, I have not been able to follow all of the debates on the measure, but such as I have read seem to me to provide an inspiring example of democracy at work. This is an issue in which emotions are naturally aroused, and yet, with few exceptions, those who have participated in the discussions, both in Congress and throughout the country, have done so without acrimony and without personalities. The few lapses from that high standard have been condemned.

It is really important in discussing such a measure as this that we be absolutely honest with ourselves. We must not hide important facts and we must have the courage to draw the proper inferences from the facts. Democracy cannot live by dodging around corners. It must think straight and act courageously. Whatever I say today represents my personal efforts and my honest appraisal of the situation both as to the facts and the inferences.

Great Alternatives

American democracy has a fateful decision to make at this time. I feel that perhaps the American people may have not yet fully grasped the extent of the crisis, or of their responsibility with regard to it. There has been too much loose talk about invasions, too little frank discussion of the real dangers—dangers with which we are faced and concerning which we are forced to decide.

In general, two great alternatives lie before us. I want to outline them briefly, because, no matter how much we may dread to choose, a choice between them cannot be avoided.

One alternative is the suggestion that America withdraw within herself. According to this view, we should build up our own defenses and not concern ourselves with anyone beyond our shores. It is said that if we create the strongest Army, the strongest Navy and the strongest air force in the world, no aggressor will ever strike at us, and therefore we will be able to avoid war.

But I am of the opinion that this alternative will inevitably result in the destruction of our civil liberties, the loss of our freedom, and eventually war.

For about a decade this country has maintained its standard of living by Federal deficit financing. If we now lock ourselves up within our own shores, the need for deficit financing will increase. In addition, the huge expenditures for defense will perhaps double our debt. The inevitable result of such a policy will be a decline in the American standard of living, the demoralization of our economic system and a weakening of our democratic institutions.

At the same time, if we isolate ourselves, Britain may have great difficulty in surviving. No man can say, at this time, whether or not Britain can win this war without our assistance in supplies, ships and armaments. But we do know that if she is defeated, the totalitarian powers will control most of the world. They will control not only Europe, but probably also most of Africa. They may also control the Atlantic Ocean.

Isolation Impossible

Under those circumstances, Germany would probably make a drive—whether economic or military—on Latin America; and perhaps Japan would also make a drive southward toward the East Indies. Thus the United States and Canada would be ringed about by totalitarian powers, using totalitarian methods of trade, unfriendly to the United States, and not reluctant to fight.

In my view, such a calamity would have two results. First, in order to compete with those powers, we ourselves would have to adopt totalitarian controls. We would lose our liberty here at home. But secondly, I believe that the United States would eventually be drawn into war against one or more of those powers. They would so cramp us and hinder us and infringe upon us that we would be forced to fight. In that event we would be fighting, alone, a different battle in the same war that Britain is now fighting.

The trouble with the idea that we can withdraw within ourselves is that it is too simple. It has no regard for the way the world is actually built. Great nations cannot isolate themselves. With our modern communications and means of transport, including the airplane, they are woven into the rest of the world.

The other alternative that faces the American people today is more realistic. It recognizes the interdependence, not only of men, but of ideas and principles. According to this view, which I share, an attack against liberty in one part of the world is a threat against liberty in another part of the world. If liberty is destroyed in Britain, this constitutes a real and immediate threat to liberty in the United States.

Already Committed

But we must not make the mistake of narrowing the entire discussion to the cause of Britain. Within the German lines there are half a dozen nations where liberty has been crushed. Our concern is broader than the welfare of any single nation; it is that the area of freedom be as large as possible. If Britain prevails, the enslaved democracies of Europe will revive.

It is only when there is a large international area of freedom that we can avoid totalitarian methods of trade. It is only in such an area that we can trade and compete with free peoples who love peace as we do and who have a respect for law. We do not have to define precisely how large that area must be. But we know that it must exist in the future, if we are to exist in liberty.

This is what aid to Britain really means: Not to work for Britain, but to work with Britain to defend an area of freedom.

The American people, and Congress, are already committed to the aid of Britain program. The opposition to the present bill, H. R. 1776, has not for the most part been based upon opposition to a policy of British aid. It has accepted that policy. And we are fortunate, I believe, in achieving such a high degree of national unity on this important issue.

Nevertheless, I feel an even higher degree of unity might be achieved in the light of the broader aspects I have touched upon. I have heard many cynical things said in this country of late. I have heard it said that all this talk about liberty is just British propaganda to get us involved in war. But I know that the American people stand for liberty, and they are neither afraid nor ashamed to stand for it.

Two Categories of Aid

The policy of full aid to Britain provides them with their best—and I believe their only—chance to defend liberty without themselves going into the war. This brings me to a consideration of the particular bill that is before this committee.

If we are going to adopt a policy of aid to Britain, it is, above all, necessary to make that aid effective. To render ineffective aid would be disastrous. Ineffective aid would give Hitler just as good a pretext against us as effective aid. But if our aid is ineffective, Britain may go down.

The requirements of Britain are fairly obvious and generally known. They divide themselves into two categories—immediate requirements and long-term requirements.

The long-term requirements, such as airplanes, munitions and ships, are now very largely in course of construction in this country. We are building them as fast as we can. But it will be many, many months before our efforts begin to show significant results. Our aircraft program, for instance, will provide a little help in 1941, but it will not begin to give Britain supremacy in the air until 1942.

The hope is that with the fulfillment of those long-term requirements Britain will attain a complete supremacy over Germany. But Britain may not hold out long enough to make use of those future materials and weapons unless certain immediate requirements are fulfilled. And these immediate requirements have the most direct bearing on the present bill, H. R. 1776.

Britain's Greatest Hazard

Britain's greatest hazard is not the bombing of her cities. I recently visited many of the northern industrial towns. The destruction that I saw was piteous and heart-rending, but it was not primarily a destruction of productive facilities. The damage to Britain's industries has so far been relatively small.

Britain's greatest hazard is, rather, the destruction of shipping. Britain now breathes chiefly through her northern ports. It is essential not only that these be kept open, but that they be kept supplied with enough shipping to meet the needs of the people and the heavy requirements of the military procurement program. Yet since May, 1940, Britain lost an everage of nearly 60,000 tons of shipping per week—almost three times her present rate of construction.

Now there have been suggestions before this committee to the effect that the way to aid Britain is simply to appropriate a certain number of billions of dollars and to turn these over to her credit, so that she may procure whatever she needs. A number of advantages have been urged for this method of procedure, and many of these arguments have great merit.

Nevertheless, I do not feel that the granting of credits can provide the effective immediate aid that I refer to. The problem is rather the immediate disposition of certain equipment. Much of this equipment cannot be purchased at any price, because the owner is the United States Government. It would also seem that under the domestic laws at present in force, the United States is unable to deliver such equipment to a belligerent without cumbersome and lengthy subterfuge.

More Destroyers

For instance, take the case of destroyers. Recently we disposed of 50 of our "obsolescent" destroyers by trading them to Britain for bases in this hemisphere. Britain desperately needed those destroyers and a great majority of our people felt that she should have them. Yet there is a grave question in the minds of many lawyers concerning the interpretation of domestic law in that instance. Many feel that the spirit if not the letter of the law was violated.

Britain needs still more destroyers. Merchant ships are making the crossing without nearly enough protection; in some cases 30 or 40 ships may be "protected" by only a couple of destroyers.

If we are to aid Britain effectively, we should provide her with from five to ten destroyers a month. We should be able to do this directly and swiftly rather than through the rigamarole of dubious legalistic interpretations.

Incidentally, if we are to make more destroyers available to Britain we should recondition them in this country in our own yards. The 50 destroyers that we delivered to the British some months ago have proved extremely valuable. But owing to congestion and the shortage of mechanics, Britain found it difficult to recondition all of them at once.

At the same time, of course, we ourselves must press on with our destroyer program so as to replace as quickly as possible the destroyers that we lend or lease to Britain. I understand that in 1942 we should expect a steady flow of from 15 to 20 new destroyers per month.

Destroyers are one example of the kind of thing which Britain needs, but which would be difficult or impossible to obtain through the mere granting of credit. Another example is the long-range bomber, and particularly the patrol bomber known as the PBY, and its various modifications and developments. These bombers can be of enormous assistance in patrolling the seas and supplmenting the work of destroyers off the coast of Britain.

Recently we turned over to Britain some of these patrol bombers, together with some "flying fortresses." But to do so we had to resort to a ruse. The Government returned the bombers to the private manufacturers who in turn resold them to Britain.

Point of Importance

I am against trying to kid along on any such basis in one of the most critical times that democracy has ever faced. I believe that instead of devising evasions of the law we should pass this new law superseding former legislation and giving the Government power to put these necessary weapons at the disposal of Britain.

In this regard there is one point of great importance. The decision as to whether these bombers or other weapons ought to be kept in this country, or whether they should be sent to protect the British life lines, is primarily a military decision for the experts of the Army and the Navy. It is important that this point be established in the bill.

The same principles that apply to destroyers and big bombers apply also to merchant shipping. Here of course the Maritime Commission has been able to deliver vessels to Britain by the simple expedient of holding auctions, which the commission is entitled to do. If Britain is the highest bidder at these auctions, she receives the ships. But this is a cumbersome device and delay. It is important that we make the most effective disposition that we possibly can of all available tonnage, and for this purpose the present bill provides for the necessary powers.

Extraordinary Situation

There are various other items that Britain needs, but these three will serve as examples. The point is that if we authorize our Government to lend or lease material of which it is in possession, we will be able to act quickly enough with the right things, to keep Britain afloat. If, on the other hand, we provide Britain with cash only, then our aid will be neither quick nor effective.

Such, in general, are my reasons for favoring the special powers provided for in H. R. 1776. The powers asked for are extraordinary to meet an extraordinary situation.

Now I am opposed to the undue concentration of power in the Chief Executive. Personally, I would have preferred to see Congress, whether through this bill or through others, instruct the President to lend or lease these things. I would much prefer to have the impetus come from Congress than from the Executive.

I believe that Congress should retain all possible power. Congress, however, has not acted. Therefore, I am forced to conclude that the only way to render aid quickly enough is to pass this bill with modifications. All modifications should seek to limit any unnecessary authority granted in the bill.

I have gone the full limit of my conscience in supporting the foreign policy of the Administration because of my great desire for national unity. I have wanted to see America stand united before the world as the friend of all who fight for liberty; the despiser of all aggressors and despoilers of the democratic way. It would be truly inspiring for us and liberty-loving people everywhere if this bill could be adopted with a nonpartisan and almost unanimous vote.

Wise Amendments

Many members of Congress who believe in the objectives of the measure are sincerely disturbed about its broad grant of powers. I urge the majority to examine with these men in the spirit of candor and cooperation every provision to see if the bill's true objective cannot be accomplished by the elimination of unnecessary authority. You of the majority do not need their votes to pass this bill but their approval and the approval of the millions of Americans whom they represent will give us the strength of a united people—a strength greater than that of armament, battleships and airplanes.

Certain very wise amendments have been adopted by the House of Representatives—(1) fixing a time limit on the powers granted; (2) authorizing Congress to terminate by joint resolution the powers granted. (Doubts are expressed about the constitutionality of this provision and, frankly, I have not had an opportunity to look into this phase of the question.) (3) apportioning the amount usable under this bill from present appropriations.

In the brief time that I have had to study the bill, I cannot give you in specific language any additional amendments, but I believe that an amendment limiting the operation of the bill to aid to England and the British Commonwealth of Nations, China and Greece would be wise. These are the only countries presently subject to aggression. I believe Congress should retain the power to pass upon aid to any other countries which may be later subject to aggression.

There are also certain technical phrases in the bill which in my judgment should be studied for possible clarification.

The phrase "and for other purposes" might be dropped from the title of the bill. Although this is a usual form of legal phraseology, many persons are alarmed by the unusual powers granted in the bill and this phrase, besides being unnecessary, tends to increase that alarm. Its elimination cannot restrict the true objectives of the measure.

The word "facility" in Section 2A (2) could possibly, through a strained construction, be construed to cover all or any section of industry, including newspapers and the radio. The word obviously is not used for that purpose, but in order to eliminate fears on that score a definition which disposes of any such possibility should be adopted.

Consultation Urged

In Section 3A (1) the words "or otherwise procure" are susceptible of the same kind of strained interpretations. They might be taken to authorize a President to go beyond the needs and purposes of the act. Therefore, a definition of "procure" should go into Section (3A (1).

There should also be some limitation on the extent of the contracts the President can make which go beyond July 1, 1943. If possible a temporary limit of the amount intended to be authorized during the life of the bill, should be set down, although I appreciate the great difficulty in determining such amount and have no constructive suggestion to make for such determination.

Some provision should be made that, in addition to the 90-day reports, the President should frequently consult with the leaders of both parties and presiding officers of both branches of Congress.

It might be wise in the interests of convenience and confidence to put all suggested amendments into one final section rather than to scatter them throughout the bill.

I deeply sympathize with the American people in the great decision they are called upon to make, and I sympathize with the members of Congress, upon whose shoulders fall the responsibility for decision. Their load is not made any lighter by the reflection that their decisions at this time will influence the course of history, perhaps for generations.

No man can guarantee to you that the policy of aid to Britain will not involve the United States in war. It is my solemn opinion, however, that, providing the aid is effective, it offers the best clear chance for us to keep out of war. Hitler will make war on us, or on our friends and allies in this hemisphere, when, as, and if he chooses. That is his record. But he is far less apt to be aggressive while Britain stands than if she were to fall.

Neither is any man able to tell you whether or not Britain can win. Military and naval experts can help you weigh the chances on one side or the other, but I don't believe any man knows, or can know. There are too many intangible factors.

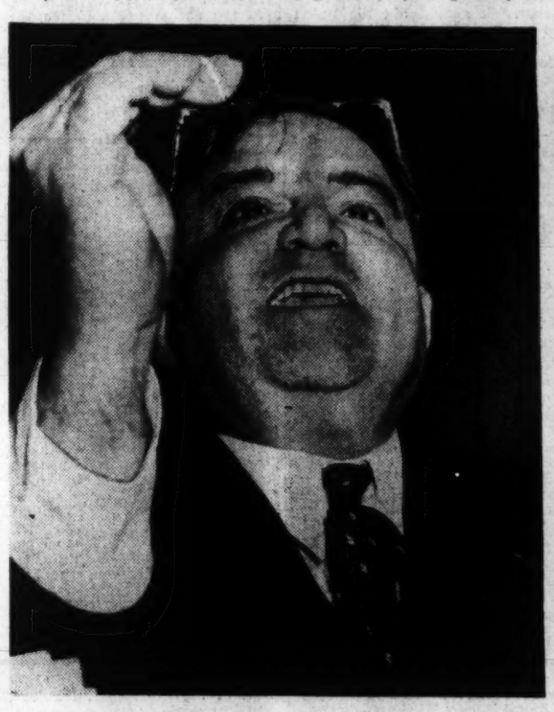
For what it may be worth, my belief is that Germany cannot successfully invade Britain. Of course, there is a material chance that she will be able to do so. But what I have described as effective and immediate aid, of the sort that would be made possible by this bill, will narrow that chance. If her northern ports can be kept open and the supply lines can be kept moving, I feel confident that Britain can survive the shock of the spring and summer campaigns. This is also the belief in high quarters in Britain.

And if Britain can stand through this summer, then at last the effects of our long-term assistance will begin to be felt. The tide will turn. Reinforced by our gigantic resources, Britain may be able to achieve that effectiveness which the democratic peoples have temporarily lost.

We must remember, in facing this issue, that it is not only the present that is at stake. Somewhere in this confusing world we must find—we must build—a future for ourselves. The prospect of a future surrounded by totalitarian powers; threatened by dictators whose real desire is for conquest; betrayed by nations whose word is not to be trusted; loaded with armaments and domestic debt, and faced with a declining standard of living—such a future is not a future for Americans as we have known them.

If we are to avoid such a calamity we must now have courage. We must bravely do the things that we know ought to be done. And we must lay the moral, intellectual and spiritual foundations for the kind of world we want our children to inherit. That world cannot be a closed world. It must be an open world. It must be a world in which Americans will share with other nations the responsibilities—and the great prospect—of peace.

Jammed Committee Room—So crowded was the Senate Foreign Relations Committee room where Wendell Willkie testified for aid to Britain yesterday that reporters had to have the help of police to get in and out through the throng. Identified in this general view are Willkie (arrow) and committee members. (1) Senator Gillette, of Iowa; (2) Representative Bloom, chairman of the House Foreign Relations Committee; (3) Senators Guffey, of Pennsylvania; (4) Pepper, of Florida; (5) Green, of Rhode Island; (6) Connally, of Texas; (7) Harrison, of Mississippi; (8) George (chairman), of Georgia; (9) Johnson, of California; (10) Capper, of Kansas; (11) Vandenberg, of Michigan; (12) White, of Maine; (13) Clark, of Missouri; (14) Nye, of North Dakota; (15) Byrnes, of South Carolina; (16) Barkley, of Kentucky; (17) Glass, of Virginia; (18) Shipstead, of Minnesota; (19) Reynolds, of North Carolina. Among the spectators was Count Jerzy Potocki (A), former Polish Ambassador



LaGuardia New York's Mayor, in dramatic gestures, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee members that "complete plans" for joint defense of the United States and Canada were now in existence. Adding his indorsement to the British aid bill, Fiorello LaGuardia said the measure was "part of the national defense program"

Conant—The president of Harvard University was the first witness to appear before the committee yesterday. Dr. James B. Conant told the Senators that failure to enact the lend-lease bill now might either put this country into a war against "desperate odds" or mean the end of the "American spirit" for the world

Willkie—Aid to Britain, if effective, "offers the best clear chance for us to keep out of the war," Wendell L. Willkie told the committee. He urged that more destroyers be made available to Britain, said that if England should fall tomorrow, the United States would be in the war a month or two later

New 'Elevator Shoe' Provides Little Fellow a Lift

With customary shoes—This young man shows how he normally appears in his own footwear

Layer of Cork Increases Height Inch or More

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE LITTLE MAN who wasn't there gets a break. We waited a long time to see the day, but now the miniature husband can raise himself to his wife's height or a beau can equal his best girl's tower of strength.

No more will he be classed in Yehoudi's mythical race, but he'll be a flesh and blood reality. And it's all because of the discovery of "Elevator shoes." They actually give a fellow a "lift" of 1 to 1½ inches in stature.

An extra layer of cork, starting at the heel inside the shoe, extends and tapers to the toe. The exterior is a little bit higher than the ordinary shoe, too, but this difference is very minute. In fact, at the local store where these shoes are available, the buyer had to demonstrate by comparing a normal pair of shoes with Elevators before the actual difference was noticed.

These shoes do something for the carriage of a man, too. They make it a necessity for him to walk straight with his shoulders back and his chest out. And it's advisable that a man complement these shoes by wearing a double-breasted suit with lapels of the long rolling type extending to the lower button. Also it's smart to choose a suit of bold stripes and have the sleeves shortened a bit so that a white shirt sleeve would show. If a man tops this outfit off with a Homburg hat all eyes will look "up" to him in the future.

This revolution is not only reinstating a man in his own rights, but it is doing something, too, for the "little" woman in his life. No longer will she have to toddle at his side in flat heeled brogues—she, too, can enjoy a little elevation by wearing heels occasionally.

Elevator shoes are available in every style from the patent leather oxford for dress to the brown and white sport oxford. They are made also in the newest finishes with wing tips or box toe. So in the future the little man will have something to be up in the air about.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Farmer, 23, With Little Cash but Good Crop, Loves Quiet Girl Whom He Sees but Seldom, As She Lives 12 Miles Away; How Win Her?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man 23 years of age and I live on my father's farm. Being a farmer, I don't get around much, of course, but I have had a lot of experience with the world. The question on my mind concerns a girl—as is generally the case when a man writes to you. I have known many girls but this particular girl is the only one I have ever thought I could love. In fact, I am already in love with her.

We met a year ago and while we haven't seen each other very often since then (as we live 12 miles apart), we do have wonderful times when we are together. She has a quiet disposition and doesn't say much. She has a way of keeping her feelings to herself, and on the few occasions when we were alone together, I have never had a chance to learn whether she really cares for me. We are members of different religious faiths, which may have something to do with the way she acts.

At times, she is very friendly and light-hearted, and other times just the opposite—quiet and reserved. I have told her that I love her but she always replies, "I don't believe you." Still, at times she encourages my attentions—so do you think she really loves me? Have you any suggestions as to how I can learn if my love and hopes are not in vain? What is the best way to prove to her that I love her?

You understand that, as a farmer, I don't have cash very often, but I do have a good crop this year. Being none too prosperous, however, I am not in a position to marry, but I hope to, some day. I am so lonely when I don't see her. My every thought for the future includes her. So I shall be indebted to you for life if you can help this romance along. I am not much good at putting my thoughts on paper, but I hope you get the idea from these remarks. L. C. A.

Put Hopes to Test Of Plain Speaking

DEAR L. C. A.: From a woman's viewpoint, a proposal of marriage is the one incontestable "proof" of a man's avowed love for her. So long as he fails to propose—or to declare his fervent desire or invincible intent to marry her, as soon as he is financially in a position to do so—she can never be absolutely sure that he isn't "stringing her along," or "handing her a line," in saying that he loves her.

Thus, it appears to me that the best way—indeed, the only way—you can convince this girl of the depth, sincerity and significance of your love is to tell her, some time, that your "every thought of the future includes her;" and that you would go down on your knees, this very minute, and beg her to marry you tomorrow—if only you were in a position to marry. Ask her if she can give you any hope; if she would consider you as a husband; and whether she would be willing to wait for, and plan with, you—until you can make your dreams of the future come true. Whether or not she accepts you, she will think very kindly of your proposal—which she will recognize as the highest tribute within your present power to pay her.

There is a possibility, of course, that she may say she cannot marry you—either because of your different religious faith, or because she feels she doesn't love you enough. And in that event, she probably will suggest that perhaps it would be better if you stopped seeing her—which is womankind's classic remark when tactfully rejecting a proposal of marriage. But don't be afraid to put your hopes to the test of a serious declaration, even so. If she tells you that marriage is out of the question and speaks of dismissing you—assure her that if friendship is all she wants, then friendship with her is enough for you, and that you will not mention marriage again; or, at least (say in jocular vein), not for a year!

However, there is no occasion to be greatly pessimistic about your chances. If she spends as much time in your company as circumstances will permit; accepts every invitation you extend, and sends you away with the conviction that you "had a wonderful time together"—you may be sure that she is far from indifferent to you. Also, the fact that she sometimes puts aside her habitual reserve and diffidence, to behave in a "very friendly, lighthearted and encouraging" manner toward you, further suggests that she enjoys your society and wants to please you.

Since you cannot see her often, and have little money to spend in courting her, it would be an excellent idea to keep in frequent touch with her by correspondence—if this can be arranged. you might write her once or even twice a week—and build up, by an exchange of letters, an easier and deeper understanding of each other; and, perhaps, a bond-in-common through an epistolary discussion of books, politics, radio music and drama, and such other aspects of the larger world as come under your mutual observation. M. H.

Angle of Hats Shows Trend Of Gay '90s

Hollywood, Calif.—When Olivia de Havilland and Rita Hayworth wore their hats right straight on their pompadours in "The Strawberry Blonde," they were unwittingly training for one of spring's newest hat caprices. Chapeaux, they say, will show nary a tilt. In case this is frightening, we're happy to report that only bowlers, pillboxes and hats with sailor brims will take such an independent path.

So we end up with the typical "gay '90" silhouette, with Olivia one of its earliest exponents. Myriads of tiny tucks give a little soft width to the shoulders of Olivia's wistaria wool suit with single inverted pleat. Then she crowns a very high pompadour with a very round bowler of wistaria felt, banded in black grosgrain and worn in the upright manner.

Charming Rita Hayworth suggests that girls blossom right along with nature by wearing hats with lots of brightly colored flowers, no matter what the "stance" of the bonnet may be.

Committee on Seating

Chairman—Now has anybody a suggestion whereby all the seats can be apportioned without anybody getting mad?

Mrs. Doodle—The only way I see is to draw lots.

Mrs. Flytie—That would make EVERYBODY mad!

Mrs. Preen—I am opposed to drawing lots. Suppose some of our more important members—say like Mrs. Swagg—should draw a back table!

Mrs. Joyner—Yes and another thing, there's our older members—I mean older in point of service—like ourselves. They ought not to have to sit at the back tables.

Mrs. Doodle — Maybe they'd draw front tables.

Chairman—Don't worry. They wouldn't!

Mrs. Joyner—No! People like Mrs. Popinjay and Mrs. Van Zany would draw the front tables.

Mrs. Flytie—Madam Chairman, why don't we reserve a few tables at the front for the older members—in point of service I mean—and let everybody else draw lots?

Mrs. Preen—I have one objection to that. Some of our older members—I'm not speaking of anyone here of course—are not very smart looking. And I do think that since our speaker, Dr. Horatio Duller, is coming all this distance to be with us he ought to be surrounded by charming women.

Mrs. Flytie—Well couldn't we sort of quietly see to it that our smart looking members got the front tables?

Chairman—I'm afraid that's going a little too far.

Mrs. Joyner—Well, I do think something ought to be done so that people like—say Mrs. Popinjay and Mrs. Van Zany, weren't at the front tables.

Mrs. Flytie—Yes, what would Dr. Duller think if he saw them?

Mrs. Doodle—I still think the democratic thing to do is to draw lots.

Mrs. Joyner—I don't agree with you. Now I'm as democratic as anybody, but I do think there are some occasions when democracy doesn't exactly work.

Mrs. Preen — Another thing, there's the matter of guests. We can't afford to have important guests at the back tables.

Mrs. Doodle—Well I'm bringing Mr. Doodle and I think he's just as important as anybody!

Mrs. Flytie—Say, why don't we have some special tables near the front set aside for people with important guests?

Mrs. Doodle—Then the whole thing is if you don't bring an important guest you'll have to sit in the back!

Chairman—EVERYBODY ought to bring important guests.

Mrs. Flytie—Then EVERYBODY would have to sit at the front tables, and who would sit at the back?

Mrs. Joyner—I still think some provision ought to be made for us older—that is, in point of service—members.

Chairman—So do I, but if we did that, think what a fuss Mrs. Chipp and Mrs. Wrangel and all those trouble makers in the club would raise.

Mrs. Preen—Yes and another thing some of our younger—that is in point of service—members are bringing guests like Mrs. Adolphus Luker and Mrs. Montgomery Mink. We simply couldn't put them at back tables.

Mrs. Flytie—Well it seems to me that to protect ourselves we might as well give good tables to the ones who always raise the rumpus. It'd be a lot easier.

Mrs. Doodle—Well I think members who bring men guests deserve some consideration. It adds so much to a party to have men there.

Chairman—Girls we're getting nowhere on this seating.

Mrs. Joyner—I have a suggestion! Suppose we have some special front tables for the members with important guests, and some for the members with smart-looking guests, and some for the members with men guests, and some for the older members who are well—a little nicer looking, and some for the more up and coming younger members, and then a few for the members who will raise a rumpus if they don't get good seats, and then after that let the others all draw lots.

Chorus—A fine idea!

Vitamin B Bread Called Boon to Health

By Ida Jean Kain

Any day now we may expect to get vitamin B in our daily bread. Let it be said to the credit of the millers that they have voluntarily taken the steps that will revitaminize the food which constitutes so considerable a portion of the average family's diet.

Because the public preferred pure white bread, for years, the wheat germ and other vital properties—thiamin, riboflavin and nicotinic acid—have been ground out. But now that synthetic forms of the vitamins have been perfected, white flour can be made to furnish more vitamin B than the dark flours. This recharging of the flour should do more to improve the average diet than any other single step that could be taken.

You won't be able to tell the difference in taste when synthetic forms of the vitamin are used. Use of the wheat kernel, as advocated by some of the millers, gives the bread a cream color and a delicious nut-like flavor. The cost of the new bread will be practically the same.

Keep Reminding Your Grocer

It is up to the homemaker, however, to make this vitamin B bread the mainstay of the family diet. Ask for it at the baker's and grocer's—they may not have it right away, but if you keep asking, they will.

Nutritionally speaking, we have been sidetracked. Years ago men and women did hard, muscular work, they got the coarse, whole grain flours and cereals supplying this vitamin. Your grandfather got as much vitamin B in a single slice of bread as we get in five slices of white bread.

When we began to change over from muscular to mental work, we also shifted to the highly refined foods furnishing more calories in proportion to their protective elements.

Vitamin B Deficient In U. S. Diet

With the kind of work we do, we don't need just as high a percentage of the minerals and vitamins. Vitamin B—the vitamin in which the average American diet has been most deficient—is the one scientists have found to be indispensable to the release of energy, to the digestion and proper assimilation of food, and to a healthily functioning nervous system. And if there was ever a time when we needed good nervous systems, it's now.

White House State Functions Close With Brilliant Army-Navy Reception

By Hope Ridings Miller

LARGEST, most colorful and by far the "best dressed" reception at the White House this winter closed the calendar of state functions for the season last night when President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained 1,500 high-ranking Army, Navy and Marine Corps notables and members of their families.

Any adequate description of the fete demands its full quota of superlatives. The party lived up to its gold-braided tradition and its standards of well-groomed glitter down to the final set of polished buttons in the long line that made its way slowly and elegantly from the East Room to the State Dining Room.

The usual pomp and ceremony that accents White House receptions took on an extra measure of precision and brilliance as the Marine Band orchestra struck up the familiar notes of "Hail to the Chief." A quartet of White House aides, apearing in the doorway leading from the State Dining Room to the scarlet-carpeted main corridor, preceded President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace and members of the Cabinet.

The First Lady had chosen for the occasion a stately gown of sapphire velvet, fashionad on flowing lines that terminated in a train. A wide band of rose point lace, forming a bertha, was softly draped over the shoulders and cascaded to the end of the train.

MRS. WALLACE appeared in gold brocade, set off with a long-sleeved jacket of gold lame. Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson was accompanied by Mrs. Stimson, who was trimly turned out in white brocade set off with a diamond necklace. They were ushered into the Green Room, to head the line that went on to the Blue Room to be greeted by President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Next in that line were Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Frank Knox, the latter wearing an ermine jacket over her brown net frock.

Meanwhile, others in the Cabinet line—which, incidentally, was much shorter than usual—waited in the Red Room, while the Chief Executive and the First Lady were greeting their other guests. The Postmaster General and Mrs. Frank Walker were there, she wearing a black chiffon frock sprinkled with rhinestone stars.

A rare type of orchid, ruby red and shaped like a star, accented Mrs. Claude Wickard's white satin gown. The Secretary of Agriculture accompanied his wife. Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, with Mrs. Jones on one arm and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins on the other, brought up the end of the line. Mrs. Jones wore white chiffon, cut on Grecian lines with three bands of silver beads encircling the waist. A square decolletage and full bishop sleeves were further features of the attractive frock.

AMONG THOSE coming down the line with the first group to be received were the Undersecretary of War and Mrs. Robert Patterson, the latter of whom wore a becoming frock of bright red chiffon. Mrs. James V. Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy, was gowned in violet velvet, made with a square neckline in front, a low decolletage and a full skirt. A necklace of rubies heightened the effect of her ensemble.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Royal Ingersoll were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Alice Ingersoll. Mrs. Sherman Miles, wearing a dress of white brocade, had a cape of white feathers over her arm as she walked down the line with Gen. Miles.

Decorations of virtually every description—hauled out only for visiting royalty or White House receptions—were very much in evidence. Rear Admiral Emory S. Land had an especially elegant and important foreign order insignia strung around his neck. Medals, of course, were a dime a dozen—everybody seemed to be wearing at least three, and on the chest of a tall general whom I don't know were nine medals. I counted them.

SEASON after season I have noted that the ladies at the Army-Navy reception somehow seem much better dressed as a whole than the feminine contingent at any other state reception. Why? Well, somebody explained it to me in a few words last night. "You see, they've got to live up to their men."

They certainly did, at that party. Some of the handsomest evening gowns worn in Washington this season, and more long white gloves than I have seen at all the other White House receptions were glimpsed in the line.

In addition to the service contingent, the guest list also included members of the Military and Naval Affairs Committees of the House and Senate. A few of those I saw in that group were Senator and Mrs. Alexander Wiley, of Wisconsin; Senator and Mrs. Josh Lee, Representative and Mrs. Andrew J. May, Representative and Mrs. Overton Brooks. Still others there from the Congressional contingent were Representative and Mrs. Lyndon Johnson and Representative and Mrs. Lawrence E. Imhoff.

HEADING THE service line, of course, were the Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. George C. Marshall, who came alone since Mrs. Marshall is ill with influenza; the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Harold R. Stark and Mrs. Stark, the latter in blue chiffon in a large flowered pattern, outlined with beading at the neckline; and the Commandant of the Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, who also was alone, since Mrs. Holcomb has been ordered by her physician to spend the winter in Palm Springs, Calif., to relieve a sinus condition.

Holding a small reception of their own in the main hall were the Adjutant General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Emory S. Adams and Mrs. Adams. Mrs. Adams was gowned in gray faille, shirred at the waist and with a wide skirt flowing into a train. With it she wore an exquisite heirloom necklace of tear drop pearls, small rubies and sapphires, with a pendant consisting of a large diamond and one great, perfect star sapphire.

The Judge Advocate General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, was greeting friends on all sides, as were the Judge Advocate General of the Navy, Rear Admiral W. B. Woodson, and Mrs. Woodson, who were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Ruth Woodson.

Mrs. Emory S. Land, wearing a becoming frock of coral faille, fashioned on bouffant lines, was completely surrounded from the moment she appeared in the State Dining Room. Rear Admiral and Mrs. Harold Bowen were there; also Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles E. Courtney and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Shelley U. Marietta.

IN A CONGENIAL group of Navy and Marine representatives were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Seth Williams of the Marines, she wearing a stunning gown of maroon lame; the Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks of the Navy Rear Admiral Ben Moreell and Mrs. Moreell, she in black net accented at the shoulders and waist with gold piping, and Brig. Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift of the Marines and Mrs. Vandegrift.

Being greeted on all sides by friends and former West Point classmates were Maj. Gen. William E. Cole (who has been called "King Cole" by his comrades in arms throughout his military career) and Mrs. Cole, whose orchid faille gown had an overdress of net.

The original "Amos and Andy" were there together; Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries and Maj. Gen. Andrew (Andy) W. Moses, whose careers have parelleled each other's who have served together many times and whose cheery greetings of "Hi, Amos;" and "Hi, Andy;" have amused their friends for years. With them were Mrs. Fries, gowned in blending shades of orchid chiffon and wearing a diamond and pearl teardop pendant, and Mrs. Moses, whose wine velvet gown was fashioned on flowing lines.

AVAILING HIMSELF of the new relaxing of regulations which permits officers to attend a White House reception in white tie and tails instead of a uniform (a regulation just issued) Lieut. Gen. Stanley D. Embick, former deputy chief of staff, wore civilian evening dress, and was among the few to do so. Since it has always been mandatory to wear full dress uniform and medals, most officers from all branches, Army, Navy and Marines, came uniformed as usual.

With the Chief of Cavalry, Maj. Gen. John K. Herr, and Mrs. Herr, was their daughter, Miss Fannie Herr, who matched her dark hair and flashing eyes with a chic black velvet frock and with it wore an effective costume necklace of black, white and gold enamel flowers. Mrs. Herr was also in black.

Rear Admiral Stanford C. Hooper was accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Leon Atwood, who is in Washington for a brief visit from her home in California. Also among the Navy contingent were Rear Admiral Roland M. Brainard and Mrs. Brainard, the latter in gray chiffon and lace. Also in gray lace was Mrs. Ralph S. Keyser, who accompanied Gen. Keyser. Still another who chose gray for the evening was Mrs. Robert M. Danford, who wore a classicly cut model of satin with a spray of orchids pinned to her shoulder. With her husband, the Chief of Field Artillery, Maj. Gen. Danford, she was the center of a vivacious group in the red room.

Still others noted in the record throng were the head of the Soldiers' Home, Maj. Gen. Frederick D. Coleman, and Mrs. Coleman; Capt. Donald Bingham, United States Navy and Mrs. Bingham, Rear Admiral and Mrs. W. R. Furlong, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William D. Connor, the latter wearing white brocade; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ross T. McIntire, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. A. O. Seaman, Col. and Mrs. Clarence C. Harvey, Col. and Mrs. Geoffrey Marshall and hundreds more.

White House Dinner Precedes Service Reception

President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained 20 guests at dinner last night before the annual Army-Navy reception at the White House.

Red roses, white snapdragons and maidenhair fern decorated the table. Ranking guests were the Secretary of War and Mrs. Henry Stimson and the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Frank Knox.

Others there were the Undersecretary of War and Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, Mrs. James V. Forrestal, Admiral and Mrs. Harold R. Stark, Gen. George C. Marshall, Rear Admiral W. R. Sexton, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ross T. McIntire, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Miss Esther Lape, Rene LeRoy, Miss Malvina Thompson and Mrs. James M. Helm.

Fashionable Washington Attends Fashion Show

Mrs. Harriman To Visit Hurleys

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who recently resigned as Minister to Norway, will return to Washington to spend the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hurley at their home on R Street. The hosts will give a small dinner for her Sunday.

Mrs. Harriman has spent most of the winter in New York, but it is reported that she is eager to return to Washington and her many friends here are hoping it won't be long before she selects a residence here. Her home is leased to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey.

Yesterday Mrs. Hurley, whose husband was Secretary of War in the Hoover Administration, entertained at a luncheon in honor of Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the present secretary. The party took place at the Hurley home.

Party to Honor Seven Chileans

The Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels will entertain at a reception tomorrow afternoon at the embassy in honor of seven Chilean newspapermen who are here for a two-month visit to this country. The visitors will study newspaper methods of the United States, acting as guest writers for seven dailies in this country. One of them, Joaquim Muirhead, will be associated with The Washington Post.

The writers arrived in New York early Monday morning on the Grace liner Santa Clara. Anibal Jara, Chilean Consul General, and Dean Carl W. Ackerman, of the Columbia School of Journalism, greeted them at the pier, and the former gave a luncheon for them later at the Rainbow Room of Rockefeller Center.

Speaker's Sister Gives Luncheon At Capitol

Miss Lucinda Rayburn, of Bonham, Tex., sister of the Speaker of the House, entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Speaker's dining room in the Capitol. Her guests included wives of the Texas Congressional delegation and a few other friends.

Three bouquets of mixed spring flowers decorated the long table at which the company was seated. Among those present were Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Martin Dies, Mrs. Luther A. Johnson, Mrs. Wright Patman, Mrs. Albert Thomas, Mrs. Nat Patton, Mrs. Lyndon Johnson, Mrs. William Robert Poage, Mrs. Fritz Lanham, Mrs. Ewing Thomason, Mrs. Eugene Worley, Mrs. George H. Mahon, Mrs. Paul J. Kilday, Mrs. Charles L. South.

Still others there were Mrs. Jack Beall, of Dallas, Tex.; Mrs. Roy Miller, and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller. Miss Rayburn, who has been in Washington for several weeks, plans to return home the latter part of this week. Tonight, she and the Speaker will be among guests at the dinner at the White House.

Dr. and Mme. Boon Hosts at Cocktail Party at Home

Gayly informal was the cocktail party given yesterday afternoon by Dr. and Mme. H. H. Boon, of the Netherlands Legation. One of a series of fetes planned by the Boons this season, the event took place at their home on Lowell Street from 5 to 7 o'clock.

Spring blossoms sprouted from low bowls arranged at attractive intervals around the living room. Mme. Boon wore a frock of gold and black brocade, accented with a narrow black velvet sash.

Among the guests were the Secretary of the Finnish Legation and Mme. Solanko, and Mr. and Mme. Errki Mikkola from the same legation; the Netherlands Agricultural Attache and Mme. L. A. H. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. H. Livingston Hartley, George Abell, the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Folke Wennerberg, the Swedish First Secretary and Mme. Sven Dahlman, and several others.

Head of Ogontoz School Is Honored

Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor entertained at a luncheon yesterday at Wild Acres in honor of Miss Abby Southerland, president of Ogontz School for Girls. Preceding the luncheon Miss Southerland reviewed a number of outstanding books before the Washington Club.

Guests at the luncheon included Miss Grace Burton, Mrs. Gregg Birdsall, Mrs. Frank Bunker, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, Mrs. Clifford Berryman, Mrs. Frederick Colville, Miss Gentry, of Ogontz; Mrs. Charles Handley, Mrs. Willard Hayes, sr., Mrs. Ralph Hallett, Mrs. John Marble, Mrs. Arthur McConville, Miss Daisy Prentice, Mrs. Arthur Tirrell and Mrs. Parker Van Zandt.

Fashion Show Aids Goodwill Industries

Well before the hour at which the fashion show for the benefit of the Goodwill Industries was to take place yesterday afternoon, the new ballroom of the Shoreham was jammed with women. They were there to see several socially prominent Washingtonians model clothes from Jelleff's, and later to sip tea in the west ballroom.

Mrs. Roosevelt received at the tea which followed the show. Mrs. Henry Wallace arrived in time to see some of the models shown. She looked very smart in a pale green wool frock and a brown veiled hat.

Mrs. Douglas Makes Talk

Mrs. William O. Douglas, a fashion harbinger of spring in her navy blue suit with its white lapels, gave a brief talk before the show began. She explained how the Goodwill Industries, of which she is president, helps handicapped persons to support themselves. Mrs. Douglas was introduced to the audience by Mrs. Irene Caldwell, who wore a black crepe frock, short sleeves, a fur scarf, and a brick red sailor.

Mrs. Stanley Reed, who took a turn at the tea table, was chic in a dark red frock and felt hat to match and a hip length mink cape. Others who poured tea were Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Mrs. Frank Walker, Mrs. E. Goring Bliss, Mrs. Bancroft Davis, Mrs. Karl Fenning, Mrs. Stanley Sears, Mrs. Howard Nichols, Mrs. Joseph Davies and Mrs. Elizabeth Murray.

Debutantes At Fete

Debutante Zeva Fish, whose cousin, Beth Kean, was among the models, attended the show, hatless and wearing a red plaid coat. Mrs. Thurman Arnold, in black with a little blue veiled hat, joined the audience after showing a stunning dress on the runway.

Among the spring hats was Mrs. Bruce Smith's little white sailor crowned with pale green veiling. She was a hostess at the fete. Others there included Mrs. John Dempsey, Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Senora Manuel Crespo, Mrs. John Studebaker, Mrs. Gerard Reilly, Mrs. Austin Kautz, Miss Marion Sears, Mrs. Edward R. Stitt and Mrs. Robert Healy.

The models included Mrs. Allan Moulton, Mrs. Samuel O. Clark, Miss Naomi Peabody, Mrs. Albert Warner, Mrs. George Ward and Miss Caroline Wadden.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

MRS. NELLIE TAYLOE ROSS, Director of the Mint, and Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency, are in Philadelphia today for an annual ceremony which dates from George Washington's time. They are members of the Assay Commission, which sits in every year at a traditional gathering called the "trial of the coins."

DUDLEY HARMON

For two days their job will be to weigh and count newly minted silver chosen at random from 80,000 pieces. Then they make up a report as to whether or not it contains the right amount of precious metal. Should the pieces be found wanting, the officials would have to resign. So far, fortunately, such a catastrophe has never occurred.

THREE members of the Commission are ex-officio; the others are appointed by President Roosevelt. In the past such famous patriots as Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton have served as weighers and counters.

Elaborate instructions have been handed down throughout the years as to how the ceremony should be conducted. The coins are placed in a receptacle called a "pix box," after having been carefully wrapped in the same fashion as when the ceremony was first inaugurated. For over 100 years the gathering has been held on the second Wednesday in February.

The actual assaying is done by the chief of the New York Assay Office, now the largest such organization in the world. It is to this office that all the gold coming from Europe is sent.

After the ceremony the members of the Commission are awarded a medal especially struck off to honor the occasion. Mrs. Ross always presides at the session. She will return here the end of the week to greet her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Tayloe, of Memphis, Tenn. They are coming to the Capital for a visit.

SO MANY people are coming to Washington that home owners who wish to lease are having a field day. They can even find occupants for just a month, as Mrs. Mondell Gregg has done. The Donald Symingtons, of Baltimore, have taken her place on N Street in Georgetown. The Symingtons live in Green Spring Valley, just outside the city. It's said that Mr. Symington will reverse the usual process of living in the city and going to the country for weekends by continuing to stay at their valley home and coming to Washington for weekends. The Symingtons are cousins of Mrs. E. Cortlandt Parker.

Mrs. Gregg will spend the month in Florida. She recently returned from Miami and Hobe Sound and is here for a few days.

OSWALD Garrison Villard, who is so much better after his recent illness that he is planning another lecture tour, will come to Washington for the weekend. The book, "Lincoln on the Eve of '61," which he and his brother, Harold, have edited from letters of their father, Henry Villard, has appeared just in time for Lincoln's birthday.

DIPLOMATIC NOTES: The name of the German Ambassador, Hans Dieckhoff, is still listed in the diplomatic directory issued by the State Department. He is merely marked "absent" . . . The British Embassy staff now occupies four pages of the directory, more than any other diplomatic mission. Arriving in New York the other day on a "secret errand" was Col. Charles Vickers, of the British army.

Panama's New Envoy Feted

The newly arrived Ambassador of Panama, Carlos N. Brin, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by the Director General of the Pan-American Union, Dr. L. S. Rowe. The Spanish-speaking Vice President of the United States, Henry Wallace, was also a guest.

Others present were the Undersecretary of War, Robert P. Patterson; the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Marriner S. Eccles; the Assistant Secretary of State, Dean G. Acheson; the First Secretary of the Panama Embassy, Juan H. Ehrman; the president of the Export-Import Bank, Warren Lee Pierson; the Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations with Latin America, Nelson A. Rockefeller; the president of George Washington University, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin; the Chief of the Division of Cultural Relations of the State Department, Charles A. Thomson; the Commissioner of the Public Roads, Thomas H. MacDonald; the Director of the American Council of Learned Societies, Dr. Waldo G. Leland; Dr. Constantine E. McGuire, of Washington, Dr. Charles Seegler and Dr. Pedro de Alka.

Mrs. James Forrestal To Be Feted at Luncheon

Mrs. James V. Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy, will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given by Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., Thursday, February 27.

The party will take place at the 1925 F Street Club.

Congressional Club Entertains At Reception for Mrs. Roosevelt

Several Hundred Members and Guests Attend Yearly Fete

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor

The Congressional Club yesterday entertained at its annual reception for Mrs. Roosevelt, with several hundred members and guests attending. The occasion was the first on which the new board, headed by Mrs. John Taber, of New York, has received.

The First Lady, who arrived at the clubhouse after attending the Goodwill Fashion Show at the Shoreham, was greeted by Mrs. Roy O. Woodruff, chairman of the hospitality committee, presented with a corsage of orchids and ushered to the ballroom on the second floor, where she stood in the receiving line with Mrs. Taber and other officers. She wore a black dress with a little red vest, a turquoise necklace and a black hat trimmed with a black and gray wing.

Mrs. Taber wore a dove gray costume, a short jacket with silver buttons, over a gray dress, and a perky blue hat and veil. She also wore orchids. Next in line was Mrs. Morris Sheppard, wife of Senator Sheppard, of Texas, wearing a black dress and white hat trimmed with two fur pompoms. Other officers included Mrs. Charles Plumley, of Vermont, dressed in black; Mrs. Dow Harter, of Ohio, in a costume of olive fireen; Mrs. Herron Pearson, of Tennessee, wearing a black dress and black hat trimmed with a spray of large red clover; Mrs. Homer D. Angell, of Oregon, in a moss-green dress and hat; Mrs. Harry Coffee, of Nebraska, wearing a costume of black and white, and Mrs. John Sparkman, of Alabama, who wore with her black dress a white hat trimmed with two pale pink roses on the crown.

The Marine Band Orchestra played at the north side of the room while the guests were received at the opposite side and the tea tables were set in the dining room and the smaller room adjoining th ballroom.

Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the Secretary of War, in an all black costume, and Mrs. Claude R. Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, in a powder blue hat and dress, were among the guests. Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of Associate Justice Stone, and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Associate Justice Roberts, were also there as were Mrs. William N. Doak, wife of a Cabinet member in a former Administration; Mme. Pastoriza, wife of the Dominican Minister, and Mrs. James S. Kemper, of Chicago, wife of the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who was the guest of Mrs. Ralph Church, of Illinois.

Underwood & Underwood

Mrs. Roosevelt, guest of honor at the Congressional Club's reception yesterday, with Mrs. John Taber, of New York (center), welcomes Miss Marjorie Stevenson, of Sweetwater, Tex., who is here visiting her uncle and aunt, Representative and Mrs. George Mahon, of Texas. In the lower picture, Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, of New York, former president of the club, serves tea to Mrs. John L. McMillan, of South Carolina

Past presidents of the club poured, including Mrs. Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, immediate past president; Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, of New York; Mrs. William Whittington, of Mississippi; Mrs. Porter H. Dale, of New York; Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, of Rhode Island, and Mrs. J. F. Byrnes, of South Carolina. Others assisting were Mrs. Clarence E. Hancock, of New York; Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina; Mrs. R. Ewing Thomason, of Texas; Mrs. Richard J. Welch, of California; Mrs. John R. Murdock, of Arizona, and Mrs. Robert F. Rich, of Pennsylvania.

Among the guests was Senorita Maria Padilla, who is teaching Spanish to a group of members of the club and who was with Mrs. Malcolm C. Tarver, of Georgia. Mrs. S. Otis Bland, a former officer of the club, had with her Mrs. J. H. McMurran, of Newport News, Va., and Miss Mary Putzel, of Salisbury, N. C., her sister and niece.

Among the many others present was Mrs. Martin R. Glenn, of Louisville, Ky., wife of Capt. Glenn, who has recently been transferred from Fort Custer, Mich., to the office of the Judge Advocate General. She was the guest of Mrs. Andrew J. May. Others were Mrs. James Harold Fox, who was there with Mrs. Murdock; Miss Isabelle Poate, the guest of Mrs. Reed; Mrs. D. W. Covington, of South Carolina, with Mrs. A. H. Gasque; Mrs. Kenneth Romney, wife of the sergeant at arms of the House, who was there with Mrs. Harry Englebright; Miss Louise Warren Johnson, of St. Joseph, Mo., the guest of Mrs. Richard Duncan; Miss Jean Dryer, of Festus, Mo., who was with Mrs. Clyde Williams.

Among others in the throng of members and guests were Mrs. Ross Rizley, a new member from Oklahoma; Mrs. Jed Johnson, of Oklahoma; Mrs. George C. Thorpe, Mrs. Eugene O. Sykes, Mrs. John Rankin, Mrs. Hugh Peterson, Mrs. J. K. Stacey, Mrs. John C. McMillan, Mrs. Joseph Herbert, jr., Mrs. Charles Wright, Mrs. Charles J. Kappler, Mrs. Jesse Wolcott, Mrs. Nat Patton, Mrs. Fred Bulwinkle, Miss Marjorie Stevenson, of Sweetwater, Tex., who was there with her aunt, Mrs. George Mahon; Mrs. Louis Montford, Mrs. Parker West, and Mrs. Henry Allen Cooper, a founder of the club.

P.-T. A. Offers 9 Proposals for Traffic Safety

Nine recommendations designed to promote traffic safety were adopted by the board of managers of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers yesterday and sent to the heads of the District government and to the Police Department.

The recommendations included one in opposition to the site of the Pan American Union annex, proposed by the Secretary of the Interior. Another called for additional police in order to promote traffic safety and as a greater protection to citizens.

Others urged increased personnel in the office of the director of vehicular traffic; enforcement of the present speed limit; a special traffic judge, additional traffic lights at busy intersections where there are none at present; better lighted streets; adequate provision for teaching traffic safety in the schools; and that drunken drivers be taken immediately to court.

This last proposal was urged because if a period of time elapses between the traffic violation and the drunken driver's appearance in court, the judge has no opportunity to determine for himself the condition of the driver, it was explained.

Opposition to the proposed site for the Pan American Union annex was based on the fact that it would close Eighteenth Street and Virginia Avenue and force traffic onto the already conjected Constitution Avenue, according to Mrs. George Clark, chairman of the safety committee.

Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the congress, presided at the meeting. The board also asked a reinterpretation of the language in the District appropriations bill so that preschool children may be admitted to free dental clinics in the city.

D. A. R. Chapter Celebrates Its 49th Anniversary

Mary Washington Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, last night celebrated its forty-ninth anniversary with Miss Janet Richards, one of the chapter members, present. Miss Richards, who is now regent emeritus of the chapter, reviewed its history and also gave a short talk on Abraham Lincoln, in observance of his birthday.

The rest of the program was a skit, "Martha Washington's Dream," presented by a group of junior members, including Miss Edna Millward, chairman of juniors; Miss Katherine Hadley, Miss Lillian Hathaway Willett, Mrs. Paul Traynham, Miss Suzanne Kappler and Mrs. Leonard Scheffler. Incidental music was played by Mrs. John J. Ragan, regent of Emily Nelson Chapter.

A distinguished member at the affair was Ava Hamilton Singer, noted explorer, who has belonged to the chapter for several years. Mrs. W. H. O. McGehee, chapter regent, presided.

New England Women Hears Mrs. Evans

Mrs. Joshua Evans was guest speaker yesterday at the luncheon of Phyllis Lyman Colony, Society of New England Women, which was held at the Highlands. "Your Washington and Mine" was her subject.

Mrs. Caldwell Heads Camp Fire Girls' Council

Mrs. Irene Caldwell was elected president of the Camp Fire Girls Council at an organizing meeting last night at the Mayflower of 60 persons interested in Camp Fire Girls' work attending. R. A. Van Orsdel, who is a member of the national board, presided.

Functions and duties of council members who form the basis for the girls' work, were explained by Miss Catherine Wahlstrom and Miss Mary Fiedler, of the national staff, who were here from New York City. The various committees of the council find guardians or adult leaders for the girls' groups, outline training courses for them, investigate opportunities for community service open to the Camp Fire Girls and pass on the honors and ranks given the girls for their work in the organization.

Mrs. Paul Ledig, who has just been succeeded by Mrs. Benna Purvine as chairman of the Guardians Association for the Potomac Area, reviewed the work of the association for the last five years.

Greek Envoy Overseas Guest

The Minister of Greece and Mme. Diamantopoulos were honor guests last night at a dinner given by the Women's Overseas Service League in the parlor of the Cosmos Club.

About 60 members and guests attended the dinner and heard an illustrated talk on Greece by Dr. Owen Williams who, with Mrs. Williams, also was an honor guest. The motion pictures and slides taken two years ago, showed scenes in localities where fighting is now going on, and also colorful views of festivals in which the Greek soldiers participated.

Two of the members of the league who were present saw service in the World War, Miss Grace Chapman and Miss Sally Spottswood Beach.

C.A.R. Votes to Aid An English Child

The National Society, Children of the American Revolution, at its quarterly meeting held yesterday at D. A. R. Hall voted to contribute to the support of an English child for a year. The motion was made at the suggestion of Mrs. William H. Pouch, a past president, who is herself taking care of a child "for the duration."

Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, national president, was in charge of the session. Reports were given by national officers, including that of Mrs. Thaddeus M. Jones, treasurer, who announced the society now has $15,000 in tis fund for a new building.

Mrs. Woodward Tells of British Labor Practices

Mrs. Margaret Woodward, a member of the staff in the Office of Production Management of the National Defense Council, spoke yesterday at the second of the series of meetings being held by the League of Women Shoppers for the discussion of "Labor in National Defense." Mrs. Robert Huse was in charge of the meeting which was at the home of Mrs. Gifford Pinchot.

Mrs. Woodward, who was in England when the war began and in Holland until the invasion of that country, told of labor conditions in England today. Labor's attitude has changed greatly during the last year, and is giving ready cooperation in all fields, she said.

She outlined the provisions of the national arbitration order issued under the Emergency Defense Act, providing for joint arbitration negotiation machinery and that a dispute must be referred by the Minister of Labor to arbitration within three weeks and that no strike shall be called within that period. Wages and other conditions fixed for one plant are then binding on the whole industry, she said. A third provision is that all departures from trade union practices be recorded with a view to restoration to standard conditions after the war. Strikes are not eliminated by these provisions, said Mrs. Woodward, but the loss of man hours has been greatly reduced.

The cost of living has increased 26 per cent in England, she said. Wages in some fields have risen considerably but in others have remained the same, lowering the living standard sharply. Lack of skill still leaves unemployment, she added, and it is planned to train 4,000,000 women for defense industries and also absorb the skilled workers coming as refugees from other countries.

Spanish War Auxiliary Greets Mrs. Bassett

Mrs. Betty Bassett, national president of the United Spanish War Veterans Auxiliary, made her official visit to the District department of the organization last night and was guest of honor at a reception at the Roosevelt Hotel. Mrs. Bassett is here from California on business at the national headquarters.

In the receiving line with her were Mrs. Pauline A. Thompson, department president; Mrs. Carrie Flaherty, chairman of the reception; Mrs. Nora Eberlith, national secretary; Mrs. Marie C. Williams, national treasurer; Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, who has recently come to the national headquarters; Calvin Lucas, department commander of the Spanish War Veterans and members of his staff; Mrs. Margaret Binnix, chaplain, and Mrs. Cora Campbell, treasurer.

To Install Officers

The S. Freedman and Sons Social Club will install its recently elected officers at an annual dinner-dance installation to be held the night of February 12, at Paul Young's new Romany Room. The following officers will be installed for the year: Herbert Sacks, president; Oscar Levy, vice president; Sidney Dannheisser, treasurer; Evelyn Wald, secretary; and Thomas Harrison, sergeant at arms.

Jewish Women Give Style Show

Money for the philanthropic fund of the Council of Jewish Women was raised yesterday by the luncheon and fashion show sponsored by the Washington Section at the Wardman Park Hotel. Mrs. Arthur Neuman was chairman of the affair and Mrs. Lillian Detre announced the fashion show.

Models for the show, all council members, included Mrs. Larry Nathan, Mrs. F. M. Barnett, Mrs. Milton Ritzenberg, Mrs. Sigmund Danzansky, Mrs. Marion Wolberg, Mrs. Arthur Brown and Mrs. Louis Janof. Mrs. Harry Roller was in charge of entertainment.

About 250 members and guests attended. Mrs. Edward Sonneborn, president of the section, presided at the luncheon and introduced Mrs. Detre.

The Gallup Poll

Four Out of Five Sections Favor Lease-Lend Bill; Most Approval in the Southern States

Chicago District Least in Favor Of Proposed Law

The following exclusive report by the Gallup Poll is the first analysis of sectional differences of opinion on the historic lease-lend bill now being debated in Congress.

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 11.—After more than a month's national discussion of the President's lease-lend bill, surveys of public opinion by the American Institute indicate that four out of five sections of the country are in favor of the bill—one of them by an overwhelming majority—while in the fifth section the division of sentiment is so close that the final verdict for that area is in doubt.

This section is the East Central area, comprising the four populous States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan. The section stands out in sharp contrast to the rest of the country, especially the South, where approval of the lease-lend bill is currently running 3 to 1.

For the country as a whole, the latest Institute survey, reported last week, showed a majority in favor of the bill. Today's report gives the line-up of each of the geographical sections.

The question put to a cross-section of voters in each area was:

Vote by Sections

"Do you think Congress should pass the President's lease-lend bill?"

The replies fall into four distinct categories—those definitely favoring the bill as it now stands, those definitely opposed, those who attach a qualification to their reply and those who have not yet formed an opinion about the bill.

	Yes	No	Qualified Answer	No Opinion
New England and Mid-Atlantic States (Me., N. H., Vt., R. I., Conn., Mass., N. Y., N. J., Pa., Del., Md., W. Va.)	54%	21%	16%	9%
East Central (Ohio, Ind., Ill., Mich.)	39	35	17	9
West Central (Wis., Minn., Ia., Mo., Kan., Neb., N. D., S. D.)	53	22	15	10
South (Va., Ky., Tenn., N. C., S. C., Ga., Fla., Ala., Miss., Ark., La., Tex., Okla.)	77	8	10	5
Far West (Colo., Wyo., Mont., Ida., Nev., N. Mex., Ariz., Cal., Wash., Oreg., Utah)	55	20	16	9
Nation	54	22	15	9

It can be seen from the above table that, on an issue as controversial and complex as the lease-lend issue, opinion cannot be boiled down to a straight "yes" or "no." Many voters, ranging in number from 10 per cent in the South to nearly 20 per cent in the East Central area, attach limitations to their answers, including a number of desired modifications in the bill.

An A. E. F. Opposed

The commonest of these modifications are that no American ships or American soldiers should be sent abroad, that some limit shall be placed on the amount of aid given Britain under the bill, and that the bill should be in force only for a definite period of time.

If the Nation-wide results of the Institute's "sampling" are applied against the total of 50,000,000 voters in the last Presidential election, the situation is approximately as follows:

Favor the bill	27,000,000 voters
Opposed to the bill	11,000,000 voters
Qualified opinions	7,500,000 voters
No opinion	4,500,000 voters

Of all those who now give a qualified answer, plus those who have not yet formed an opinion, were eventually to side with the "noes," the total opposed would be 23,000,000—still less than a majority.

However, it is easily conceivable that, as the debate continues in Congress, and especially in the Senate, some of the voters who now favor the bill may swing over to the other side. Such a shift, if it took place, would probably start in the East Central area where opinion is already so closely divided.

Chicago in Center

This area, with Chicago as the hub, has always been the least in favor of aid to Britain, judging by other Institute surveys. Interviewers working on the lease-lend survey found many people in the East Central section who were skeptical of the President's "arsenal of democracy" concept for the United States.

"Why give the English any more," runs one typical comment, "when they still owe us for the last war?"

"Ye gods, look at our debt now," is another, and,

"Don't we need all our defenses for here?"

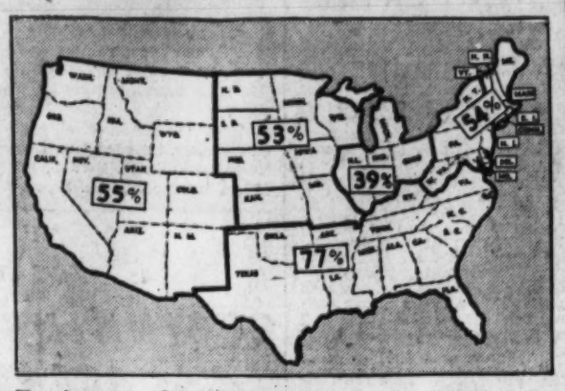
Time Limit Favored

While not all sections of the country see eye to eye on the lease-lend bill, nearly all are agreed that if the bill does pass, a definite time limit should be placed on the power granted the President.

This is shown in the answers to a second question on the Institute ballot:

"If Congress does pass the bill, should the powers which it grants to the President be given to him for as lang as as the war lasts, or for only a limited period of time, such as two years?"

	As Long as War Lasts	Limited Period Only	No Opinion
New England and Mid-Atlantic	35%	56%	9%
East Central	31	59	10
West Central	33	60	7
South	49	45	6
Far West	36	58	6



The above map shows the percentage of voters in each section who favor passage of the President's lease-lend bill for all-out aid to Britain. Note that the vote in favor of the bill is highest in the South, lowest in the East Central area.

$40,000 Bond Set in $6.70 Robbery

Arthur Owens and James Martin, colored, appeared before Trial Magistrate B. M. Hedrick in Arlington, Va., Courthouse yesterday, accused of robbing two cab drivers January 28.

Martin pleaded guilty; Owens, not guilty. The judge ordered both held for the grand jury and fixed bond at $20,000 each. The robberies netted $6.70.

Guess He Doesn't Trust the Mails

Informed that his selective service questionnaire was awaiting him there, a colored man trudged 5 miles from the home of his sister in Washington yesterday to the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Recreation Center.

"I ain't fooling with no Federal Government," he told Mrs. Elizabeth C. Stratton, Board No. 3 clerk. She gave him return fare.

Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Reed Committee Split on Attorneys

The Reed Committee on Civil Service Reform has agreed to recommend to the President that all but policy-making jobs be brought under Civil Service, but it is understood that the eight members are split equally on the method of bringing attorneys under merit. The final report has been drafted and it would be on the President's desk now had it not been delayed by Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy who is making a private report on the functions of the Civil Service Commission. If the President follows suggestions made in the report, scientists, administrators, lawyers, G-men and other professional and technical Federal employes will be brought under Civil Service.

Two plans are reported to have been submitted for attorneys. Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, supported by Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed, committee chairman, Attorney General Robert Jackson, and Gano Dunn, were critical of the present Civil Service methods of examination and selection, and they urged that a committee of Government lawyers be set up to do the job. More important, they argued that lawyers would be placed on an ungraded register which would permit general counsels to select any lawyer from the eligible list.

Dr. Leonard White, former G. O. P. member of the Civil Service Commission, authored the second plan which would use present methods of selection; that is, there would be a graded register, from which general counsels would be required to select one of the first three eligibles. The White plan has the support of William H. McReynolds, the President's administrative assistant in charge of personnel; Gen. Robert Wood, and Justice Murphy. These four are said to have agreed that a committee of lawyers should be appointed to bring attorneys under merit, but they insisted the committee should be under the Civil Service Commission.

It's highly probable that one of the committee members may change his mind in order that a majority report may be made. Gen. Wood originally was lined up with the Frankfurter plan but changed his mind only a week ago. The Frankfurter plan would require legislation, as the commission can't legally set up an ungraded register. Most general counsels, it is said, approve of the Frankfurter plan.

Mandantory Retirement

It was learned on good authority that the report will not recommend a change in the veterans' preference laws. However, it will request the President to ask Congress to revise the retirement act to permit mandatory at 70 after 15 years' service and optional retirement at 60 after 15 years' service. Moreover, that higher annuities be paid high-salaried employes.

Even though the committee will recommend specifically that G-men and other FBI employes be brought under Civil Service, it is believed no attempt will be made to bring them under immediately. In fact, it may be a matter of months before any of the employes affected is given Civil Service status.

Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard will have two new assistants on March 1. They will be Sam Bledsoe, associate director of information, and T. Roy Reid, regional director of Farm Security Administration. Reid will replace J. L. McCamy, head assistant, who is returning to his teaching job at Bennington College, and Bledsoe will fill a long existant vacancy.

Erle Nicol will be Sidney Hillman's administrative assistant at OPM. He's an old-line Federal employe and should prove helpful in coordinating the work of various agencies working with Hillman. For the last few years Nicol has been with the Budget Bureau . . . Housing Coordinator Charles Palmer has held up the construction of 2,000 defense homes in Baltimore.

Federal employes in the District reached 155,973 during December, a new all-time record, the Civil Service Commission reported yesterday. It was a gain of 3,368 for the month, or more than 100 new employes a day. In the entire country the gain was 74,028 which brought the total to 1,185,558. Defense employes were responsible for 24,775 of the increase and the temporary Postoffice employes to handle the Christmas rush accounted for the remainder.

Southwest Citizens Ired By Vice Story

Section 'May Never Recover,' Wender Says; Report Denied by Officials

Harry S. Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association, declared last night that "the Southwest may never recover" from "false reports" that certain areas there would be closed to uniformed service men on moral grounds.

Wender spoke at a protest meeting of the association's executive committee, which called a mass meeting of Southwest citizens to discuss the proposed assignment of military police in that area and hear Maj. Ernest W. Brown outline the police department's plan for control of "vice areas."

The mass meeting will be held next Wednesday at the Jefferson Junior High School, at Seventh and H Streets Southwest. The reports, which were later denied by officials, were carried in two Washington papers, but not The Post.

Benning

Mrs. Ella D. Armes, principal of the Benning School, told the Benning Citizens Association last night that an eight-room addition would be built to the school as soon as a Congressional appropriation could be obtained.

Mrs. Armes said that the Board of Education had recommended the addition after an inspection of the building. The association met at the school for its regular monthly meeting.

A resolution was adopted calling for the elimination of a Capital Transit bus terminal in the street at the west end of the Benning Viaduct. The bus terminal, members argued, is a hazard to pedestrians, since it cuts off a view of the street.

Frank E. James was appointed chairman of a committee to study proposed changes in the Minnesota Avenue bus route.

Logan-Thomas Circle

The Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association last night indorsed the action of the Federation of Citizens Associations in recommending barring of liquor sales in Washington from midnight Saturday until 8 a. m. Monday.

Members went on record against proposals for the further staggering of hours of Government departments. This would not expedite downtown traffic flow as claimed it was stated.

The unit also laid plans to participate in the new ceremonies attending the opening of the new Second Precinct Police Station Monday. Mrs. Grace Sparrow was named to head a committee supervising arrangements for the association's annual dinner March 11.

Stanton Park

A resolution favoring establishment of cross-town bus service, but specifying no route, was adopted last night by the Stanton Park Citizens Association, meeting at the Peabody School, Fifth and C Streets Northeast.

"People Come First," a motion picture on traffic problems caused by rapid growth of cities, was shown by the Capital Transit Co.

Door prizes and refreshments were given the 35 who attended. The association's next meeting will be March 11.

Summit Park

The Summit Park Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution urging that a hard surface be placed on Camden Street between Suitland Road and Thirty-sixth Street Southeast.

Meeting at the East Washington Heights Baptist Church Hall, the association also urged that the alley between Thirty-sixth and Austin Streets be repaired.

John H. Fritter, 75, of 4750 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, died at Georgetown Hospital yesterday—the fifteenth traffic victim in the District this year.

FRITTER

A retired landscape gardener, Mr. Fritter was struck by an automobile while crossing Wisconsin Avenue Northwest just south of Ellicott Street Northwest, at 6:50 p. m. Saturday.

Police said the automobile was operated by Thomas J. Fadoal, 30, of Arlington, Va. The driver said he was southbound about 20 miles an hour when the accident occurred. He will appear at a coroner's inquest the date of which has not been set.

Mr. Fritter leaves his wife and three sons, Elwood, David and Harold.

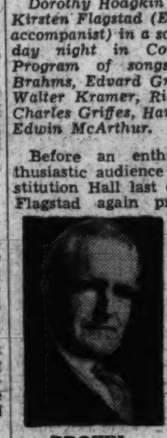
Postlude

Mme. Flagstad Gives Lieder Recital Here

By Ray C. B. Brown

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Kirsten Flagstad (Edwin McArthur, accompanist) in a song recital Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Program of songs by Johannes Brahms, Edvard Grieg, Hugo Wolf, Walter Kramer, Richard Hageman, Charles Griffes, Harl McDonald and Edwin McArthur.

Before an enthralled and enthusiastic audience that filled Constitution Hall last evening, Kirsten Flagstad again proved her pre-eminence among the lieder singers of our day in a recital that will live long in the memories of those fortunate enough to have heard her. It was a demonstration of the art of singing and of the moving power of song when projected by a great artist with absolute sincerity of heart and mind. No histrionic pretences, no showy tricks of technique, no exaggeration of emotions marred the utter simplicity of her readings, and the listener was more profoundly stirred than by any assumption of dramatic interpretation. Her artistic honesty was devoutly served by Edwin McArthur, whose memorized accompaniments were delicately modeled upon the flow of the voice.



BROWN

One has heard Mme. Flagstad criticized for her statuesque calm and her detachment from worldly graces. It is her very poise of presence that centers the attention of the auditor, as it should be centered, upon the expressiveness of the voice; it is her abstention from gesture that prevents the distraction of the visual sense and its interference with pleasure of the ear. The emotion of her songs is inherent in the qualities of her tone and in the infinitely subtle variations in her facial expression. She is a great artist who knows that the song is more important than the singer, and that music is immortal through the humble service of the musician.

Her program was the most satisfying and consistent that could have been built for the particular purpose she had in mind. It began with five lieder by Brahms; "Die Mainacht," "Die Leibende schreibt," "An die Nachtigall," "Staendchea" and "Freuhlingstrost." These were followed by Grieg's lovely and engrossing cycle, "Haugtussa," and one reports with approval that the audience observed the request not to interrupt the eight songs by applause.

Her well-chosen group of American songs included Walter Kramer's "Clouds," Richard Hageman's "Music I Heard With You," Charles Griffes' "The Dreamy Lake" and Harl McDonald's "Daybreak." In her final group were contained five lieder by Hugo Wolf: "Gesang Waylas," "Wenn Du zu den Blumen gehst," "Wer sich der Einsamkeit ergiebt," "Leibe mir im Busen" and "Neue Leibe."

Her three extra numbers were tastefully selected to preserve the continuity of style. To the Grieg cycle she added his "My Home" to the American group Edwin McArthur's "We Have Turned Home Again" and to the Wolf group his "Er ist's."

Crosstown Bus Service Debate Opens

Proponents of Two Routes and Transit Company Counsel Press Their Cases

A three-cornered battle appeared certain yesterday as the Public Utilities Commission opened its public hearing on the feasibility of establishing a bus route linking Northwest and Northeast Washington.

Nathan M. Lubar, chairman of the District of Columbia Citizens Association Steering Committee, began a procession at yesterday's hearing in favor of a Military Road crossing of Rock Creek Park in the proposed route; Louis I. Obergh, representing the Federation of Business Men's Association, appeared to further the interests of the Klingle Road-Park Road crossing and S. R. Bowen, counsel for the Capital Transit Co., appeared to question each witness about either route. The company is expected to oppose establishment of a new crosstown line.

Hearings will be continued tomorrow at 1:30 p. m.

Routes Have Same Ends

The two proposed routes, although taking different courses in crossing Rock Creek Park, both begin and end in the same place, namely, Westmoreland Circle and Bladensburg Road and South Dakota Avenue Southeast.

Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst appeared yesterday as a surprise witness testifying the 55-year-old Klingle Road bridge "is unsafe for loads over 12,000 pounds." He said he could not recommend buses crossing this bridge, which has a 19-foot roadway. He did say, however, plans are now being drawn to provide a grade separation at this point, but would not predict how long it might take to get the necessary money from Congress.

Ernest F. Henry, of Petworth Citizens Association, recommended a Military Road crossing because "it will serve an area having a population of 100,000." He said surveys show that most of the people who drive across Military Road from Connecticut Avenue to Sixteenth Street Northwest remain in the uptown section and "do not go downtown."

Gives Time Figure

To questions as to whether the proposed Military Road route would take the patrons to "business areas, Government buildings and the like," Henry replied the people using the Military Road line would be "visiting" or "going to school at the University of Maryland."

Richard A. Finn, of the Steering Committee, said it took 94 minutes, including waiting time for five different buses and street cars, to take a passenger from Westmoreland Circle to Bladensburg Road and South Dakota Avenue Northeast. The crosstown bus, traveling at 20 miles an hour, would do the distance in 30 minutes.

Mrs. Isabelle Moore, 3106 Chain Bridge Road Northwest, said she favored the Military Road route but wanted the bus to service patrons in the neighborhood of Conduit Road and Nebraska Avenue Northwest. She asked the commission why "the witnesses continued to ask for the Park Road route after Capt. Whitehurst said the bridge would not permit buses?"

The men who sit on the bench were the guests of the men who look up to the bench last night as The Barristers held its annual dinner at the Mayflower Hotel.

Four justices of the Supreme Court were among the group of more than 300 attorneys and their guests who rocked with laughter at the problems of "The Law and the Language" as recounted by Judge Armistead M. Dobie, of the Fourth Federal Circuit Court of Appeals and former dean of the University of Virginia law school.

Judge Dobie pointed out that when a citizen seeks the meaning of a passage he resorts to the lexicographers, but when money is involved in his problem he will go to a judge.

He reminded his audience of ludicrous situations in which the courts variously attempt to construe the meaning of words in varying sets of circumstances. In Virginia, he stated, there are four different sets of circumstances whereby one may be considered married, while there are only three in which he is considered not married.

Richard H. Wilmer, president of The Barristers, served as toastmaster. Among the guest entertainers was a magician, one Guilli-Guilli, who pulled live chickens out of glasses as readily as Judge Dobie, elicited laughter from the gathering.

Justices Harlan F. Stone, Owen J. Roberts, Stanley F. Reed and William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court headed the guests of honor. From the Circuit Court of Appeals were Justices D. Lawrence Groner, Harold M. Stephens, Justin Miller, Fred M. Vinson, Henry W. Edgerton and Wiley Rutledge.

Other judges who were guests were Finis J. Garrett, Oscar E. Bland, Charles S. Hatfield, Irvine S. Lenroot, Joseph R. Jackson, Sam E. Whitaker, Marvin Jones, J. Warren Madden, Alfred A. Wheat, Jesse C. Adkins, Oscar R. Luhring, James M. Proctor, Bolitha J. Laws, T. Alan Goldsborough, James W. Morris, David A. Pine, George C. Aukam, Nathan Cayton, John P. McMahon, Walter J. Trustees Reveal Their Pride In Boys Club at Annual Dinner

Trustees of the Boys Club of Washington progressively raised the ante in descriptions of their organization's value at the annual dinner meeting in the Army-Navy Club last night.

D. R. Hutchison, comptroller, reported that the net worth of the club, including its three branches and Camp Reeder, Md., was $329,949.66 on December 31, 1940, according to the treasurer's account.

But A. F. E. Horn, president, boosted this total by an arbitrary figure of $1,393,000, claiming that this represented the club's capital stock in some 3,050 Washington boys who are members.

This, said Horn, amounted to $456 a boy—"book value, not market value"—and he accounted for the investment by listing the health improvement, vocational and scholastic training, and recreation which make each member "a more valuable boy."

Vice presidents in charge of the three branches of the Boys Club staged a side contest among themselves by reciting the achievements of their boys in the last year. They were Albert Conradis, in charge of the Eastern Branch; R. J. A. Kaemmerer, of the Central Branch, and Dr. Chester D. Swope, of the Georgetown Branch.

Other officers elected were Frank R. Jelleff, chairman of the board; Sidney L. Hechinger, vice president; Col. Henry P. Erwin, treasurer, and James A. Dent, secretary.

45% of Army Volunteers Own To No Church, Yale Club Told

Approximately 45 per cent of the youths who join the United States Army have no church affiliations and to a large extent lack any religious convictions, Dr. Paul D. Moody, president of Middlebury College and former ranking chaplain of the A. E. F., yesterday told a meeting of the Yale Club of Washington.

He addressed the group at a luncheon meeting at the Cosmos Club. Army chaplains, he said, can be the most valuable men in the service through coordinated efforts in bolstering spiritual morale among the men.

Dr. Moody is in Washington to consult with War Department officials on national defense plans. He said the Army now has about 1,000 chaplains, 140 of whom are attached to the regular force. He predicted that by June a total of 1,500 chaplains would be in active service.

The tendency of youth to sneer at world conditions is fast disappearing, Dr. Moody declared, and most young men and women in the country's colleges are now viewing the war situation with serious concern.

1,000 Are Expected For Camp Session

More than 1,000 representatives of private and public camps are expected to come to Washington today for a four-day conference on the problems of youth, sponsored by the American Camping Association, at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Speakers include Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, chief of the Labor Department's children bureau; Dr. Alfred E. Stearns, headmaster-emeritus of Philips Academy, Andover, Mass., and Kenneth Holland, of the American Youth Commission.

Firemen Battle Blaze Two Hours

Firemen battled a stubborn roof fire at the new District National Guard Armory, Nineteenth and A Streets Southeast, for two hours shortly after noon yesterday.

The blaze, of unknown origin, burnt paper covering the insulation and the heat melted asphalt on the roof. No estimate of the damage was made.

Free Water Show

The District Red Cross will present a free winter water show, "Aquapoppin," at the Shoreham Hotel pool tomorrow, Friday and Saturday in connection with its life saving and water safety program. The show will start at 8:30 p. m. Tickets may be obtained at Red Cross headquarters at 1730 E Street Northwest.

U. of Wisconsin Honors Founders On Air Tonight

Clarence A. Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin and director of Selective Service, will be the principal speaker at 9 p. m. today on the Founder's Day broadcast of the university. The half-hour program will be carried on blue network of the National Broadcasting Co.

George E. Worthington will be toastmaster at a dinner at 7 o'clock at the Dodge Hotel. Members of the Wisconsin Congressional delegation have been invited.

Approximately 100,000 alumni will attend simultaneous dinners in the Nation and listen to the braodcast. Dykstra will speak from Madison, Wis.

Concert Canceled

The concert of the United States Marine Band Symphony Orchestra scheduled for tonight has been cancelled owing to other official engagements, it was announced yesterday. The concert was to have been given in the Marine Barracks auditorium.

Board Defers Crystal City Zoning Action

Hopes Dim For Big Project On Connecticut Avenue Tract

Hopes for a Crystal City development were dimmed yesterday when the District Zoning Commission deferred action indefinitely on a plan which would permit construction of the $15,000,000 project on the Dean tract, Florida and Connecticut Avenues Northwest.

The plan, an amendment to the zoning code would permit construction of "community units" on large tracts suitable for this purpose, without changing the basic zoning. Last month the Crystal City promoters were denied a change in zoning from residential to commercial use of the land in order to permit shops and stores along the Connecticut Avenue side of the tract.

The commission approved an increase from 90 to 110 feet in the height limit for the proposed Statler Hotel, east side of Sixteenth Street, between K and L Streets Northwest, in order to permit the building to rise 130 feet with setbacks above the 110-foot limit.

The commission adopted new definitions for the terms "lodging," "rooming" and "boarding" houses but turned down a proposal to liberalize the use of vacant lots in residential neighborhoods for the parking of automobiles.

Nine petitions were approved by the board. These follow:

Change from residential "A" to semi-restricted property bounded by Fort Davis Park, Thirty-eighth Street extended, Massachusetts and Boulevard Avenues, Southern and Alabama Avenues Southeast. A part of this area was not included in the change.

Property lying east of Good Hope Road between Alabama Avenue and Naylor Road Southeast was changed from residential "A" restricted to residential "A" area.

Property at the southwest corner at Sixteenth and Gerard Streets Northeast was given a 60-foot height classification.

Part of the property on the south side of Legation Street, west of Connecticut Avenue Northwest, was zoned residential 60-foot "C" area.

Property on the south side of I Street between Florida Avenue and Thirteenth Street Northeast was changed from residential to first commercial.

Property on the south side of Newton Street between Rhode Island Avenue and Clinton Northeast was given a first commercial "C" classification.

Area bounded by G, Fourth, D and Second Streets Northwest was changed from residential to first commercial.

Property on the east side of Wisconsin Avenue near Van Ness Place Northwest was changed to first commercial.

Portion of the property on the east side of Luzon Avenue between Tuckerman and Underwood Streets Northwest was changed from residential area to residential "A."

Seven other cases heard at the public hearing last Thursday were denied by the Commission.

Washington Beats Orioles in Wild Game, 5-1

Eagles End Long Streak Of Losses

3,629 See Slugfest Between Hal Dewey, Guy Roach; Official Hit by Baltimorean

By Jack Munhall

Amid riotous occurrences, including the slugging of Referee Mel Harwood by an enraged visiting player and the issuance of one match misconduct and one 10-minute misconduct penalties, the Washington Eagles last night ended their alarming losing streak with a smashing 5-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles at Riverside Stadium.

With 3,629 paying patrons as witnesses to the wildest match in the local history of ice hockey, the Eagles slit their string of eight winless games and climbed back into a tie for the Eastern Amateur League lead with the Orioles, each having a total of 61 points.

Unprecedented was a series of second-period incidents launched by a toe-to-toe slugfest between Washington's Hal Dewey and Baltimore's Guy Roach and climaxed by the pummeling of Referee Harwood by the temporarily beserk Roach. Roach later had four stitches taken in a cut over his temple.

Players Restore Order

It was the first time that an official really has been struck and it was also something new to see Dewey and Roach struggle to get at each other while their mates, for the most part, maintained order. Usually, trouble between these bitter intercity rivals culminates in a free-for-all. But for 15 minutes while all eyes were focused at one end of the rink where Roach and Dewey spat like a couple of cats, Washington and Baltimore players forgot long-standing feuds to help restore order.

The upshot was a match misconduct penalty to Roach for striking an official, five minutes each to Roach and Dewey for fighting and two minutes to Gordon Pranscke, of Washington, for cross-checking.

Blond, fiery Ross Knipfel, and dark, pugnacious Dewey and Paul Courteau were the big heroes in Washington's amazing reversal of form. Norm Burns, "Rosy" Rossignol, Roy McBride, each of whom accounted for a Washington goal, and Len Burrage and Gordon Pranscke also were conspicious for the MacKenzie men.

Play Again Tonight

Baltimore, unbeaten in 23 straight matches on its home ice and now awaiting Washington's invasion there tomorrow night, put up a rousing fight until the third period when the Eagles crashed through with their last two goals to clinch the decision.

The marked change in the Eagles was evident in the very first minute of play, although it was not until seconds before the close of the opening period that Washington's improvement paid dividends.

In getting off in the lead for the first time in several matches, the Eagles scored, at 19:07 when Ross Knipfel fired a shot from 45 feet out after receiving a backward pass from Norm Burns.

Unexpected was this goal which suddenly terminated the only dull portion of the initial 20 minutes, which were unique for a Washington-Baltimore match in that not a single penalty was called. Ten seconds before Knipfel surprised Goalie Ceryance with his shot which was partially screened by several players standing before the Baltimore net, a fight narrowly had been avoided. Baltimore's Roach, and Dewey and Courteau of Washington seemed set to square away when Referee Harwood broke up the party.

Before the big fight, Washington had sprung into a 3-1 lead with a continuation of its rejuvenated play of the opening session. The Orioles tied the score at 1-1 at 1:59 on a luck-anointed shot by Marzo, who whacked at the puck even as Knipfel sent him crashing to the ice.

Harwood Is Catcher

But this goal, instead of impelling the Orioles to renewed efforts, had that effect on the Eagles, and McBride on a mysterious shot which didn't appear to enter the front aperture of the cage, regained the advantage for Washington.

This tally at 7:24 preceded by some 5 minutes the third Washington goal which Burns blasted through Ceryance at close range after the puck appeared at his feet amid a frenzied scrimmage. Mailley, who had carried the puck into Baltimore territory, received an assist on the play.

The Roach-Dewey fight, while not entirely unexpected of Roach, certainly produced a surprise principal in Dewey, who, of all the Eagles, usually is the most placid. When the two had arisen from their collision, blood was streaming from Roach's head and like a man gone berserk he started for Dewey who, too, was brimming with belligerency. Five different times Roach broke loose from protective arms and charged his adversary until finally he became embroiled with Harwood who caught several light punches on his head and face before Roach could be quieted.

Meantime, Pranschke and Riley and other Eagles and Orioles were half of a mind to fight and scattered punches were thrown. When peace was restored each team had only three men for about 45 seconds; then each had four and neither came close to scoring until Vitarelli unleashed a shot, which Goalie Colvin, of Washington, blocked even as the period-ending whistle sounded.

Jacobs Brings Conn to Uline's March 6

New Yorker To Team Up With Alvis

Light Heavyweight Champion Will Meet Hassett; Mamakos, Zivic on Calendar

By Al Hailey

Mike Jacobs, impresario of New York boxing, has decided to extend his sphere of action to Washington and will fire his opening gun March 6 in Uline's Arena with a Billy Conn-Dannny Hassett 15-round light-heavyweight battle.

Jacobs will copromote the fight with Ray Alvis, who went to New York yesterday to close out arrangements for the nontitle affair.

Particular significance was given to the meeting of Alvis and Jacobs in New York by the presence of Raoul LeMat, manager of Uline's $400,000 ice palace, which can seat 8,500 persons for boxing.

Agreement Reported

Although no announcement to that effect was made, it was believed that Jacobs and Alvis reached an "agreement" with LeMat whereby they would be given preference over any other Washington promoter in staging professional fight attractions in the arena.

Coincident with Jacobs' announcement came the information that the New York Hippodrome boxing ring had been purchased by LeMat for Uline for $800.

Jacobs called the District Boxing Commission by long distance telephone yesterday afternoon and discussed plans for the Conn fight and stated he probably would stage a Steve Mamakos-Fritzie Zivic world's welterweight bout here.

Catch Weights

Conn, who is giving up his world's light heavyweight championship to gamble on a shot at Joe Louis' heavyweight title, and Hassett will meet in an over-the-weight fight.

Johnny Ray, manager of the Pittsburgh light heavy champion, and Pete Moran, Philadelphia promoter and manager of Hassett, signed contracts for the March 6 fight yesterday in Jacobs' offices.

Alvis, who once managed the world's largest stable of fighters, Monday night announced he had a "big deal" in the air and that he was planning to go "all out" in an effort to put boxing on a big-time scale in the Nation's Capital.

Alvis said by telephone yesterday that he had asked Jacobs for Louis here in the near future and that Jacobs was interested, but first wanted to see what kind of a crowd the Conn-Hassett fight will draw.

Asked if he planned to tie up with Jacobs in promoting boxing in Washington,, Alvis gave an emphatic "yes."

Alvis, who only last week posted $2,000 promoter's bond with the District commission, already has obtained exclusive rights to Uline's Arena for two dates in April. Alvis has informed the local commission that he has plenty of financial backing, and apparently convinced Jacobs yesterday.

Hassett Praised

The Zivic-Mamakos fight is reported to be a certainty for Washington despite the outcome of the pending Mamakos-Tony Zale 15-rounder late this month in Chicago for the N. B. A. version of the world's middleweight championship.

Jacobs, here last summer for the Henry Armstrong-Phil Furr welterweight title fight, at that time told The Post he planned to enter the Washington boxing picture this winter. At that time, however, it was believed he would go in with Promoter Joe Turner.

The New York promoter justified his choice of Hassett yesterday by pointing out that the Philadelphia Irishman has appeared here three times and made a favorable impression on each occasion.

Beat Nichey

Hassett appeared here several years ago and defeated Billy Nichey in a rousing battle. Last summer, after a layoff of a year, Hassett came to town and halted Buddy Scott's 13-fight winning streak in another whirlwind affair. His last appearance here resulted in a ten-round loss to Nathan Mann, New Haven heavyweight whom he spotted 12 pounds in weight.

"I am well pleased with Hassett as an opponent for Conn," Jacobs said. "If I wasn't I wouldn't put him in there. He'll give Billy a good fight and I'll be in Washington standing on the gate when the people are leaving."

Meanwhile, the New York Athletic Commission yesterday announced Conn was ready to relinquish his 175-pound title whenever that body should request it. Billy already has signed to meet Louis in June in a heavyweight title fight.

The light heavyweight middle will be ironed out, it was stated, by a two-fight elimination. Tommy Tuckey and Jimmy Webb, two of the leading contenders, are slated to fight in Madison Square Garden February 21, while managers of Anton Christoforidis, the N. B. A. champion, and Gus Lesnevich have agreed for their fighters to meet in the Garden May 2—both 15-rounders. The winners of these fights will meet in the summer for the title, it was stated.

Things I would like to know about sports:

How the Washington Eagles who looked so good last month can look so bad now? Why most Eastern Amateur League hockey matches are so rough when a game between the Eagles and League All-Stars (a combination of many "bullies") was played without a single penalty?

MUNHALL

When Maryland is going to stop using its hit-or-miss passing game in basketball and begin playing within ten years of the modern court trend? Why Gene Ochsenreiter, one of the most promising quarter mile runners in local college history, chose to play basketball with a losing Maryland team rather than compete with the Terp track team which needed him more? Why Jack Doolan, the Georgetown football star who admits to running a 0:9.7 century in 1938 at Seton Hall Prep, is "too slow" now to run dashes for the Hoyas?

When S. G. Leoffler and Mike Uline, the rival arena owners and ice hockey managers, are going to bring their feud into the open instead of issuing high-sounding statements that there is room for both of them?

Why Notre Dame even hesitates in snapping up "Dutch" Bergman, an alumnus, former grid star, fine coach and even more valuable public relations ambassador, to succeed Elmer Layden?

Why fighters like Steve Mamakos and George Abrams, who are built up in Washington, don't fight here more often? And if the reason is small gates, why? Why Joey Archibald fights like a champion here and like a preliminary boy everywhere else? Why Billy Banks, the local lightweight who had so many possibilities, appears to be slipping, though still in his teens?

When golf professionals, fighters and other athletes are going to wise up and stop proving the the easy-come, easy-go money theory? When George Abrams, whom some competent fight observers say is the best middleweight in the world, is going to get a crack at Ken Overlin, the New York champion, or Tony Zale, titleholder recognized by the N. B. A.? Is it because Overlin and Abrams are both managed by Chris Dundee?

How Mickey Walker, Harry Greb, Jack Johnson, Ken Overlin and other past and present ring champions reached the top despite night clubbing? Why most of the top exponents of wrestling, a so-called strenuous sport, are pressing 50?

Why the race horses in England usually last much longer than those in the U. S. A.? Why you can never tell whether a woman driver is signaling for a left turn, feeling the direction of the wind, admiring her ring, or pointing in horror at a neighbor's hat or dress?

Why a country like Germany which plays no baseball to speak of has more ball players of its ancestry in the National League than any other nation? When Joe Holman sleeps?

Why Georgetown, a school with big-time ideas about sports, doesn't realize the necessity of a full-time publicity agent? When certain local fans are going to stop beefing about the caliber of sports attractions here and admit that Washington is one of the finest sports towns in the country?

Willie Hoppe Suffers First Defeat, 50-40

By the United Press

Chicago, Feb. 11.—Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, four times world's three-cushion billiards champion, tonight gave silver-haired Willie Hoppe his first defeat in 36 world tournament matches, 50 to 40, in 50 innings.

Hoppe won his last two matches in 1938, didn't compete in '39, won 20 staright last year to win the title, had knocked off 13 opponents in the current tournament and seemed on his way to another perfect record until he crossed cues with Cochran tonight.

It was sweet revenge for Cochran, who won the world's title in 1935 by defeating Hoppe in the final match of the tournament, but lost to the New Yorker in a challenge match. Cochran won the tournament again in '36, but last year lost twice to Hoppe.

Cochran started fast, clicking billiards in the first six frames to 9 to 3 at that point. The Californian led, 18 to 5, at the end of the twentieth and held a 25-to-18 lead at the thirty-first, when the intermission was called.

Coming back after the rest period, the silvery-haired champion rallied and with a spectacular run of nine in the thirty-eighth inning took the lead, 36 to 32. But Cochran retaliated with seven billiards in the next two frames to lead, 39 to 36, and thereafter was never headed.

The victory gave Cochran a tournament record of ten victories and four defeats.

Abrams, Art Lind Win in N. Y. Ring

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—George Abrams, Brooklyn middleweight, knocked out "Irish" Jimmy O'Boyne, Boston, Mass., in the third round of the feature event at the Broadway Arena tonight.

Abrams, a two-time winner over Billy Soose, had little trouble with his less experienced opponent, hitting him at will. A right to the chin finally finished the Bostonian. Abrams scaled 162, O'Boyne 163.

In the 8-round semiwindup, Art Lind, 156, Washington, D. C., outpointed Marty Marino, 166, Brooklyn.

Hoyas Hosts Tonight To Temple U. Five

Hilltop's Hopes for Garden Invitation Hinge on Battle at Riverside; Colonials Face Navy Quintet at Annapolis Today

On divergent fronts, but with the same purpose in mind, Georgetown and George Washington basketball teams today meet stern opposition to their aims of winning a place in the collegiate championship tournament.

The Colonials, returning to action after an impressive rout of Maryland, invade Annapolis to meet the improving Middies this afternoon, leaving Georgetown in the local spotlight in its game with strong Temple at about 9:45 at Riverside Stadium.

The Hoyas, clinging to a slight lead over G. W. in their two-team race for the District championship, view the Temple game with considerable interest and not without tremors. For despite the Owls' recent one-sided defeat by Penn State they have a strong club and always are tough to beat in a game they want to win as much as this one.

Hoyas Must Win

As for the importance of the game to Georgetown's hopes to land a place in the sports writers' invitational tournament at Madison Square Garden next month, the word is out that the Hoyas must lick the Owls convincingly or lose their claim to a berth. It seems that Georgetown muffed a chance to clinch a bid to the event by its recent trip into New York where it lost to Syracuse and barely beat mediocre Colgate and Yale.

This will be the second meeting of the season between Georgetown and Temple and the Owls will be out to avenge a 46-45 loss to the Hoyas at Philadelphia. Temple, with a record of eight won and five lost, isn't going anywhere now and there's nothing that would give it more pleasure than to insure that the Hoyas don't go anywhere either. Georgetown has captured 13 of 15 games.

The Owls, coached by Ernie Messikomer, employ a fast passing, quick breaking, professional style game though they do the pros one better by setting up most of their baskets for lay-up shots. They do little shooting outside, except as a last resort. Contrawise, Georgetown has been relying chiefly on the long-distance set shooting of Jim Kiernan, Buddy O'Grady, Charley Schmidli and Bill Bornheimer. That Temple is dangerous is attested by their victories over Rhode Island's point-crazy Reds, Oklahoma, Kansas, Oregon and Illinois.

Gonzaga in Prelim

This game will follow a preliminary at 8:30 between the Georgetown Frosh and Gonzaga Prep. Tickets are on sale at Riverside.

George Washington's Colonials are due a big surprise if they take Navy lightly, for the Middies showed flashes of great strength in upsetting Virginia and Duke recently, and in traditional style are very hard to beat at Annapolis. Bill Busik, scatback of football fame, is making a name for himself on the court for Navy after missing more than half the season with an injury. The Middies are rangy and fast and sure shots beneath the basket . . . MUNHALL.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 11.—Western Maryland's Terrors warmed up slowly, but overtook Catholic University and held a lead throughout the second half to win a consistently fast basketball game here tonight, 34 to 25.

The Catholic U. team, led by Mulvihill and Daly, guards, jumped out at the start and were ahead for 15 minutes. From then on through the first half it was anybody's contest and the period ended with Western Maryland leading, 12 to 10.

The Terrors entered the second half in good form and drew away from the C. U. players during the first five minutes.

Hartnett Off on Strange Trip To Join Giants

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 11.—Charles Leo (Gabby) Hartnett departed tonight for a strange spring training camp to report for duty to Manager Bill Terry of the New York Giants at Miami, Fla.

It was the first time in 18 years that his destination wasn't Avalon, Santa Catalina Island, spring training camp of the Chicago Cubs.

Hartnett's career in the major league was identified exclusively with the Cubs until he was dismissed as manager after the close of the 1940 season.

Hartnett, who will become chief coach and a part-time player with the Giants, expects to spend considerable time working out with the pitchers. He also is figuring on doing some catching during the season.

Has Understanding

"That's the understanding I had with Terry when we came to terms," Hartnett said. "I expect that I'll appear only when Terry wants to give Harry Danning a rest, however."

Regarding the Giants' chances in the National League race Hartnett said much may depend on the showing of Bill Jurges, who suffered spells of dizziness after being struck in the head with a pitched ball last June.

Hartnett refused to make any comment on the possibilities of the Chicago Cubs beyond wishing Jimmy Wilson, the new manager, a lot of good luck.

"I hope he manages to get enough players signed to put a team on the field when the season opens," Hartnett chuckled. "But that is no longer one of my worries."

The Cubs, who depart a week from Sunday to start spring training, still have 16 players unsigned, most of them regulars.

Heavy Track Enhances Santa Anita Hopes For Howard's Mudder; Bull Reigh, Conqueror Of Porter's Cap, Is Among Overnight Entries

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 11.—Sixteen of the finest 3-year-olds campaigning in the West were named for the seventh running of the $50,000 added Santa Anita Derby tomorrow and once again lucky Charles S. Howard boasted the top contender for one of Santa Anita's fabulous purses.

Porter's Cap, owned by the wealthy San Francisco sportsman, led the roll of entries as heavy rains through the night and early today soaked the track and enhanced the victory chances of Howard's spanking chestnut colt in the mile and one-eighth event.

The overnight entries:

Good Turn, Bull Reigh, Valdina Groom, Nasca, Swain, Buckhorn Creek, Armistice, Welcome Pass, Madigana, Pirate, Transfigure, Havana Lad, Fairymant, Staretor, Copperman and Porter's Cap.

The downpour promised offgoing and reduced the expected number of 20 or more, but it didn't change the selections of most of the handicappers.

Virtually all of the candidates, with the possible exception of the Foxcatcher Farm's maiden, Fairymant, and Havana Lad, have shown mudding ability. And several—notably Porter's Cap, with a win over many of this same Derby field over a sticky strip several weeks ago—have shown exceptional mudding ability.

Upset Probable

Past runnings of this Derby, however, have shown that anything can and usually does happen. California-bred Sweepida came out of nowhere to win last year, and while many critics scoffed at the time at the field of beaten rivals, it included such later winners as Gallahadion, the Kentucky Derby champion, and Howard's Mioland, now a leading choice for the coming $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap March 1.

Getting back to the present crop: Porter's Cap was beaten by Anthony Pelleteri's Bull Reign, December 28, and nosed out February 1 by Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Good Turn in a mile race, with the Howard colt giving away 8 pounds. Emerson F. Woodward's Valdina Groom has run third against rival 3-year-olds on three occasions, but is a good mudder. Swain, owned by Cleveland Putnam, won the rich Arlington Futurity last year in the muck, while Neil McCarthey paid $1,500 as an added fee to get his Buckhorn Creek into the Derby as a supplementary entry. Nasca, owned by Breckenridge Long, Second Assistant Secretary of State, is the lone filly in the race and packs 115 pounds to 120 for colts and geldings.

Upward of 40,000 fans are expected. Post time for the Derby is approximately 4:15 p. m. (7:15 E. S. T.).

Impound Hurt, Scratched From $100,000 Race

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 11.—Another candidate for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap dropped by the wayside today.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt said Impound was being withdrawn because of a sore ankle—a recurrence of an injury that put the horse on the sidelines in 1939.

In his first race since that time, Impound won a 6-furlong race at Santa Anita recently and was soon marked down as a ten-to-one bet in the future book at Agua Caliente.

Kayak II, Whichcee, Specify, Porter's Mite and other nominees have been eliminated as possibilities through training mishaps in the last few weeks.

Golden Gate Track Closes Until Spring

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 11.—Chairman Jerry Giesler of the California horse racing commission said today that the ill-fated turf meeting at Albany's $1,500,000 Golden Gate Park was over for the spring.

"It is with sincere regret as chief of the California horse racing board that I must announce the present meeting now being conducted at the Golden Gate Turf Club be suspended indefinitely, due to the failure of the racing association to conclude a meeting under the conditions specified in their application," Giesler said.

The opening of Golden Gate Park's meeting, scheduled for late December, was postponed five times because of heavy rains and a racing track deemed unsafe for horses by the commission. Last week the track filed a petition in bankruptcy.

Owls Trounce Towson, 45-37

Special Dispatch to The Post

Towson, Md., Feb. 11.—Wilson Teachers five, of Washington, D. C., hung up its tenth victory of the season here tonight, defeating Maryland State Teachers College by a 45-37 count at the losers' gym.

The Owls were out front from the opening gun, amassing a comfortable 29-13 lead by intermission. The second half saw every man on the Wilson bench go into action as the District club coasted in.

Hal Ifshin, husky forward, led scoring for the winners with 16 points, but game honors went to Towson's Cox with 18. Wilson's big margin was its success at the foul line, where nine single-pointers were registered.

Eastern Trips Tech, Gains Playoff; Wilson Bows to Raiders

Tide Is 37-30 Winner After Rally; Western Swamps Tigers, 30-18

Two Championship Berths Hinge On Games Friday; Poston, Karas Pace Interhigh Series Victors

A second school yesterday joined Roosevelt, 1940 titlist, as a certainity to get in the four-team public school basketball championship playoff when Eastern, crown-bearer of 1938 and 1939, swept to a 37-30 triumph over Tech in a fast affair at the Lincoln Park gym.

At the same time Western, with the interhigh series' most unpredictable crew, featured the other half of the regular Tuesday program with a 30-18 smashing of Woodrow Wilson on the Roosevelt floor. Thus only three games remain on this year's regular schedule, and the hopes of Tech and Western, now tied for third place with Central, an optimistic fourth, hinge now on Friday night's doubleheader at Tech gym.

Tide Goes Berserk

Except for a seven-minute famine of points which Tech underwent in the second quarter, the outcome of the tangle at Eastern might have been different.

During that space the White Tide, after digging out of a 6-2 deficit to enjoy a 6-6 deadlock going into the second period, went berserk to the extent of nine straight points, and that settled the issue. At the half the score was 17-8.

Tide Offense Clicks

Twice during the remainder of hostilities the Manual Trainers pulled to within four points of their foes, but each time a fast-breaking, smooth-passing Tide offense found them scattered and boosted the count again. The end of the third stanza saw Eastern on top, 26-18, but shortly after the final period got under way it was 31-21.

Then Ed Barton, a redhead with a hot scoring hand, stepped in to again give Tech fans a cheering point. Once he tallied on a pass from directly under the rim, and again he rang up two points on a set shot. "Shrimp" Brewer, who isn't, undertook the losers' point-making from that juncture, scoring five successive points to match counters by Richie Poston, George Pigott and Neil Craig.

Poston High Scorer

Poston, half the Tide's set of twins, managed for 12 points and Eastern's high individual performance, but in additoin he took upon himself the guarding of Jackie Walsh, the invaders' high scorer. His success was indicated by the fact that Walsh got only three field goals.

Barton topped scoring for Tech, also with 12 points. He was responsible for four of the team's six missed foul shots, however, as he made good on only two. Eastern had a chance for 16 single-pointers, dropping only six. Five of the failures went to young Mike Lieb, who played an exceptional game otherwise.

Raiders Away Early

With Jimmy Karas and Jake Hilleary leading the way, Western took an early lead and held it throughout its game. Hilleary opened scoring with a pot shot and Karas followed with another, and it appeared that Wilson's zone defense would not prove strong enough as the period progressed. The Red Raiders continued to find the range with their long field goals, Karas adding a pair and Hilleary and Irving Schenker getting one apiece. Don Hillock, rangy center of Wilson, was the only Tiger player to score in the initial period, as Wilson trailed at the end of the stanza, 13 to 2.

In the second quarter Western was able to score but one point, that being a free toss by Karas. Hillock's four points and a charity toss by Vincon rounded out scoring as the period ended with Western leading, 14 to 7. Up until a minute before half-time, Hillock was the only Tiger to tally, then Vincon dropped in a free toss.

The game increased its tempo shortly after intermission. With some fancy teamwork by Schenker, Hilleary and Karas were able to find scoring opportunities of which they made good. Vincon was the first Wilsonite beside Hillock to tally a field goal, this coming in the third period. Both clubs added 7 points to their scores and the period ended with Western again holding the margin, 21 to 14.

Western's reserves found themselves in the game in the waning minutes as the Raiders took a substantial lead. Mitchell, Schenker and Hilleary hit the cords in rapid order before Red Davies was able to break the Western streak with his only basket of the game. Two foul shots closed Wilson's scoring and Karas' two-pointer and Love's free toss rounded out Western's scoring.

Landon Five Wins Over St. James, 26-19

Baker, one of the city's highest schoolboy scorers, ran up a total of 20 points to pace Landon to its ninth triumph in 12 games.

It took the winners little time to solve St. James' zone defense, their first-period margin being 13-3. At the hall it was 17-7 and at the end of the third session, 26-11. Landon went scoreless in the final 8 minutes, but St. James' best effort couldn't tie things up.

Coolidge High Breaks Streak, Wins, 34-21

A six-game losing streak was broken by the youthful basketball delegation of Calvin Coolidge High yesterday when it put on a spree in the final period to down Anacostia, 34-21, for the second time this season.

Playing on the losers' floor, Coolidge clung to meager leads of 7-5 and 14-11 after the first two quarters, saw the Indians tie it up at 18-18 going into the last quarter, and then put on the steam. Ritchie Waterman, Meiklejohn and Bassin poured 16 points into the cords as the tiring hosts were held to three.

Waterman, only recently returned to the lineup after an injury had forced him out of two games, was tops in the scoring department for the winners with 8 points. Ancostia's Elmer Leukhardt also had 8, but got no scoring support from his mates.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 11.—Knighthood is no longer in flower, but that's apparently not going to stop Capt. R. Luff Meredith, a test pilot from Boonton, N. J., from putting on a demonstration of falconry at the annual sportsmen's show which opens in New York this weekend.

CONSIDINE

Falconry did not die with tilting and horse armor. At least Meredith doesn't think so. He has a nest of these rough-house birds of prey, and here and there around the world a few others have preserved the sport which for several hundred years was England's national pastime. Just which man, beast or feathered creature will be pounced on by the captain's falcon, when the captain whips off the bird's rufter (hood) and let's it take off from his wrist, remains to be seen. We've been reading up a little on falcons and while we want to see one of the bums work, we'd prefer to watch the more voracious birds from behind a fencer's mask.

Falcon is a general term, covering a rather wide range of birds of the hawk family. Seems that what distinguishes the breed is that it grabs its quarry in its iron-like claws while the quarry is taking it on the lam. Golden Eagles have been taught to do all the things these birds can be taught to do, as have been a few buzzards—though the buzzard doesn't generally have the moxie that falcons need, because for centuries the falcons were taught to attack herons, gazelles and a host of other bigger or faster victims.

It was all done (and still is) through the bird's appetite. But that's only the beginning of an incredibly tedious training schedule. First the bird must be taught to ride on its owner's wrist and forearm. He wears a heavy leather gauntlet for the purpose. This goes on for weeks, with much patting on the head and smoothing of feathers. When fed it is first hooded and its meat must be dragged over its claws and at the same time it is best to tickle the bird's legs with a spare feather, though heaven and Capt. Meredith alone know why. The bird is mostly hand fed, during which time the owner keeps up a running fire of conversation with it—to make the bird associate the sound of his voice with food. See?

After untold (and hard to believe) care, the falcon learns to eat like a gent with his hood off, and he or she (the female is bigger, stronger and, of course, smarter) is shown horses, dogs, relatives, strangers, etc., for a few weeks, until accustomed to them. The Encyclopedia Britannica, with scant respect for the patience of Flancy, the cop on the corner, suggests that falconers take their apprentice birds for walks through city streets at night, with the hoods off. During the long period of training the bird must be fed lean beef and pigeon, and usually put to bed at 3 or 4 in the afternoon, in a dark room. The falconer who cares a whit about his daft hobby, or possesses an ounce of feeling for his beloved scavenger, will not arouse it until 8 a. m., and then by candle light.

After that the falconer feeds his winged with by holding its food at a height and making it fly for it. The distance between the point where the bird is de-hooded and released and the point where the meal is held is increased gradually from a few inches to as much as 100 yards. After it learns that, the falconer then tricks it into another lesson, or vice. He holds out a nice pigeon, we'll say, and when the hungry bird comes winging through the air to bat it out of the falconer's hand with a great charge of claws and wings, the falconer pulls it back with an "aah, aah . . . no you don't." The bird goes into a sharp bank and comes roaring back. All this teaches it to follow the zig-zagging of future intended victims, and a few lessons of this sort makes it more maneuverable than a Spitfire or Messerschmitt.

Finally he or she graduates into a full-fledged robber baron or baroness of the air. After that the bird, when unmasked after falconers' dogs have flushed game, can overtake almost anything within 200 yards, kill it and wait for the falconer to came a'running. The falcon probably did much to feed mankind for centuries, before shooting arms were developed. The art is lost in antiquity.

Anyway, the sportsmen's show says it is going to put on a demonstration of falconry, for the subway trade, and we hope that none of the captain's birds have misinterpreted anything we've said here. Didn't mean a lick of harm. Some of my best friends are falcons.

Little Generals Halt Central In Overtime

Washington-Lee High cagers avenged an earlier defeat by Central yesterday on the Ballston court, a foul shot by Sterling Gudger proving the margin of victory in a 31-30 overtime battle.

Leading by 28-24 with only a minute of action left, the Little Generals saw a desperate Viking rally tie the score at 28-28 as the timekeeper's whistle blew. As the 3-minute overtime began, Charley Kligman rammed the rim with a two-pointer, but Gudger retaliated quickly with a similar effort. A few seconds later the same player stood at the foul line and made good on a one-pointer, successfully voiding every Central threat thereafter.

Beaten 21-20 in its first meeting with the Vikings, W.-L. was hard-pressed every second of yesterday's game. It boasted an 18-16 advantage at the half, but at the end of the third session trailed, 24-22.

Gudger's trio of crucial points was half his total for the game as Rube McNab stole scoring honors with 12 points. Central's Kligman had 11 to place second. The victory was W.-L.'s fifth straight.

Bruins Play Host To Chinese Tonight

The first of a series of games planned to point the Washington Bruins, colored pro cagers, for their coming clash with Heurich Brewers, will send the Bruins against the Hong Wah Kues, all-Chinese five, at Turner's Arena tonight.

The Bruins, boasting a record of nine games and no defeats, listed the San Francisco aggregation when it was learned they would be in this section of the country this week.

The Hong Wah Kues are the only Oriental basketers traveling as an entity. Out of the same stable as the world champion Harlem Globe Trotters, the Chinese aggregation is highly regarded for its ball-handling and cagey floor play. It is the first time they have shown in Washington.

Mt. St. Joe Bows, 38-31, To Roosevelt

Baltimore, Feb. 11.—Roosevelt High School cagers of Washington stopped a Mount St. Joseph rally in the final period today to win, 38 to 31. The visitors began with a 6-to-2 lead in the first quarter, increased their margin to 23 to 10 at the half, but dropped back in the face of a strong surge by the local five in the third period.

Trailing, 27 to 22, at the beginning of the last quarter, Mount St. Joseph continued its drive for the first few minutes of the period and just failed to draw up on even terms when the Washingtonians again started clicking.

Ciango, Roosevelt forward, tossed in five goals and two fouls for a total of 12 points to be the game's high scorer.

Favorites Little Pressed In Mixed Golf

By the Associated Press

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 11.—Favorites almost without exception managed to survive the first round of match play in the Everglades Club's sixth annual mixed foursomes golf tournament today, but several well-liked combines had narrow squeaks.

Elizabeth Hicks, of Los Angeles, and Hugh L. Willoughby 3d, of Port Sewall, Fla., eked out a victory on the last hole over Mrs. Rudolf Homan, of Medeira, Ohio, and H. A. Bedford, of Bellport, N. Y. Mrs. Homan missed an 18-inch putt which would have squared the match on the seventeenth and her side finished 1 down.

A 19-hole victory went to Mrs. William Hockenjos, of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., and William B. Langford, of Chicago, because Paul Cushman, of Greenville, S. C., accidentally played the wrong ball on the seventeenth. He and Jane Crum, of Orangeburg, S. C., were 1 up at the time, but lost the hole as a result and the match was squared.

Mrs. Myron Davy, of Washington, and Tommy Goodwin, of New York, the medalist team, won rather easily, defeating Mrs. H. F. Mack, of Easton, Pa., and Alan K. Wylie, of Winnetka, Ill., 4 and 3.

Mrs. E. G. Schaeffer, of Philadelphia, teamed with National Amateur Champion Richard Chapman, defeated Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, of Baltimore, and J. H. McClain, of Palm Beach, 4 and 3.

One mild upset occurred when Mrs. A. C. Critchley, of London, and Jesse Mason, of Delray Beach, downed Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., and George D. Lynn, of New York, 3 and 2.

Grace Amory and T. Dennie Boardman 2d, of Palm Beach, defeated Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., and John Cushman, of Palm Beach, 3 and 2. Mr. and Mrs. Briggs S. Cunningham, of Green Farms, Conn., defeated Elizabeth Wing, of Evanston, Ill., and James Howard, of Framingham, Mass., 5 and 4.

Little Barons Best

Ossie Stewart Fights at Arena Tuesday Night

Harry (did-I-ever-tell-you-about-my-fight-with-Philadelphia Jack O'Brien) Raskin is back in Washington's fight picture again after a personal skirmish with the Grim Reaper, and just to prove it Promoter Joe Turner's trotting out Harry's newest find in the semifinal on the Harry Jeffra-Joe Archibald fight card Tuesday night.

The new discovery is Ossie Stewart, Pittsburgh colored middleweight, who's placed his fight fate in Raskin's hands, and he'll battle Billy Monroe of Buffalo, in the eight-round semifinal at Turner's Arena.

Stewart, formerly handled by Matty Herbert, won eight straight fights in a tour of Australia last year, including a victory over Ron Richards, and has a draw with Tommy Tucker, light-heavy title contender, to add to his record.

Meanwhile, the District Boxing Commission has ordered Archibald to report tomorrow at 3 p. m. for a physical examination. The former featherweight champion arrived yesterday predicting he'll win the title from Jeffra, the Baltimorean recognized by New York as the world's featherweight champion.

"I've been the underdog in Washington time after time, but I've always won," the little Providence, R. I., puncher said yesterday at the Raleigh. "I've won 17 straight and I'll beat Jeffra."

Archibald will work out today at 1:15 p. m. in the Huron gymnasium, 511 Eleventh Street Northwest, for the public's approval.

Generals Pull Close One From Fire With Rally

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Feb. 11.—Washington and Lee cagers tonight squeezed out a narrow victory over an inspired Duke quint, 30-28, but only after a harum-scarum last minute rally.

Dick Pinck, playing his final week fo rthe Generals, dashed in to intercept a Blue Devil pass in midcourt and dribbled quickly up the court to sink a layup shot to overcome Duke's one-point margin. Tom Connelly fouled Pinck as he shot and the W. & L. senior forward added his fourteenth point to end the scoring. Duke's final effort to bring the ball up the floor ended with an interception and the Generals froze the ball in the final seconds.

Hertz, Grid 'Angel,' Has Big Ideas

Promoter Has Yet To See Contest; Mucha Latest Star

By Whitney Martin
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Feb. 11.—Some day Douglas Hertz hopes to see a football game. He's been told it's quite interesting.

Yes, sir; the owner of the New York Yankees, of the American Professional League has never seen a game in his life, but for a guy who can't swim a lick he's making a whale of a splash in the football sea. All he's trying to do right now is line up "the best team in the world."

Mr. Hertz's method is quite simple. He just picks out the collegians on whom he has the most glowing reports, invites them to hop a plane for New York, mixes hopitality with suave talk of the financial advantages of signing with Mr. Hertz, and presto! he's got his man.

Kimbrough First

His first bid was for John Kimbrough, whom Hertz offered $37,500, that total including remuneration for Kimbrough's year-around services. Only the amount of the down payment apparently is keeping "Jarrin' Jim" from signing.

The latest acquisition is Rudy Much, star University of Washington center who was Mr. Hertz's guest over the weekend, and who signed a contract to play football for one season, salary undisclosed, before he left.

Mucha was drafted by the Cleveland Rams, of the National League, but said he refused the contract. He's a burly 225-pounder from the Roseland District of Chicago, and he was outstanding on a team which would have had a perfect season except for games with Minnesota and Stanford.

DOUGLAS HERTZ

"That Minnesota bunch was tough," he said. "I guess it was the toughest team we played. Stanford was just fast. The "T" formation didn't bother us so much. We stopped their running game. We had a 150-pound substitute halfback in that day, though, and in the last ten minutes they passed us dizzy. We led, 10 to 1, until then.

"I think we'd have beaten them with a break. We were rolling for our third touchdown. We had a fourth down and about two inches to go on their 20, when our back hit the wrong hole and they took the ball on downs. That was the spark that set them going."

Getting back to Mr. Hertz, he has his eyes on several other 1940 stars he hopes to land, including Lou De Filippo, Fordham center; Nick Drahos, Cornell tackle; Dave Rankin, Purdue end, and Augie Lio, Georgetown guard.

"We go after the best," he said. "Our league is sound and growing. We already are assured of teams in Boston, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, Columbus and Detroit, as well as here. Another club will be added at either Philadelphia or Baltimore."

Hertz believes there is room for two major leagues, and he can't understand the attitude of the National League in refusing to recognize the younger American loop and cooperate with it.

Let's Join Up

"They appoint a commissioner," he said. "Well, what's a one-league commissioner going to do? I think the two leagues should get together, play under one set of rules. There should be a world series between the two leagues this year. It would help the game. Competition helps anything. As long as the National League takes the attitude it does it is not keeping faith with the public."

Then Mr. Hertz's modesty got the best of him.

"You know," he said with a tight grin, "I personally think that all the publicity I've been getting, with Kimbrough and one thing and another, had a lot to do with them hiring a commissioner. They had to get some publicity, even if they had to hire a man at $20,000 a year to do it."

Friends Five Wins, 36-34

Baltimore, Feb. 11.—The fast and timely basketing of Armand Newmyer and Alvin Dulcan led Sidwell-Friends School to a 36-34 triumph over Boys Latin here today, the torrid pair accounting for all but four of the winning points.

Newmyer had 17 points and Dulcan two less as the invaders chalked up their fourth victory of the year.

Though off to a flying start, Friends ran into a stubborn Latin club in the later stages of the game and was forced to hang on desperately to win. A 14-3 first-period lead of Friends' faded slightly to a 21-12 edge at the half. Going into the last stanza, however, Latin was trailing only 26-25. It never got ahead, but furnished Friends several anxious moments before the end.

Ten points by Guard Gaines was best for Boys Latin.

Jockey McCreary Rides Four Winners at Hialeah Park

Red Vulcan Beats Out The Rhymer

Apprentice Rider Also Finishes in The Money With His Other Two Mounts

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 11.—Conn McCreary, one of the tiniest riders extant, duplicated the recent feat of his apprentice rival, Wendell Eads, when he won four races here this otherwise dreary afternoon. The midget from St. Louis, who rode at 98 pounds today, had six mounts on the card. He was second and third with his other two mounts.

Conn, who is employed by Woodvale Farm (the Royce G. Martins, of Ohio), began with a victory on Blue Castle in the second event. In the next race he scored astride Miss Beans, then was third on Tragic Ending. He won the fifth on Moja, was second with John's Heir in the sixth, and completed his big day with a triumph aboard the 10-to-1 shot, Sar Bud, in the seventh contest. After that race, McCreary had 20 winners at the meeting, while Eads had 26.

The Rhymer Beaten

Two colts that had won their first starts in maiden races many miles apart met in the fourth race here today and finished heads apart. John R. Macomber's Red Vulcan, which scored by two lengths at Rockingham Park in October, held on gamely to beat Mrs. Payne Whitney's The Rhymer, favorite in the field of ten 3-year-olds.

The Rhymer, whose life was saved by a blood transfusion as a juvenile, also had won his debut by two lengths. That was on January 30 at this track. Most local patrons thought the son of St. Germans a virtual cinch, but New Englanders who had seen Red Vulcan's first effort were confident of the Pompey colt's chances.

Behind the pair in third place came Max Hirsch's Tragic Ending, a length away. Racing through a drizzling rain and over a muddy track, Red Vulcan splashed the 7 furlongs in 1:24 4-5. He was second choice at $10.30 for $2.

The first two horses, as well as Here Again, Boston Man and Warlock, are named for the Flamingo.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SMALL TIME, $10.80, $5.90, $4.10; SIR WAR, $5.80, $4.50; ON PAROLE, $8.50.

SMALL TIME, responding courageously to vigorous pressure, finished with determination through the stretch and wore SIR WAR down in the last strides. SIR WAR, quickest to begin, drew clear in the run out of the chute, but was unable to stave off the winner's bid. ON PAROLE broke well and raced straight along the inner rail. CHOP STICKS, prominent for a quarter mile, weakened thereafter.

WEATHER, RAINING. TRACK, SLOPPY.

SECOND RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:31. Off 2:33. Winner, J. H. Whitney's br. f. (3), by Blenheim II—Blue Dust. Trained by D. A. Headley. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50⅕.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLUE CASTLE, $6.80, $4.50, $3.20; ROSE ANITA, $8.20, $4.90; SOCRATIC, $3.90.

BLUE CASTLE, at home in the going, opened up a long lead in the early stages and won as her rider wished. ROSE ANITA gradually improved her position in the last 3 furlongs and got up to nip SOCRATIC in the last strides. SOCRATIC, nearest in pursuit of the winner in the early stages, should have finished second, but Harrell was caught napping and eased up nearing the finish. ADEHALA, well ridden and saving ground throughout, could not better her position.

Daily Double, SMALL TIME and BLUE CASTLE, Paid $67

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:00. Off 3:01½. Winner, Warbern Stable's br. f. (3), by Bostonian—Marcella H. Trained by W. A. Carter. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS BEANS, $11.60, $6.40, $3.90; ROGERS BOY, $6.20, $3.70; ETRUSCAN, $3.50.

MISS BEANS forced a steady pace from the start, shook off ETRUSCAN on the stretch turn, but drifted out in the last furlong and lost ground, yet held ROGERS BOY safe at the end. ROGERS BOY, blocked and pinched back in the early stages, moved up strongly between the leaders when clear, but could not overtake the winner. ETRUSCAN, going in his best form, attended the pace closely while saving ground, but faltered in the final furlong.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,200; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:32½. Winner, J. R. Macomber's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED VULCAN, $10.30, $4.80, $3.60; THE RHYMER, $3.30, $2.80; TRAGIC ENDING, $3.20.

RED VULCAN, displaying excellent speed in the going, raced BOSTON MAN into submission in the opening half mile, drew clear entering the stretch, but faltered and was under extreme pressure at the end. THE RHYMER, rated off the pace until well straightened into the stretch, closed gamely and would have won in a few more strides. TRAGIC ENDING gradually worked his way up and easily disposed of the others. HORNBLENDE had no excuses.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,400; allowances For 3-year-olds. The Seminole. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:00½. Winner, Cleaveland Putnam's ch. f. (3), by Ladysman—Arch Duchess. Trained by W. C. Winfrey. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:51⅘.

LOVELY DAWN	(Sisto)	104	7	3	3½	5h	6h	6h	7	31.55

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOJA, $4.40, $3.10, $2.50; HOMEWARD BOUND, $6.20, $3.80; MILL TOWER, $2.90.

MOJA, under stout restraint while saving ground in the early stages, swung around the leaders when straightened into the stretch, closed fast and won going away. HOMEWARD BOUND, well up throughout, slipped through on the inside in the last quarter mile, responded to stimulus and wore MILL TOWER down in the last stride. MILL TOWER took command entering the stretch, but faltered when the final test came. VERSION moved up strongly rounding the lower turn, but ran out comers into the stretch.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,400; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. The Okeechobee Grade C. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:30. Off 4:31. Winner, W. H. Gallagher's ch. g. (4), by Wise Counsellor—Okaybee. Trained by M. Buxton. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:11⅘.

TIMEFUL	(Borton)	103	1	5	5	5	5	5	20.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE BEE, $3.60, $2.40, $2.20; JOHN'S HEIR, $2.60, $2.20; ARMY SONG, $2.30.

WISE BEE held the field safe for speed, opened up a good lead in the first half mile, but then had to be hustled briskly to withstand JOHN'S HEIR'S challenge. The latter, in closed quarters on the inside until straightened into the stretch, finished gamely when clear, but could not reach the winner. ARMY SONG, going in closest pursuit of the winner in the early running, faltered in the final furlong, but held the remainder safe. BRIAR SHARP showed an even effort.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:01. Off 5:01½. Winner, Mrs. R. T. Runnels' ch. g. (10), by Brilliant—Wintef Blossom. Trained by R. T. Runnels. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:52⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR BUD, $22.20, $7.80, $5.50; HIGH BLAME, $5.60, $4.00; NILON, $9.10.

STAR BUD, rated off the pace until midway around the last turn, moved up steadily while circling the field, continued gamely under a drive and wore HIGH BLAME down in the last stride. HIGH BLAME, well ridden, took command at the furlong pole and held on gamely when challenged, but could not withstand the winner's bid. NILON forced a steady pace and raced HONEY BOAT into defeat, but weakened in the stretch run. CONRAD MANN came with a belated rush.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:32. Off 5:32½. Winner, C. H. Trotter's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILENT WITNESS, $14.60, $7.20, $4.50; OVERSIGHT, $5.20, $3.80; CLOSE TO, $3.60.

SILENT WITNESS, going well up on the outside from the start, took command with a rush entering the stretch and outlasted OVERSIGHT in the final drive. OVERSIGHT, on the inside early, swung very wide coming into the stretch and closed with a belated rush. CLOSE TO saved considerable ground all the way, but could not better his position in the final quarter mile. BALLOTER raced well.

Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al,

Jockey Alfred Robertson, who with Sonny Workman, used to give some of the turf's best riding ability to the C. V. Whitney Stable, is plying his trade in an excellent manner hereabouts. Robertson is taking few mounts but he has been getting his percentage of winners and is much in demand when the stakes roll around. Trainer Maxie Hirsch chose Robertson when he brought Dispose down from Columbia, S. C., to lead all the way. Hirsch wasted no time after that race and signed the veteran boy to pilot Dispose in the $20,000 Flamingo. There is almost a battle among trainers and owners for Robertson's services for the $50,000 Widener. The jockey is weighing the various offers and will decide his choice in the next week or so. With upward of 120 riders on the grounds, the horsemen like the tried and true veterans when the big checks depend on the outcome. The Greentree Stable's Hash continues to train well with the Widener as his objective. Trainer John Gaver had Hash, winner over Challedon in the Narragansett Special last year, on the track yesterday morning and the horse went a mile in 1.40 over the muddy track. About time I was getting in touch with T. T. Mott regarding the Redland Hunt's annual point-to-point race and some other things. Bowie should have plenty of good horses for its stake events. I understand the weather has been rather open around Washington which should help the stay-at-homes. In addition, Florida is going to send up a strong contingent. Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons has 14 head to ship to the Prince George track, for the Wheatley Stable and Belair Stud. Earl Sande sent The Chief out on the track here yesterday and the Maxwell Howard horse turned in a smart move in the mud. Among other stars on the track was Mythical King. I was glad to see Trainer Cy Butler grab a purse with West Sea last week. It was "long time no winner for him."

BILL.

First race—BLOSSOM LANE has worked well and could be the right one in this rather open affair. Anderson will do the riding and he is a star on juveniles. GALA GRIP comes from a good barn and is reported ready. LUSH to take care of the minor award.

Second race—BOREDOM must carry 120 pounds in this sprint, but he is in excellent condition and promises to do a lot of running. I'm going to string along. ROSE RED gets in light and probably will have Meade to do the booting. OUR FLORENCE is last on the reserve list and will be right there if sent postward.

Third race—BEAMY turned in a promising effort last out to be third in fair company. Shapes up well in this field and I look for a winning performance. SEA CHANTY is getting good and promises to be a dangerous contender. SELANN could make a money appearance.

Fourth race—ODDESA'S PRIDE is getting ready to down a field of this sort and I believe today is the day. I'm going to take my chances. CANTATA was a tip last out and may improve. CONSUL for the minor money.

Fifth race—TOWN BOY has plenty of foot and may steal a lead on this gang. Not overweighted despite the 118 pounds. MINEE-MO showed speed last out and is dangerous. THELLUSSON deserves money consideration.

Sixth race—CORYDON seems best suited of those gathered for this distance test. His handlers are bringing him along gradually and this looks like the right spot. HIGH FIDELITY has been kidding and is a possible surprise. PLOWSHARE for the show end.

Seventh race—MIGAL FAY was a recent winner. Likes the turf course and promises to ba a hard one to defeat today. BRIGHT SONINA has worked encouragingly and will be a threat. ANNIKIN would be close if taken off the reserve list.

Eighth race—COMMENDADOR II can better that recent race and deserves attention in this field. The distance is about right for KIEVEX and an off track would help. QUAROMA may be third.

Best bet—BEAMY.

Colonels Release Catcher Madjeski

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 11 (AP).—Ed Madjeski, veteran Louisville Colonel catcher, was given his outright release today so that he might negotiate for the managership of the Meridian (Miss.) Club of the Southeastern League.

Madjeski, whose home is at Elizabeth, N. J., came to the Louisville American Association Club in 1938 when he was purchased from the New York Giants for $5,000.

D. C. Business Reported 7% Above Normal

Business conditions in Washington as of February 1 stood at 7 per cent above normal, representing a gain of 1 per cent over the standing for January 1, according to the monthly report of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., national advertising firm. On February 1, 1940, the city's business index stood at 4 per cent above normal.

Best & Co. Net Higher

Net profit of Best & Co., which operates a sales outlet in Washington, totaled $1,111,398 in the fiscal year ended January 31, 1941, as compared with $1,047,004 for the previous year. This was equal to $3.63 a share on common stock, against $3.42 a share in the previous 12 months.

Net sales for the year were $16,384,120, against $15,607,340 the previous year, according to the preliminary report released here yesterday by Philip LeBoutillier, president and general manager.

Hancock Assets Gain

An increase of $72,649,667 in assets and of $263,139,806 in insurance in force was reported by President Guy W. Cox of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. yesterday in his annual report to stockholders.

The company set aside $22,196,883 for disbursement of dividends in 1941, an increase of $1,553,499 over 1940. Cox reported the 7.4 per cent gain in assets brought the total to $1,054,369,631, while insurance in force rose to $4,613,818,062. Assigned liabilities amounted to $963,781,815.

Mortality experience during the year was reported " favorable for all classes of business and lower than it ever has been."

New Class Enrolls 100

Washington Chapter, American Savings & Loan Institute, has instituted a new class in public relations beginning with the February semester, according to President C. Edward Kline. The first session was held at the Mayflower Hotel last Friday and revealed an enrollment of over 100, many of whom were officials in the building and loan associations in Washington. Kline, who is connected with the First Federal Savings & Loan Association, stated that the class will meet on Fridays at 8 p. m. throughout February at the Mayflower.

Casualty Firm Reports

United States Fidelity and Guarantee Company added $2,497,935 to surplus and undivided profits in 1940, according to the annual report received by L. H. Bowen, manager of the Washington office. Surplus and undivided profits as of December 31, 1940, stood at $15,287,758.

Net earned income totaled $4,626,633 on premiums written aggregating $35,960,852, the report showed.

Marts Closed Today

In observance of Lincoln's Birthday, all major securities and commodities markets in the United States will be closed today.

Wahington banks and building and loan association will be open for regular hours of business. The Washington Stock Exchange will be closed.

Livestock and produce markets will function as usual, as will European and Canadian securities and commodities exchanges.

Capital Gains and Losses

The term "capital assets" is defined as the property held by the taxpayer (whether or not connected with his trade or business), but does not include stock in trade of the taxpayer or property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or property held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business, of a character which is subject to the allowance for depreciation.

Capital gains and losses are classified as "short-term" (applicable to capital assets held for 18 months or less) and "long-term" applicable to capital assets held for more than 18 months). Such gains and losses are taken into consideration in the percentages shown on the return, based upon the period of time during which the assets were held.

Short-term capital losses are allowable only to the extent of short-term capital gains. However, any net short-term capital loss (not in excess of the net income for the taxable year) may be carried over to the succeeding year and applied against the short-term capital gains not already offset by short-term capital losses in such year. The carry-over is restricted to one year.

In the case of net long-term capital gain or loss, an alternative tax is imposed with respect to a gain if such tax is less than the normal tax and surtax on net income, and in the event of a loss, such alternative tax is imposed if greater than the normal tax and surtax on net income. Where a taxpayer derives a net long-term capital gain and computes his tax under section 117 (c) (1), relating to alternative taxes, the base for determining the 15 per cent limitation on the charitable contributions deduction provided by section 23 (o) and the earned income credit provided by section 25 (a) (3) is "net income."

Where a taxpayer sustains a net long-term capital loss and computes his tax under section 117(c) (2), the base for determining the charitable contributions deduction is "ordinary net income," that is "net income" plus the amount of the net long-term capital loss, and the base for determining the earned income credit is "ordinary net income" as adjusted for the charitable contributions deduction.

Stock Gifts Numerous, SEC Reports

By the Associated Press

Principal owners, officers and directors of corporations gave away millions of dollars worth of securities during December, the Securities Commission reported yesterday in a summary of transactions for the month.

While many of the gifts probably went as Christmas presents, some apparently were made in anticipation of the close of the tax year.

Sewell L. Avery of Chicago topped donors who reported more than 400 individual presents of stock with three gifts aggregating around $2,000,000 at current market prices. Avery reported that he gave away 16,000 shaes of United States Gypsum Co. stock and 26,327 shares of Montgomery Ward & Co. common.

Percy S. Straus of New York was the second largest donor of the month, giving a total of 29,044 shares of R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., common stock, aggregating about $700,000 at today's prices.

Pierre S. du Pont of Wilmington, Del., gave away 4,810 shares of General Motors Corporation common to employes and sold 24,000 shares, the transactions involving more than $1,100,000 at current prices. Du Pont also bought 8,000 shares of E. I. du Pont de Nemours common stock, which would cost around $1,200,000 at today's market.

S. Clay Williams of Winston-Salem, N. C., who has been mentioned recently for a diplomatic post, reported that he had disposed of 13,000 shares of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. common stock to junior executives of the company and had acquired 5,000 shares through an exchange.

Among the sales reported was: Joseph H. Himes of Washington, D. C., 6,500 shares of Electric Boat Co. common.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—There was a good turnover of coarse cotton goods at firm prices today. An active inquiry centered in specialty numbers, but lack of adequate delivery remains a deterrent factor.

Bulk of sales in men's woolen piece goods was for fall and winter materials, although a good demand continued for spring and summer numbers, particularly worsteds.

Silk dealers focused their attention on the recently introduced hosiery fashion crepe de chines. All staple rayon numbers were active and firm throughout the list.

Coca-Cola International Corporation

Coca-Cola International Corporation, a holding company for coca-cola stock, reported 1940 net income of $7,894,446, equal to $39.15 a share on the common stock, compared with $8,022,926, or $38.92 a share, in 1939.

Prentice-Hall, Incorporated

Prentice-Hall, Incorporated., and associates, book publishers, reported for 1940 net income of $398,571, equal, under participating provisions of its shares, to $4 a share on the preferred and $4.05 on the common. This compared with $378,825, or $3.96 a preferred and $3.76 a common share, in 1939.

Artloom Corporation

Artloom Corporation, rug manufacturers, reported for fiscal year ended December 28 net profit of $239,548, equal to $1.04 a common share, compared with $248,907, or $1.09 a share, in the preceding year. The company's report disclossed its excess profits taxes for the year amounted to $31,000, compared with $7,000 in the previous period.

Atlas Plywood Corporation

Atlas Plywood Corporation reported for six months ended December 31 net profit of $264,393, equal to $1.60 a common sare, compared with $143,405, or 74 cents in the 1939 period.

Snuff Makers Report Sales Gain in Year

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—Snuff chewers and snuffers are on extinct race? The evidence is to the contrary.

The G. W. Helme Co., one of the biggest snuff manufacturing concerns, today reported its net sales for 1940 amounted to $6,320,693, compared with $6,277,301 in 1939. Increased taxes cut net profits to $1,473,517, equal to $5.15 a share on common stock, from $1,666,645, or $5.96 a share in 1939.

Another important snuff producer, United States Tobacco Co., at the same time reported its 1940 sales at $18,339,202, against $18,283,606. Net profit was $3,977,376, equal to $2.08 a share on common against $3,396,153, or $1.76 a share in 1939.

Executives of snuff companies have explained the product has been able to hold its own in the highly competitive tobacco field because it has been an acceptable substitute for regular "chawin terbacker." Very little of it goes into dainty snuff boxes now to be snuffed into the nostrils as in grandpa's days or earlier.

Foreign Exchange

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—A thrust ahead of 1/20 cent by the Hongkong dollar raised the currency to the year's top price in relation to the United States dollar today.

The Shanghai dollar, which has been under pressure along with the Hongkong unit recently, also improved. The Swiss franc dipped .02 of a cent. The Canadian dollar and pound sterling were unchanged.

Steel Output Sets Record In January

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 11.—January steel production reached a new record high of 6,943,084 net tons of open hearth, Bessemer and electric steel ingots and castings, the American Iron and Steel Institute said today.

In the previous peak month, October, 1940, production totaled 6,643,975 tons.

January output represented a gain of 7 per cent over 6,493,849 in December and 20 per cent compared with 5,768,729 tons in January, 1940.

Last month's production was at the rate of 97.1 per cent of capacity, against 94.1 per cent in December and 83.4 per cent a year ago.

The institute said the January report was the first monthly statement to include steel produced in electric furnaces as well as steel for castings produced by any process. Figures since January, 1927, have been revised to correspond with current reports.

Philip Morris Advises SEC Of Stock Issue

By the Associated Press

Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., Inc., New York, advised the Securities Commission yesterday that it intended to issue 148,991 shares of cumulative preferred stock, $100 par value. Most of the proceeds will be used to defray bank loans.

The registration statement also covered the issuance of subscription warrants, which would permit holders of the company's common stock to purchase one share of the new preferred for each six shares of common owned. Any of the new stock not taken by stockholders will be offered publicly through underwriters headed by Lehman Bros., New York.

The company said that it intended to use $11,750,000 to repay bank loans; $1,135,000 for the construction of a new building at Richmond, Va., and $312,500 to loan to Ecusta Paper Corporation.

Labels Infringed, Distiller Charges

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 11 (AP).—The Medley Distilling Co., of Owensboro, Ky., and five individuals are accused in a suit in Federal district court of trade-mark infringement and unfair competition.

The plaintiff, Fleischmann Distilling Corporation, of New York, seeks judgment for a percentage of profits; damages, and an injunction against use of certain labels, letterheads and advertising matter.

The Fleischmann company contends that when it bought the Daviess Distilling Co. last May the defendants agreed they would not use the name "Medley" in future advertising or labels.

The five defendants—R. Wathen Medley, George E. Medley 3d, Nellie Wathen Medley, John A. Medley and Ben F. Medley 2d—formed the Medley Distilling Co. last December.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 11 (AP).—Under persistent liquidation and stop loss selling, wheat futures today plumbed new lows in a steadily declining market which closed as much as 1¾ cents lower than Monday. It was the third successive day of lower trends and prices were off about 3 cents since last Friday. All other commodities dipped with wheat.

The May wheat contract here finished at the lowest level since last September, while the new crop deliveries, July and September, closed at new lows for the season both here and at Kansas City. Prices for the latter contracts were more than 21 cents under quotations of a year ago.

Wheat finished 1¼-1¾ cents lower than the previous close: May, 80-79⅞; July, 74¼-74⅛; September, 74⅛-74⅜; corn was ¼-⅜ off; May, 60⅞-61; July, 60¾-60⅝; oats unchanged to ¼ down; soybeans, 1⅜-1¾ lower; rye, ⅝-1⅛ off, and lard declined 7½ cents.

Pressure was prompted partly by weakness at Minneapolis and lower trends in the stock market. The close at Minneapolis was 1¼-1⅜ lower; Kansas City finished 1½-1⅞ off, and Winnipeg lost ¾ cent.

The trade was plagued by uncertainties over the foreign situation, taxation and possible changes in the Federal farm aid program, none of which inspired much confidence in the buying side.

Heavy Selling at Close Depresses Stocks; 'War' Issues Lead Drop to New 1941 Lows

New York, Feb. 11.—A wave of selling just before the close today pushed the stock market down for numerous losses of 1 to more than 2 points.

Many shares traded at the lowest prices recorded in the new year as the decline gathered speed in the final half hour of dealings. Most of the day prices had an easier tendency but offerings were light.

The late flurry followed the appearance on financial tickers of the first excerpts from the testimony of Wendell L. Willkie on the lend-lease bill before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, proposing additional destroyers be turned over to England. Whether this influenced the drop was difficult to determine.

Signs the Balkan situation might be coming to a boil had been cited in brokerage circles as the main immediate explanation for the droopy appearance of the market. Reports German forces were moving into Bulgaria intensified expectations in financial quarters of an impending military maneuver of importance in Europe, making speculators cautious about embarking on commitments until they had opportunity to judge the significance of the brewing storm abroad.

Moreover, traders were inclined to sell on the traditional closing of accounts before a holiday. Security exchanges will recess tomorrow for Lincoln's birthday.

There was no change in the tenor of business reports. Expanding employment and factory payrolls, record output in the heavy industries and prospects of sustained activity at high levels while defense spending is on the upgrade made a strong contrast with the poor performance of speculative markets.

Bethlehem Steel closed at 80, off 2¼; United States Steel at 61, down 1¾; Phelps Dodge at 28¼, off 1½; Great Northern preferred at 24¼, off 1¾; International Harvester at 48½, down 1½, and du Pont at 146½, down 1¾.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks dropped .6 to 41.6, duplicating the 1941 low touched February 3. Transactions increased to 413,420 shares compared with 294,610 yesterday.

Notable was weakness in some "war" stocks, such as Bethlehem and duPont, which reinforced other indications that market attention was focused on the military maneuvers.

Ending fractions to more than a point down in the Curb list were Aluminum of America, American Cyanamid "B," Creole Petroleum, Jones & Laughton Steel and Bell Aircraft. Monarch Machine Tool rose 2⅜ and Pennsylvania Salt 5, the latter on a small transaction. Turnover increased to 141,000 shares from 110,000 yesterday.

Chicago wheat skidded for a final loss of 1¼ to 1¾ cents a bushel. Corn was down ¼ to ⅜. Cotton futures finished unchanged to 20 cents a bale down. Corporate bonds retreated with stocks.

Wheeling Steel Plans $36,000,000 Issue

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—Financial circles heard today Wheeling Steel Corp. soon would file with the Securities & Exchange Commission a statement covering a proposed issue of $36,000,000 bonds and several notes.

Proceeds would be used to retire the company's outstanding 4½ per cent bonds, due in 1966.

Cotton Futures

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—Cotton futures slipped back to a closing range unchanged to 4 points lower today after a fast morning run-up on reports Washington planned action to offset the unfavorable effects of war on cotton markets.

With the list up an outside of 9 points, Southern selling and local profit taking caused a pronounced reaction. Final prices were the lows for the session.

The market was maintained around the previous close for a time on trade support encouraged by an estimate of record breaking January consumption of raw cotton.

Food Storage Heaviest in Five Years

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that with the exception of butter and eggs, cold storage holdings of major foods February 1 were larger than the average for that date during the last five years.

Stocks of frozen and cured meats were said to have increased 82,500,000 pounds in January. Totaling 952,538,000 pounds on February 1, they included 741,108,000 pounds of pork, 108,637,000 pounds of beef and 4,689,000 pounds of lamb and mutton.

Meat stocks averaged 763,280,000 pounds during the 5-year period and totaled 775,268,000 on February 1 last year.

Stocks of lard increased sharply during the past year, the department said. They totaled 300,506,000 pounds on February 1, compared with 202,175,000 last year and a 5-year average of 138,390,000 pounds.

Other storage holdings on February 1 this year, last year and the five-year average, respectively, included:

Apples, 22,932,000 boxes, 20,306,000 and 21,865,000; creamery butter, 29,894,000 pounds, 29,189,000 and 47,198,000; cheese, 123,266,000 pounds, 94,295,000 and 97,441,000; eggs, 1,851,000 cases, 1,664,000 and 1,947,000, and poultry, 191,648,000 pounds, 166,962,000 and 139,547,000.

Transamerica Stockholder Files Accounting Suit

Los Angeles, Feb. 11 (AP).—Harold Abrams, of New York, filed a stockholder's suit in Federal Court today, demanding an accounting of profits and losses for the last ten years of the Transamerica Corporation.

Abrams named as defendants A. P. Giannini, L. M. Giannini, J. Russ Avery and other officers of the corporation and its subsidiaries, and the Western States Corporation, Pacific Coast Mortgage Co., Associated American Distributors, Panama Bankamerica Co., Transamerica Service Corporation and Intercoast Trading Corporation.

Abrams complained that A. P. Giannini "improperly withdrew $608,000 from a special fund established for Transamerica in 1930 and 1931, and that from 1932 to 1938 the board of directors permitted him to withdraw an additional $778,470."

Sugar Futures

New York, Feb. 11 (AP).—Late activity and firm prices for domestic sugar futures today mirrored similar firmness and fast trade in the spot raw market. Futures closed 1 to 2 points higher on sales of 19,200 tons.

Hedging operations and increased offerings cut into early gains in world futures after morning demand was stimulated by indications of a speed-up in progress toward a United States sugar loan to Cuba. Final prices were ½ to 1 up on turnover of 9,100 tons: March, .68½ bid; May, .71½ bid.

Further Boost In Wool Prices Is Anticipated

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department predicted yesterday that wool prices would be higher in the spring and summer than a year ago because of prospects for increased mill consumption for civilian and military demands.

The United States average price of wool received by farmers was said to have been 31.3 cents a pound on January 15, compared with 28.1 cents on the corresponding date in 1940.

Another price supporting factor, the department said, was an indication that the carry-over of wool into the new season, which begins April 1, may be the smallest in recent years.

The department said, however, that wool supplies available for shipment from foreign countries to the United States were relatively large.

Imports of apparel wool for consumption in 1940 were said to have totaled 223,000,000 pounds, or 125,000,000 pounds larger than in 1939 and the largest since 1923.

The department said demand was good in South American wool markets at this time. Supplies of fine wools in Uruguay were reported to be practically exhausted by the end of January.

United States buyers continued to purchase most of the wool sold in the southern American markets.

Terps Meet Western Md.; TarheelsNext

Old Liners Play Host To North Carolina Saturday; Catholic U. Loses Light Heavy

Maryland University's boxing team steps up to a bit of double time in ring activity this week by taking on Western Maryland tonight at Westminster and North Carolina Saturday at College Park, but the Terps have nothing on Catholic University's Coach Eddie LaFond.

Fearless Edward, who can whip up a tear of self-pity in nothing flat, has real reason for turning on the waterworks today, for misfortune yesterday fired a second broadside into the undefeated ranks of the fighting Cardinals.

Leo Houck, jr., son of Penn State's famed boxing coach, yesterday became the second casualty of the week when he fell victim to influenza and was ordered to the university infirmary.

This leaves Brother LaFond with the task of finding substitutes for his ace light heavyweight and for Leo Gaffney, the promising little 135-pounder who broke a hand in the matches with Maryland last week.

Asks for Volunteers

LaFond, whose latest woes are brought on by the prospect of facing Southwestern Louisiana Institute Saturday night at Brookland, yesterday issued a call for volunteers but his face was longer than the road to Mandalay yesterday as he conducted a light workout.

Ken Blackbird, who like the two Leo's, is a sophomore, is expected to fill in for Houck in the 175-pound snot, but the lightweight division is still a toss-up. Blackbird's only previous experience as a boxer has been in the intra-murals, but it wouldn't be surprising to see him come through with flying colors—what with LaFond's "luck" at suddenly unearthing sensations.

Meanwhile, there's a more cheerful outlook at College Park, where Coach Mike Lombardo is giving his line-up another juggling in an effort to get back into the winning division tonight in Westminster.

Ran Into Trouble

After defeating South Carolina and the Coast Guard, the Terps ran into trouble against Virginia, lost their 165-pounder, George Pyles, and then lost a second match to C. U. Saturday night.

Pyles will be back in shape for tonight's battle against the Green Terror battlers, and Lombardo probably will replace Bob Miller, sophomore southpaw, with Norman Hathaway, who onl- recently returned to the squad in the 155-pound division.

Lombardo is no end delighted over the debut of Bill Holbrook, a junior and a southpaw, who defeated the Cards' Gaffney Saturday night. Lombardo will rely on Judson Lincoln in the 120-pound division; Charley Dorr, 127; Hotsy Alperstein, 145; Herb Gunther, 175, and Leonard Rodman in the heavyweight class.

Western Maryland's varsity will have Hudson, 120 pounds; Rouse, 127; Schubert, 135; Vincent, 145; Bachman, 155; Baker, 165; Pirie, 175, and Walls, heavyweight.

Expect 2 Victories

Maryland expects a double victory tonight in Westminster, for there'll be a freshman boxing preliminary, but Saturday night on the "All-University Night" show in Ritchie Coliseum Lombardo expects trouble.

North Carolina, unbeaten in three matches, will present two Southern Conference champions in Bob Farris, 1940 155-pound champion now fighting as a 145-pounder, and Eldon (Red) Sanders, 165-pound champion. What's more, the Tarheels have last year's heavyweight runner-up, Gates Kimball, 195-pound football tackle, who lost by a whisker after winning six straight college bouts.

HAILEY.

Terp Eleven Starts Spring Drills Monday

Spring football practice will be inaugurated Monday at the University of Maryland, it was announced yesterday. It is planned to last five weeks. Bulk of the candidates will be frosh and members of the 1940 junior varsity.

Earl Knapp Rolls Record Set of 446

A record was broken last night in the American League at Silver Spring when Earl Knapp, Finn's Service Station, followed a 168 high game with a splendid 446 set which added 13 pins to the old high mark rolled by Jack Wolstenholme.

Knapp, a 116-average man, had 6 strikes and 9 spares in the string and is, incidentally, a "wrong-foot" bowler, in that he has his right foot forward when letting loose of the ball. Wright Jewelers had 663 for top game with 1,830 sticks earning top set for Willis Builders. Hugh Arbaugh, Silver Spring owner, won a free entry in the Franklin Open in Baltimore with a 393 set. Harry Strickler, Wolfe Motor, had near highs of 166-400, while Jack Fenton rolled a 396 set.

Records fell last night in the Maryland-D. C. Ladies' League at Silver Spring. The first one was when Inez Rhine, Shaffer Flower Shop, upped the previous individual game record by 8 sticks, rolling 167 in her fine effort which she followed with the top set of 390 only to see Anna Daut, a teammate, go her one stick better to take the honors. The high-flying Shaffer girls totaled 661-1,768 to set new records, adding 63 pins to the previous high for games and 104 to the set mark. Bergmann's Laundry held the old highs of 596, 1,664. Thelma Simmers rolled a third-high individual game of 154 and followed it with a splendid 371 set.

Grace Rinker, Keller Memorial, had high game of 125 in the Lutheran Church Ladies' League and led her girls to high team game of 484 at Arcadia. Gladys Broeker, Zion, won the top individual set with 316. Reformation was best team for set, their 1,381 leading the others.

The four-man teams of the Boy Scouts of America at Northeast Temple were paced by Symanoskie and Pettis, who tied for top game with 122 each, Pettis going on to take the set with a 337 count. The Suckers won high game with a 423 total while 1,227 won the set for the Travelers.

L. Henry, Parcel Post, was the best Letter Carrier in their play last night at Brookland Recreation, for his 148 game and 386 set topped all individual efforts. The Main Office boys won quintet highs with 586 and 1,644. Central and Ben Franklin took all three from the Wildcats and Woodridge Lions, respectively.

Elmer Wesley, Service Station, was top man in the Diamond Cab play at Brookland, his 153 game and 375 set winning individual honors. Leatherman, Shoreham, was runner-up for set with 355, which sparked his team to highs of 606 and 1,677. Amoco and Hotels scored sweeps over Restaurant, the top team, and Mount Pleasant, respectively. Hotels is in second place.

"Cap" Colburn, Procurement, and Al Higgs, Royal No. 1, paced the Office Appliance League at the Ice Palace, the former with a 139 top game while the latter won the set with a 393 count. Monroe had 581 for best team game while Royal No. 1 had highest set with 1,652. IBM No. 2 and Royal No. 1 top the league, being tied with 40-20 each, with A. B. Dick the runner-up.

Woodward and Ed Nash along with the other members of the Griffin's Grill quintet conspired to take all the highs in the Chevy Chase Commercial play at the Ice Palace. Woodward's high game of 162 and Nash's splendid 425 set were the needed sparks to inspire the teams of highs of 622 and 1,773. The Ramblers top the circuit, being one game in front of the Royal Tavern boys.

G. U. Skaters Face Temple 'Grid Team'

Georgetown University's ice hockey team, now accredited, but not financially supported by the school, opens its season here Saturday and from all appearances the Hoyas are going to bump into Temple's 1940 football team in disguise.

Led by Halfback Jim Powers, who raced 105 yards against Michigan State and 102 yards against Florida, the Owls' football icemen will include George Sutch and Al Juralewicz, halfbacks; Larry Brahm, center; Stan Batinski and Don Serino, guards, and Frank Molster, end.

Georgetown's eleven walloped Temple, 20-0, in football, but the Hoyas six is not expecting history to repeat on the rink, for Temple will come here with seven games under its belt and figures to deal the hosts a lacing. The Owls have only won two of the seven, but in the second of two matches with strong Penn State they proved their strength by holding the Lions to a 5-3 count. This was their second loss to Penn State. They have also been beaten by Penn and Lehigh and, they hold decisions over St. Joseph's, of Philadelphia (6-0), and Drexel.

Regal Beats FBI Five; Pericles Wins

Regal Clothiers, with Acky Viana scoring 15 points, last night defeated FBI, 41-38, in the feature game of competition in the D. C. Recreation Department Basketball League.

In other games, Sons of Pericles defeated Capital City A. Z. A., 24-15, Bliss Electrical School beat Harvesters, 33-26, Finnish-Americans turned back Labor Department, 29-18, Nebraska A. C. edged out Maritime, 36-33, Delaware & Hudson trimmed Census, 33-24, Air Duct outpointed Silents A. A., 18-14, Ramblers trounced Ramblers, 34-21.

Census Farmers nosed out Eckington, 26-22, Greyhounds swamped Department of Justice, 35-10, Washington Loan & Trust whipped F. D. I. C., 23-12, Hot Shoppes decisioned Selective Service, 30-23 and A. G. O. doubled the score on A. G. O., 26-13.

McDowell Kayoed

Little Chance For Terps at Chapel Hill

Personnel of the weakest Maryland team in years to compete in the annual Southern Conference indoor track and field games was revealed yesterday. Without Joe Murphy, the conference sprint champion, and Gene Ochsenreiter, one of the circuit's best middle-distance men, the Terps are not figured to be a contender for the team title in the event at Chapel Hill February 22.

Murphy is resting from the football season and will not don his spikes until the spring, while Ochsenreiter passed up indoor track to play basketball.

Maryland's probable entries in the conference meet: 70 yards—Bill Tilley, Lou Chacos and Vernon Miller; 440, Miller and Tom Devlin; 880, Bob Condon, Randall Cronin and Dave Harry; 1 mile, Tommy Fields; 2 miles, Stan Kihn; shotput, Luther Conrad and Reginald Vincent; broad jump, Tilley; mile relay team, four from among Condon, Cronin, Miller, Devlin, Chacos and Fields.

Fields, one of the best milers and two milers in the South and East, will be the Terps' strongest individual entry.

Fields will be Maryland's only entry in the N. Y. A. C. games Saturday at Madison Square Garden. He will compete in the two-mile handicap, and is accorded a fine chance of finishing among the first three. Last week in New York Fields ripped off a 4:16 mile in anchoring Maryland's medley relay team to second place behind Indiana's great quartet, anchored by Campbell who overhauled Fields in the stretch.

Meantime, Georgetown announced a change in the lineup of its one-mile relay team for the N. Y. A. C. meet. Charley Newmeyer is to return to the No. 1 position, replacing Pete McAtee. His teammates, in order, will be Charley Williams, Ken Lyden and Mort Alnwick.

Bloomfield, Gray Rassle Tomorrow

Another new face, Jack Bloomfield, of Little Rock, Ark., will haul his 230-pound frame into Turner's Arena tomorrow night to be unveiled in a 30-minute wrestling match against Carl Gray, of Toledo. The headliners on the card are The Green Hornet, "mysterious" masked grappler, and Erpie Dusek, the durable Nebraskan, who, it is alleged, ran out on the masked man in a match a few weeks ago.

Bloomfield has done considerable wrestling on the Pacific Coast and midwest. He has the stamp of approval of such promoters as the Darro brothers, Lou and Jack, of Los Angeles, and Paul Bowser, of Boston.

Patsy Miller, lariat-tossing Idaho cowgirl, who claims she has a new hold known as the "lariat," a takeoff on Nanjo Singh's "Cobra Clutch," will make her bow against Gladys Gilliam, the little blonde who almost upset Champion Mildred Burke here a few weeks ago. Miss Burke will meet the winner.

Card Youngsters Nosed Out, 42-40

Catholic University's yearling basketball club was the victim of a 42-40 decision in favor of Bolling Field last night as the winners' Willis registered 18 points.

WE'RE NOT GETTING ANYWHERE IN PICTURES! WE NEED MONEY AND IT'S AN OPPORTUNITY TO DO SOMETHING FOR MY COUNTRY!
I DROPPED IN ON MY OLD PROFESSOR, MAJOR WILK! THE COLLEGE HAS GIVEN HIM A LEAVE OF ABSENCE SO HE CAN SERVE WITH THE ARMY!
AND IS MRS. WILK HERE WITH HER HUSBAND?
I'M GLAD NOTHING SEPARATES US LIKE THAT!!

MR. AND MRS. — This Goes On Forever — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

WELL, AND WHAT WOULD YOU LIKE?
YOU OUGHT TO KNOW AFTER ALL THESE YEARS
YES, BUT GOSH! I'M ONLY ASKING A CIVIL QUESTION. CAN'T YOU ANSWER?
I WANT A NICE TENDER PIECE, OF COURSE
HERE'S A NICE PIECE, RIGHT NEXT THE BONE. GOT A LITTLE FAT, TOO
YOU KNOW I DON'T CARE FOR THAT PIECE. STOP! I'LL CUT IT MYSELF
THERE! THAT'S WHAT I WANT. NOT THAT SCRAWNY LITTLE END
I WAS GIVING YOU THE BEST PIECE ON THE PLATE! HEREAFTER YOU'LL DO THE CARVING

Today being Lincoln's Birthday, it is fitting and proper that the man who knows more about Lincoln than anyone else in the world—and that's saying an awful lot, because an awful lot of people know an awful lot about Lincoln—should be heard on the radio paying tribute to one of the Nation's greatest Presidents.

That's Carl Sandburg, the noted biographer and poet, whose recent four-volume work on Lincoln is accepted as the most comprehensive personal history of the many done on the Great Emancipator. Mr. Sandburg speaks over WJSV and the Columbia network from 5:30 to 5:45 p. m.

He addresses the Nation from the American Legion ceremonies at the Lincoln Tomb in Springfield, Ill., and will compare the problems of Lincoln during the eventful period preceding the outbreak of the War Between the States with those now confronting President Roosevelt.

Also in keeping with the patriotic tone of the holiday, Senator, Millard E. Tydings is to be heard over WJSV and C. B. S. at 10:15 p. m., speaking on "Anti-American Activities." Senator Tydings is giving his address under the auspices of the United States Flag Association which today is releasing "The Declaration of Independence of Today," a statement intended as the modern American's creed in these troublous times.

OPM Strives To Spur Output Of Magnesium

Expasion of domestic magnesium producing facilities to many times their present size, reaching a point which will meet all presently scheduled military requirements of the vital metal, is expected to be announced in the near future by the Office of Production Management.

It was learned yesterday that the OPM had perfected plans for having new plants built, some of which will come into production within the next month and the remainder following throughout the year.

Part of the new construction is to be privately financed, it was said, and part is to be built with funds provided by the Defense Plant Corporation, a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Pending completion of the new facilities, it is believed that the OPM priorities division will soon institute measures to insure deliveries of all available supplies for military uses. The light metal, which presents certain technical difficulties in processing and treatment, is principally used in aircraft production, munitions and incendiary bombs.

Similar institution of preferential treatment is also expected very soon on deliveries of magnesium's sister metal, aluminum.

The shortage in aluminum is admittedly acute, arising not from inadequacy of bauxite ore but rather from processing and refining equipment.

The priorities division also acted yesterday to meet a "temporary tightness" in the delivery of structural steel shapes needed for defense construction, particularly in the building of new aircraft, machine tools and other plants and of military cantonments.

Representatives of major steel producers have met with Samuel S. Stratton, general assistant director of the priorities minerals and metals section and agreed to make a greater effort to give defense orders preferential treatment, according to an announcement of the priorities director, E. R. Stettinius, jr.

The steel officials, who will carry out the priorities on a voluntary and informal basis, said that although their mills were operating at near capacity, they expected that most defense orders for shapes would be on their books by early summer. This would indicate, Stettinius said, "a tapering off of such orders after that time and an easing of the situation."

The bottleneck, it was learned from Stratton, does not lie with the fabricators of finished shapes, but rather with the schedules of the rolling mills.

3 Former Austin Aides Lead Field For Census Chief

Speculation on the successor to William Lane Austin, who retired last week as director of the Census Bureau, centered yesterday on three of his former subordinates, although names of almost a dozen candidates have been mentioned.

Most active was the candidacy of Dr. Virgil D. Reed, assistant director of the bureau, who shouldered major responsibilities during last year's decennial population count. Dr. Reed is said to be well regarded by Commerce Secretary Jesse H. Jones.

Others prominently mentioned are J. C. Capt, Austin's executive assistant, who was brought to the bureau by former Secretary Harry M. Hopkins to handle the appointment of census field officials during the 1940 survey, and Dr. H. L. Dunn, head of the bureau's vital statistics unit.

Also mentioned are Corrington Gill, economist and statistician now with the Works Projects Administration; Dr. Stuart A. Rice, one-time assistant director of the Consus Bureau and now in the Executive Office, and Isador Lubin, principal assistant to Sidney Hillman, associate director general of the Office of Production Management.

Argentina to Sell 25,000-Ton Cotton Surplus to Spain

Buenos Aires, Feb. 11 (AP).—Argentina has wiped out her cotton surplus by agreeing to sell 25,000 tons to Spain, Agriculture Minister Daniel Amadeo y Videla said today.

Othere sources close to the government asserted Argentina required that Spain's payment of $4,500,000 for the cotton be made in United States dollars, rather than in pesetas or through barter.

The agriculture minister said Spain agreed to pay over a three-year period.

Agreements for shipment to Spain also of 500,000 tons of wheat and 1,500 tons of canned and other meats are in "process of negotiation but too far away to talk about yet," he added.

Winant Talks to Hull; To Wait, See Hopkins

Copyright by New York Times

John G. Winant held his first conference today with Secretary of State Cordell Hull since being confirmed as Ambassador to Great Britain. He expects to leave for his post next week by clipper plane.

Winant said he would go later this week to Montreal, where he will wind up his duties as director of the International Labor Office. He will return here for further conferences. He is expected to see Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador, and Harry Hopkins, who is now en route from England to this country.

Gaucho Rests His Weary Pony For Presentation to Roosevelt

"Argentino" had nearly reached the end of the trail from the windy pampas of the Argentine to the White House of the United States yesterday.

But he was a very, very tired horse, according to his master, Marcellino Soule, the gaucho-polo player who rode him during the 2½-year trip to this country.

Soule is enthusiastic on the subject of Pan-American amity and he calls President Roosevelt a "Muy gran' hombre" (very great man), so he thinks it only fitting that he should present Argentino to the Chief Executive.

Monday he had an interview with Argentine Embassy officials and opened negotiations regarding presentation of the animal to Mr. Roosevelt. That will take place when the beast is in good high-stepping shape.

Now Argentino is in the unfamiliar surroundings of a Washington stable, being fed and curried, and generally recuperating from that tired feeling he acquired plowing through 5-foot Andean snows and sweltering in the heat of equatorial marshes.

For himself, also, Soule has big plans, he declared in an interview at 1225 Clifton Street Northwest, yesterday.

He wants to drive an American automobile back to Argentina over a new highway he mapped out in his mind as he jogged over a direct but trackless route to this country.

He has drawn a map of his trip with distances, riding and driving conditions and other data, all "exacto."

Senor Soule wants to strike out on the new highway, then tour South America, faster this time, in his car as a sort of unofficial good neighbor exponent.

Still in the tall boots and baggy breeches of the pampas, the gaucho said that some Washingtonians were a little amazed at the costume, but very polite.

Big Waves Breach Alameda Seawall, Flooding City

Alameda, Calif., Feb. 11 (AP).—Giant breakers, curling before a 42-mile wind, ripped away large sections of the seawall on the San Francisco Bay front today and flooded several districts from which householders were rescued by boats.

The Encinal Yacht Club, extending into the bay on the southern shore, was badly damaged. The breach in the seawall poured water six feet deep into the Delmar Avenue area. Boats were used to rescue women and children.

In downtown Oakland a 20-foot flagpole toppled from the fifth floor of the Odd Fellows Temple and crashed to the street.

The wind pounded the high tide over the seawall opposite the Oakland airport, flooding half the airfield with three feet of water. Only one runway was clear for planes.
